

English Rogue:

Continued in the Life of

MERITON LATROON,

AND OTHER

EXTRAVAGANTS:

Comprehending the most Eminent

CHEATS

OF

BOTH SEXES.

The Third Part.

With the Illustration of Pictures to every Chapter.

LONDON,

Printed by Anne Johnson for Fran. Kirkman, and are to be fold at his Shop in Fan-Church Street over against the Sign of the Robin Hood neer Algare. 1674.

MERTIONLÂTROOM,

· dT

The Phild Part.

With a Hudgation of Figures to ever

LOW ON,

need by Anne Jeknfon for Fran. Kirkman, and are to be fall as his Snop in Han-Church Shrowover as said the Sign of the Roth Population of the Roth

The Preface

Gentlemen !

IN the first impression of this third Part, a large and as I thought a sufficient Apologie was made, for the Writing and publishing thereof. Wherefore I shall not enlarge at this time, enely tell you that you have here laid before you, a large Catalogue of all forts of netorious Roqueries ; your own consciences may forve as a finger in the Margin pointing directly to the Guilt with which you are principally concern'd; to deal plainly with you. had I lived in a less wicked Are than this is, this Book had ne're been extant; it was the vicious practices of thefe corrupted tomes, that gave it matter and form, life and being : bad the evil inclinations of men extended no further, then to fome wagish exemptions, I should bave been filens; but fince Villany improves it felf daily, notwithflanding the many lamentable examples monthly attending the commission thereof. I thought good to erect this Monument of their shame and wickedness, which may ferve instead of a continual Sessions, an everlasting Tyburn, to firight thefe wile miscreants from their enormons practices: I know not with what faces they can perpetrate that again, which is now so notoriously laid opon to theview of the whole world; the beafliness of their debancheries flinking above ground. But I have heard some men fay, that the writing of this is not the probable way of reducing but increasing the number of such per-Jons whose enormities I have just cause to complain of : I would not have you to be forash in your Judgments, as uncharitably to believe me to be a Seminary of Vice, and that I have credted a Nursery for its propogation, for I muf affure you I am of better principles, and that no prohe what forver find buy out my taterest in a good confrience. What I have done is well intended, and is the product of painful Experience, Travel, and Expence; and if you will have a little patience, you shall find (in the winding up of the bottom by the conclusion of this Story, in a fifth and laft Part, which is very suddenly intend. ed) that no crime shall go unpunished, no particular Perfon who bath been quilty of thefe victors Extravagancies but shall have a punishment susable to their crimes : and then I hope all persons who make use of this Book to pracsice debancherses, will be induced to forbear and decline their wickedness, left a just Judgment overtake them, as they will find it hath done thefe Extravagants. This is the true defign and end of this Book in general, and whoever makes any other ufe or Conftruction, do's greatly a bufe the real and true intents of their boneft Manitor.

The Prefece

Fra. Kirlanas.

老面面面。全面面面面面面面面面面面面面

THE

ENGLISH ROGUE

Continued in the Life of

Meriton Latroon,

AND OTHER

EXTRAVAGANTS.

PART. 111.

CHAP. L

dies inc

Mrs. Dorothy rebearfes how the chairs her Lavers ; who being with Child, made all that hades do with her contribute to her expence in lying in, and recompence her left honour. She goes into the Country to lay her great Belly; in her Journey the falls into the acquaintance of a crafty Old Woman (pliase a Procurer.)

R.S. Darothy having thus given me an account of her first Adventure, I received much fatishadion in the Relation; and told her that I found he was much improved in cunning since my hell account of the province of the provi that I have erected a Nursery for its propogation, for I must affure you I am of bester principles, and that no prohe what forver fall buy out my interest in a good confrience. What I have done is well intended, and is the product of painful Experience, Travel, and Expence; and if you will have a little patience, you shall find (in the winding up of the bottom by the conclusion of this Story, in a fifth and last Part, which is very suddenly intended) that no crime find go unpunished, no particular Perfon who hath been quilty of thefe victions Extravagancies but shall have a punishment sustable to their crimes : and then I hope all persons who make use of this Book to practice debaucherses, will be induced to forbear and decline their wickedness, test a just Judgment overtake them, as they will find it bath done thele Extravagants. This is the true defign and end of this Book in general, and whoever makes any other wie or Conftruction, de's greatly a bufe the real and true intents of their boneft Meniter.

The Preface

Fra. Kirlaman.

THI

esassociates edge

THE

ENGLISH ROGUE:

Continued in the Life of

Meriton Latroon,

AND OTHER

EXTRAVAGANTS.

PART. 111.

CHAP. L

Mrs. Dorothy rehearfes how she cheats her Lovers; who being wish Child, made all that had to do with her contribute to her expence in lying in, and recompence her lost honour. She goes into the Country to lay her great Belly; in her Journey she falls into the acquaintance of a crafty Old Woman (alias: a Procurer.)

RS. Derothy having thus given me an account of her first Adventure, I received much satisfaction in the Relation; and told her that I found be was much improved in cunning since my first acquaintance quaintance with her: for I had enjoyed her without much advantage to her self, for she had a great Belly, hi with little profit, not knowing who was, or were to find a Father: whereas now she had her choice of it three, and money enough to boot whereby to pur. fo chase a handsome provision for her self and child. Yes, so reply'd she, I did not intend to be caught again; for of then it would have been my own fault, you having ex. no perienced me in the fallacies of your Sex; and there-the fore, as I told you, I made my bargain withall my for three Friends as politically as I could; and upon se-the cond thoughts, altered somewhat of the terms I had M formerly agreed upon : for whereas my first Custo-ha mer had given me twenty pounds in hand, to provide the me with necessaries during my time of lying in, and for had agreed to provide for the Child, when it should be it born : I told him I had provided a Nurse for it a lready w that was willing to take all the charge, and discharge him from any further trouble, upon payment of four-ty pounds more; to this he easily consented, and gave St Bond in to me, in the name of a Friend of mine, whom he I told him was the Party that would make provision at for the Child.

Thus did I settle matters with the first: and with the second I continued my bargain, of having twenty from pounds down, and slity pounds more at the birth of the Child. And my Masters Brother and I continued our old bargain of the like sum, of twenty pounds down, and sitty pounds more, to be paid at 6 moneths, neither did I discontinue my familiarities with any of them; for I managed my affairs so cunningly, that some nights I lay with my first Customer without the knowledge of my Master's Brother, from whom I endeavoured only to conceal it, and not from my second for he, as I told you, was privy to my dealings with the sim second second ly, him, and by that means only first gained his ends upto on me: somtimes I lay with my second Constomer, but of it was with some regret, for I had the least affection for him of the three; but now he since he had bled so, some of his yellow peices, and give me what I desired for of him, I could not well refuse him his desires of me, neither was he so shy as formerly; for he valued not though my Masters Brother sometimes discovered us, for he knew that our dealings were not concealed from se, him, and therefore he was the bolder. But with my ad Masters Brother I was more free than ever; he having as much again for his money as either of ide the other, neither was it perceived by either of them; and for he having the command of the house, so ordered be it that my Lodging was nearest to his; and therefore dy we had the more conveniency to come at one another;

ge We drave this trade for some Moneths, till in the ar- end my Mafter's Brother gaining the good will of his we Sweet-heart, he was married to her, and then he for om fome time fell off. But he had not lain with his Wife on above a fortnight, but he became weary of her embraces, and renewed his love again to me; I at first ith withflood him, and used Arguments to diffwade him of told me he found but little pleasure in the cold emned braces of his Wife; neither had he married her, but nds for her Estate. which was considerable; many other hs. Arguments he used to perswade me, who was not altogether unwilling; and fo we again renewed our former pleasure : but we were necessitated to be very the private, and only now and then to have a private en meeting in the day time, for he was to accompany his on Wife in the Night. But as privately, and craftily as we carried our felves, we were at length discovered; for my second Customer, after he had paid for his pleafure pleafure, was more defirous to have his penny-worth out of me, and still-importuned me to interviews for often, that I much grumbled at him; and he being weary Fox, still dogg'd and watch'd me, and that f often, that at length he found me and my Masten Brother in our strict embraces; he being both gla and angry, without any [by your leave] entered the Room where we were (the door being only carelet ly put to) and without any words approaching the Bed whereon we lay, drew the Curtains, and faid well, Mafter John (for fo was his name) that fawo. which is good for the Goose, I hope will be good for the Gander : self do, self have; I hope, Sir, since you have put in for your share in the pleasure, you will be share, and share like in the charge. Well, replyed Mr. John, it shall be even as honest Mrs. Dorothy will have it; and thereupon removed, and fitting upon the Bed, I'beg in to give him bad words, calling him je alou Coxcomb, and he sgain flew at me, telling me that was infatiate, and that twenty would not ferve my turn ; and that now he found the reason of my flight ing him, for Mr. John; but if we would not do him in Justice, he would be revenged on us both: to that Mr. John replyed, asking him what he would have? woold, faid he, have my money, and my Bond again; for I fee, and find, there is little reason that I should pay for other mens Leachary; you make me provide for a Child, that, for ought I know, bath twenty Fa & their well faid I wou have bad too much for theis; well, faid I, you have had too much for your money; and if you are grieved, amend your felf; fo I will, faid he, furiously going away out of the Room P He being gone, Mr. John and I fell to consulting, what was to be done in this affair; and after many proposit tions, we at length agreed, that it was most convent ent for me to be gone from my fervice, and to leave Lond

wha

ooli

ent

London, for Come Country Habitation ; left this angred Coxcomb should mischief us, by discovering our practice to Mr. John's Wife, or some elle, that was feworfe: I was willing, and ready to take the wanting, then but I told Mr. John, that moneys would be wanting, but I told Mr. John, that moneys would be wanting, for as affairs to make a handlome provision for me; for as affairs the now stood, there was no expecting any many from the my angred Eustomer; but what should be forced the my angred Customer; but what should be forced from him. That is true, replyed he; but fo foon as is the money is due, for which he hath given you for to pay it; and in the mean time I will furnish you.

you This was that which I aimed at; and I knowing that will he had lately received a large furn of money for his he had lately received a large sum of money for his will be highly pounds down, for which he had given me the fifty pounds down, for which he had given me bond, and being thus provided with moneys, and being thus provided with moneys, and being thus provided with moneys, and making up my pack (which was much improved since my coming) I prepared for my departure. I as yet knew not what Country to retire to, but was resolved not to go back into my own; and therefore consulted with Mr. John about the place; who still hankered after me, resolving I should not go far, but that he might easily viving I should not go far, but that he might easily vifit me; appointed me a place about ten Miles from London: and because he would not be suspected of vide F. going with me, nor of being any wayes privy to my departure, he permitted me to take my Journy without him; he promifing in few dayes to take the opportunity of giving me a visit. no

Thus did I leave his Brothers House; but not so abroptly, but that I had the leave of my Master and Mistress; whom I told, that my Father being sick, had sent for me immediately; and to that end, a Letter was framed by Mr. John, and brought me by a Porter.

Being now Coach'd for my Journy, I in fhort time arrived at the Inn, where I was appointed to flay, till Mr. John should arrive, and make better provision for me; where an Adventure befell me, which is worthy of your hearing: For among the rest of the Travel. lers, there was an Antient Woman, who took great notice of me, still looking towards my Apron, and eying very diligently my belly; which although it was now somewhat greater, being about three Moneths gone with Child; yet I had endeavoured, by busking it down, and using all other means to hide it; but the Old Woman was not so dim-sighted, but she discovered the fraud; and having been a good one her felf in her time, quickly fmelt out the matter; and believed, and gueffed the cause right, as it was; for my thinn Chops, and sharp and whitely looks gave evident restimonies of what disease I was sick of; and looking more throughly upon me, and examining the features of my buxome Countenance, the conjectured right, that some good Fellow had got up my belly at London, and I was going into the County to be light. ned of my burthen : the having a while confidered with her felf, that I might be very useful for her in an affair she had then in hand, was very pleasant with me, defiring my further acquaintance. I was not thye for the matter, but knowing that I had money enough to bear me out in any crofs adventure that might happen, was refolved to fee what the Old Woman meant by her familiarity. She first gave me joy of my great Belly; to which I replyed, the might be mistaken; well, well, faid the it matters not, whether I am or no; but if it be not fo, I wish it were; and methinks it is pity that you hould be fick of any other difeafe; for or-

me

till for thy

rel.

eat

ey-

Vas

ths

ing

the

cofelf

be-

my

VI-

ind

the red

21

11.

red

an ich ye

gh

ıp-

int

at

n;

10;

10

Thave so much skill in Physiognomy, that I can tell that you are of a more Jovial temper than new your countenance shews for, and it is very unfir, that one of your years and complexion should want the pleasures of a fit Bed-fellow; but I suppose you are not ignoof those enjoyments, and have a Husband, with whom you have experienced the fweet of a Married Life Truly, Madam, faid I, you are much mistaken; for I never yet entred into that honourable Estate of Matrimony. Well, that matters not much, replyed this good Old one; but I have mis'd of my aim, if you are ignorant of what I have told you; and although you may have no Husband, yet I believe you have a Friend, who has been dabling with you, and fwel'd you Belly; if it be fo, you are not the only the that is guilty of that pleasing Crime; for I my self have been good in my time; and still have a Colts tooth in my head.

Thus did the Old Dotterel initiate her acquaintance with me; and had well near put me to the bluth. but that I turned my face aside, and gently wip'd it with my Handkerchief; and then I told her the was yery pleafant, and that a little in the extreams, confidering the publickness of the place (there were more Guests in the Room) and our small acquaintance. As for the place, faid the, I must confess, as we are not all one Womans Children, so we ought to be somewhat careful; but I shall make amends for that, by defireing you to withdraw into a more private place; and as for the short time of our acquaintance, I question not, but we shall quickly fet our Horses together, and I hope our present meeting may be advantagious to us both, especially, if it be as I yet expectit. What do you mean, said 1? That is, replplyed the, if you be with Child, and fuch a Gamester as I wish you. I was much much amazed at this Womans confidence ; but howver, the having been to open with me, I refolved to be as free with her : hoping her words might prove true. and that some benefit might be made out of her acquaintance; and therefore advising her to leave that Room, for another more private, the foon obey'd me; and having entred, and causing a good fire, and Wine to be brought, we fat down together, not without my receiving some falutations, and firit embraces from my Antient, but to me new acquaintance. After we had each of us washed away forrow with a Cup of the best Canary, the Old Woman being now more bold than before; again took me in her arms, & laid her hand hard upon my Belly; when it fo fortuned, that at that very instant the Child gave a gentle turn in my Belly; which the quickly felt; and then cryed out, Well, Daughter, you fee I was in the right ; therefore fince I have discovered somewhat, I pray tell me the rest of your condition; and I question not but you will receive much profit by your discovery : I was refolved to be very free with her, and acquaint her with the chiefest of my Adventures; still concealing fo much thereof, as should, or might be convenient to be made known; whereupon I thus began.

Mother (fince you will have it so) I shall make a free confession of my Crime; hoping you will be merciful in the pennance you shall impose; seeing, as you say, I am not the alone guilty party; and thereupon I recounted to her, how that I being born in such a Country, and desirous to see fashions, went up to London, and there happened into a Service; where my Masters Brother falling in love with me, after some Courtship (he promising me marriage) we came to enjoyment; that he, notwithstanding his promise marriad with another; who indeed exceeded mein

Fortune

И

e

e,

C-

at 1

ne

17 m ve

of

re

er

at ny

at,

he ou vas

ner

gni

10 ke

be

8.

re-

in up

ere rer

me

nife

ein

ung

Fortune, as I her in beauty; but my sweet heart soon after marriage came to me, and repented of his bargain; but fince that was past could not be remedied, I was forced to be contented; and indeed, I having a great love for him, permitted him still to lye with me, that in the end, I was with Child by him; and then we consulting what was most necessary to be done, it was at length concluded, that I should leave my service, and retire into the Country, till I were rid of my great Belly; and to that end and purpose, I was now tome into the Country, expecting him in short time to follow me. Thus did I give her a short, though somewhat true, account of my Fortunes; and when

I had done, the thus replyed.

Well, Daughter, fince your condition is as I judgedir, and indeed hop'd it to be; I shall play the Chymift, and extract Golden Fortunes to you out of your own desperate misfortunes; for I doubt, as your Lover hath once been false to you, so he may prove the fecond time; and now he hath fent you a journey, he may leave you to shift for your felf; and to look for another Fat er for your Child. But, Daughter, (continued the)if you will be rul'd by me, you shall not only have a rich Father, but a great fortune for your Child: and perhaps, so much ready money for your felf, as you will not only give me thanks, but reckon this our meeting to be the most fortunate Accident of your whole Life. I thank you very kindly, replyed I. for your fair offers, but I shall desire you to explain your felf further; and I suppose I shall put so much confidence in you, as to be rul'd by you; although I do not in the least doubt that I shall be put to shole extremities you imagine. So much the better, replyed the; but however, that I may fit you for those purposes I have defigned, and partiy propounded to you; a shall give you an account of some part of my Life and Adventures; and thereupon she thus Began.

CHAP. II.

The Old Woman relates to Mrs. Dorothy, where she was born, in an Ale house; how educated in all manner of debauchery; how she had a Bastard, which she murther'd, is after marriage gotten with Child by a Moor, and perswades her Husband it was his, notwithstanding it being conceived so by the strength of imagination. Her Husband growing jealous of of the Black Moor, sights him; and they kill one the other. A strange adventure between her Lover and a Frenchman, with a Wind mill.

Was Born (faid the) at Portsmouth; a Sea-Port-Town, very well known, not only to mod English Men, but also to many Strangers. My Parents were of the ordinary ranck, keeping a fudling School, or House of good fellow ship. I was educated, according to the Custom of the place, to learn to read, and Sew; in learning of which having spent two or three years, at the Age of eleven I was taken home to fit in the Barr, and keep the scores; I was well plafed to be at home, because there was great variety of Guefts; especially merry drunken Saylors : who, when they had liberty to come ashore, would luftily booz it; and fing, and dance, all weathers. And to that end, our House was still accommodated with blind Harper, who pick'd up a merry living: Itaking pleasure in Musick, and my Father thinking it would advance his trading, bought for me a pair of Virginals and hired a man to reach me : I giving my mind to fe

10

F

10

t-

of

be

r.

h-

of

nts

ol,

ac-

or

to

[ed

of ho,

tily

oule

als

OIL

foon learnt fome tunes, which I played to the merry Saylers, whilft they pull'd off their shoes, and danc't Lustick; and sometimes I gaining a Teaster, or Groat for my Mulick, was to encouraged, that I quickly took all the instructions my Master was able to give me ; I likewise learned some songs of him, and some of the Saylers; fo that in little time I was well furnished with far and lean Songs; so we term'd the bawdy and others. Although I foon understood what was meant by bawdy Songs; yet I was yet to young to have experience of them : however, when my Auditors laugh'd, and sometimes bug'd and kils'd me, ! had some kind of Notions that were very pleasing to me; and although my Mother sometimes told me of the hateful name of Whore, and how much it concerned me to keep my Maiden-head; yet I resolved that if it were long ere I were married, yet it should not be to before I tryed what it was to lye with a Man: however I followed my Mothers directions, in frowning, and scouling on those who forc'd a kiss from me. But, as I had designed, fo it came to pals; for at the Age of fourteen years, a Sayler, who of all other fort of People, I liked best, gained my good liking: he newly came home from a boon Voyage, and was full of half Grown pieces, and took up his quarters at our house; my Father seeing him fo flush, was resolved to milk him; and therefore permitted him to keep me Company, though he faw he was very familiar in hugging and kiffing me ; I likewise had a great mind to some of his money, and therefore begg'd some of him to buy Ginger-bread, Sugar, Plumbs, Figgs, Fruit, and fuch like liquorish things, he believing, that as I had a liquorish tooth, so I might have a liquorish Tail, refused me no moneys I defired; but I being fomewhat modest in the smalness of my demands, had but little that wayes by fair play , therefore I bethought me, how I might be Miffres of more; therefore was refolved, at the next opportunity, to pick his pocket, which I guels'd would be no difficult marter to do; in regard he was oftentimes much overtaken with the Creature; and therefore, to the end I might effect my delires, when we were met next together, I drank pretty fmart ly with him, and conveyed some strong waters into each cup of his Beer; and To in short time he being somewhat tiplie, defred me to fing him a fong, which I performing, he was quickly, as I supposed fallen a fleep ; I far in his lap, and as cunningly as I could, flips my hand into his Pocket; whert I gathered up three or four half Crowns; as fleepy as he was he observed me, and while I was at my work, he was at his; and as flighly he conveyed one of his hands into another place, having not as yet been at that fport , I fqueek'd out, which made him rife, and me withdraw my hand, and both of us leave our Prizes; and I blushing for anger, that I was so doubly catch'd, would have left the Room, but he taking hold of me, defired me to be quier, and told me, what was done on his part was but in jest, as he supposed what I did was; and that it was but quid for quo. having by this time gained fome confidence, was, at his entreaty, content to flay longer with him, and lung another fong, which when I had done, he gave me four half Crowns (a greater fum than I was ever till then Miffress of) and told me, fince he knew what! would have, he would give it me, as he hoped I would do the like. To which I replyed, I knew not what I might do in time, if he continued his kindness to me Thus did I encourage him to be liberal to me, in hope of his defired reward and thus neither of us (knowing one anothers mir ds) was long backwards, with

-2

•

d

e

IS

IS

ח

nd

32 ly

ng

SAL

cd

11

ing

me

till

at I uld

at I

OC.

pes

WO

ith-

out

more

out enjoying our defires; he giving me some money and a Ring. I permitted him to enjoy me as fully as he could with or defire; and many rancounters we had together, both at home and abroad, as time and place would permit : but as the longest day will have an end fo had his money; and then my Father perceiving that it was low ebb in his Pocket, began to be more wary and circum spect of him, and to watch him, and flight him, left he should gain any thing upon me, and run into his score; and so he might lose as much in the shire, as he had got in the hundred , the Old Woman, my Mother, being somewhat suspicious of me, still watch'd us with much wariness; and he not having money to treat me abroad at other houses, as formerly, we were fain to have all our sports at home when we had conveniency; and there we were so narrowly put to it. that we were oftentimes in danger to be carch'd.

When my sweet-heart could get any Moneys he would treat me abroad; and one day having been walking with me, he committed one of the greatest extravagancies I ever heard of he had drank very hard and was now almost fluster'd, when coming by the Wind mill which is near our Town, the wind browing somewhat moderately, there was a French man who challenged some English Saylers to shew some feats of activity; among other exploits, he took hold of one of the wings of the Wind mill, and holding falt, was carried round therewith, lighting very orderly on the ground upon his feet. This was a wonderful, and we thought desperate attempt, and he much brigg'd of it daring any English man to do the like: my tweet-heart being with me, and defirons to gain my efteem, and being somewhat pot shaken, makes no more ado, but likewife takes hold of one of the wings of the Windmil; which by reason the wind bles

more feethly then it had done lately, caused the Mill to go more fwiftly then ordinary; and he not being able to hold fast, was thrown off ; but though it was a premy may off, wer to his good Fortune, he was not thrown to the ground (which would have broken his bones,) but into a pond of water; and there he being very skilful in fwimming, foon recovering himfelf, fwam to the share; and not forgetting what he had done, cryed out, Now let any Mounsieur of ye all do melike. All there prefent did much applaud him; It we attributing that to his delign and skill, which indeed was by chance; and truly, it was a good chance for him, that he broke not his neck : but he then escaped any further danger: and some Merchants being there prefent, were to furprized with the manner of the action that they gave him ten shillings to drink; he being thus rewarded for his folly, thought it his best course to go home, where we being come, and my Father made acquainted with the matter, and that he had money in his Pocket made much of him, and perswaded him to go to bed; and my Mother procured him a Sack puffer, which we all eat of at his beds fide ; but little did they think that this was a kind of a Bride-poffet : for, although we were not married that day, yet we lay together that night; for when they were in their bed, in went I too his; where he expected me, having before enjoyned me to make use of that opportunity, which I did, to both our good intents : for we enjoyed one another in full freedom of all dilights: this being the first and last time ! evel lay with him : for not long after, his coyn being fpent, and a Voyage presented it felf, he Shipp'd himfelf, and away he went for the East Indies; we promiling a confant continuance of our affections. But he being gone, it was not long, ere I found a ftrange

9

5

n

C

.

e

11

h

ee

n

eer.

k;

:ft

ny

he

nd

0-nis

nd

ed

en

he

ufe

in-

of

YCE

ing

im

101

But

alteration in my body, being taken with pewkings, and Vomitings, such as young Married folks are used to have; whereupon I concluded, that I should soon have a great belly, which so fell our; but before that,

Ihad a Husband to Father it.

Our House being publique, we enterrained all Comers; amongst the rest, there came a Sayler, who had had the Fortune to meet with a prize; and he for his own share had two hundred pounds Sterling. This was fo tall a Fortune as was unufual to be in the pofsession of an ordinary Sayler; and he chanceing in at our house, my Father was very desirous to rid him of his mony; he acquainted my Mother with his purpole, and rold her, that this Fellow would make a very good Fortune for me their Daughter; and they might by means of this live more plentifully then ever. The Fellow foon expressed a great deal of love for me, which my mother taking notice of told me of her own and my Fathers intentions, and bid me prepare to entertain his love, for they designed him for my Husband; the advited me to be free and courteous to him? but by no means to let him proceed further then the ordinary civility. I promised her all obedience, and the was very diligent and watchful over me. My (weer heart was very sweet upon me, and would fain have been dealing with me, as Merchandize, bidding very tait for me, but I resolved to have all or none; would not let him have a bit, but what was lawful : he being thus Hopt, was the more earnest; and at length, rather than lose me, agreed to have me at my own terms which was marriage; which at length was fully agreed upon. But my qualmes encreasing as did my belly,my Mother suspected somewhat was the matter, and therefore took me strictly to task; and so wrought with me, that I confessed I had been sporting with my for-former Tweet-heat , this news much ftartled her : but the who had passed many such brunts, soon found out a remedy; and told me that if I would be wholly ruled by her, the would fill warrant the business should go on prosperously enough; for, said she, I will direct you to carry your felf, so as the loss of your Maiden-head shall not be discovered; and as for your great Belly, we will when you are marryed, fend your husband to Sea before your time of delivery : and in the mean time, we will manage all matter cunningly enough. My Mother having thus encouraged me, I prepared for the wedding day, which was foon after appointed; which being come, and night also, we went to bed; and there my Bride-groom going about to enjoy me, I counterfeited all kinds of simplicity , I cryed, fob'd, and screeked out; and he had much ade, with puffing and blowing, and sweating, to possels himself of me. I had all the marks and symptoms of unrouch'd Virginity; and the more to beguile him, norwithstanding all his fair words, and endeavours, I mide fo great a noise as raised my Mother; who coming into our Chamber, found me in swound; from which the foon brought me, by rubbing me with Vinegar, and other Remedies; and fine perswaded me to be parient, and delired him to deal kindly with me, uling this Proverb; Gently, John, the Girls Toung, She left us, and then with somewhat more Patience I permitted him to take his pleasure with me.

Thus was I marryed, and came off with all Credit imaginable; but afterwards it did not proceed as we expected: for my Husband being very fond of my company, would not by any means be perswaded to leave me, for the Sea; but intended, now he had gained money enough, to live on shore. This resolution of his was very unpleasing; but I was forced to be

gt

οť

-

ld

a

n-

at

She

e-

1 tet

we

Juc

lo,

lels

of

im,

5, 1

m-

Vi-

, U.

She

per.

edit

WC

my

d to 210

Aion

to be

COR

contented, and to provide against the time of my de: livery of my great Selly, which now came on a paces and indeed was somewhat sooner than I expected for I was taken one day with a fuddain pain, which much furprized my Mother; for my Husband was in the House, and hearing my cryes, would needs force his way into my Chamber; where I was accompanyed by my Mother, who was instructing me what to do; an his approach to the Bed, my pains encreased, and a Child was born into the World; but, that he might not discover the fallacy, by the crying of the Child, I smothered it; and lying still for some space, my Mother perswaded him to depart; he being gone, my Mother fell to work; and removed the Child, playing the Midwife in the best manner she could; and all being buried, and I put into order, the told her Son in law, that these were extream fits of the Chollick, and would now they had begun, continue for some dayes; wherefore the defired him to take another Lodging, and let her lye with me : to this he hardly conferred; but at length, at both our importunities, the was content, and in ten dayes time, Istill every day om counterfeited firs of groaning, but he feeing I fentibly amended, would no longer forbear lying with me. eto

Thus did leseape this misfortune, and came off with flying Colours, without the least suspition ; fo sthat I was encouraged to proceed in further Roguries; which was the ruine of my Husband, and in which I had like to have been involved. I told you our house was for all Guests; and now by the addition of my Husbands money, which was employed in my Fathers Trade, to encrease his stock, our house the best furnished, was the best customed house in the Town; amongst the rest, there came a Person of Honour, who had been a Traveller, and among his Attendants a

Negro

Negro, or Black-man, which he had brought from Guiana. This Black-more was reported by his Mafter and others, to be the Son of a Prince in his own Country; I look'd on him with an affectionate and smiling countenance; which he perceiving, and also that I was handsome, much defired my company; and being Matter of money enough to spend on me, he had many opportunities of courting me : at the first, I examining what I was about to do. drew back, thinking it a very ftrange thing to be kis'd by a Black-More, but use brought it into Custome, and I endured not only that, but also methought I had a minde to tafte of his flesh, perswading my self, that there would be more than ordinary fatisfaction in that enjoyment; and he finding me coming, so prosecuted his suit, that it was not long ere I enjoyed him: I must confess much to my content, for nothing but his sparkling eyes was to be feen in the dark, which indeed were a thining, as two flars in a clear night; and he was s much delighted with me : fo that we promifed to take all opportunities for enjoyment. The Lords bufinel kept him there so long, that we had so much sport if jeft, as turned to earnest; for I found my felt to be with child, and I did absolutely believe that my Black friend was the Father of it: this confideration put me into a deep melancholly; for we carried our bull mels not fo privately, but that we were taken notice of, and suspected by my Mother; but much more by my Husband, whose extreme love to me was conver ted into as extreme a jealoufie; and he looked on m Black-friend with a great deal of horror.

I finding my felf with Childe, and doubting it was by him, a fancy possessed me, that I should bring fort a Black-More like the Father: this, I say put me to very great non-plus; and I endeavoured by all mess

m er

vn

nd

fo

nd

he ſŧ,

k-

re,

011

of

be

it ;

hat

fess

ling

C 15

5 1

take ineli

rt is o b lack-

put

buli

to blind my Husband, and take all to spition from him : I told him, I believed I was with Child, this pleased him; bur l'alfo added, I doubted, I should not render him compleatly fatisfied : for that I had a very great fancy that the Child would be black, and I could give no reason, but that the light of my Lords Black-More was deeply imprinted in my fancy : I told him, I had read the flory of a Black Queen and King, who had a Child that was white; and being fo born, was thrust out of the King his Fathers Dominions, for no other caufe but because he was white; and the Queen his Mother hardly escaped the fury of her Husband, who threwdly suspected her guilty of Adultry with some white man, because the Child was so. This faid I, was the Crime laid to her charge; and it feemed fo reason. able to him and all his Nobility; that notwithflanding the Queen was alwayes effeemed to be a vertuous woman, yet the hardly escaped with her life. But at length, a wife man of that Kingdome coming to the Court, and hearing of the matter, and that the Queen was banished as well as her Son; he, faid I, walking about the Court, and coming into the Kings Bed-chamber, there law the Picture of a fair white-woman which had, as great rariety, been presented to the King he then remembring the unfortunate case of the Queen, did really believe that the fight of that white otic Picture had occasioned the Queen to conceive and re b bring forth a white Child. Being thus convinced, and nvel perswaded in his own opinion, he was not long before he perswaded the King to the same; and the Queen having been alwayes of an unblemisht reput W tation, it was concluded by the King, and all the Nofort bility, that the Queen was innocent: and thereupon e tol the banishment was repealed, and both received home mes with great joy, flate, and honour; and this Son, after his Fathers decease, was crowned, and reigned King of the Place. Now sweet-heart, said I, this being so, and fancy having so strong an operation in the womb by the only site of a Picture, I cannot but imagine that the real presence of one may work much more and greater effects, especially since I find a very great inclination not only to love, but long for black things; black cherries, I affect extreamly, as also damsons, sloes, & black-bullies; I chiefly feed on black puddings; and it is not very long, said I, since I longed for a black hat, and did car it up every bit: and now I have lately had a great desire to a dish of buttet'd charcoal.

his

This discourse wrought variously with my Husband, who, although he did somewhat suspect me, yer would he take no great notice at present, but told me, that furely this was but fancy, and would in the end amount to nothing : I was content with his anfwer; but knowing his mind flood thereto bent, I first propounded, that the Black-more should depart our houle, or elfe that I might remove from home to fome other place, to fee, if by his absence the fancy would leave me: to this he willingly agreed; and in regard move for the Black - more's departure until his Lord went alfo, would not only raise suspicious Discourses, but turn to our disadvantage, by reason they were good Guests; we therefore resolved that I should remove four or five miles from home, the which I did the next day; but my departure was was not fo fecret, but that I gave notice thereof to my teloved Black-more, who promifed not to be long before he took the opportunity of giving me a visit; the which he did unseen of any, I letting him in at 1 back Garden door , and thither he usually came to me once in two or three days: we fometimes fpent fome hoars

3.

of 0,

b

ne

re

at 55

15,

53

.

ve

1

15.

ic,

ld

he

n-

ret ur me ild ird ird piby red e, my beit; me me me

hours rogether in a Banqueting house in the Garden $ and at last grew to bold, as to spend whole nights in bed together; fo that my Husband, who forely fufpected me, was refolved to watch my waters; and one Evening milling the Black-more, who was then come to me, he at midnight departed; and coming to the back door whereat the Black-more entred, he finding it open, entered, fawithe Candle in my Chamber, and I believe could hear our voyces, but knew not how to enter without great noise; wherefore, now resolving in his mind what to do, he waited till the morning, walking about the Garden; but in regard the Blackmore had some affairs of his Lords that morning to dispatch, he arose early, and left me; I shot fast the door, and lest him, no sooner was he down, but my angry Husband with a drawn fword meets him; he feeing and knowing him, gueffed his pupofe, likewife quickly draws; and they running upon one anothers fwords, foon bereft each other of life.

C 3

CHAP

CHAP. III.

The Old Woman relates, that her Husband and Blackfriend having killed one another, she removes her lodging, and is brought to bed of a young Black more, which she likewise murthereth; and then again removing her quarters, and passing for a maid, is married to a young Inn-keeper; who, instead of her, had a maid servant for his Bed sellow; who being both sliepy, she sets fire of the House; and then pretending to setch water at the Well, tumbles her in, where she is drowned:

Hus, faid Mrs. Dorothy, did the old Hagg give me an account of her mischevious beginning; and indeed, in the profecution of her ftory, the acquainted me with fo many horrible actions, that I was agast; and wondered that the Earth did not open, to swallow up a wretch fo monftraoufly wicked; but I think, faid the, by what I have faid, I have told you enough to know her, and therefore thall pals over the rest of her actions in filence : nav, faid I, Mrs. Dorothy, fince you have begun to give us so fair an account of the foul actions of this your wicked acquaintance, I shall de-Tire you to take the pains to proceed therein. Truly, faid Mrs. Mary, although I have known many wretched People in my dayes, yet I never hard of the like; and I suppose by what you have already recount ed, that all you have further to fay will be both remarkable, admirable, and pleafant (if we may ac count that pleasant which is so mischievously, and wickedly witty;) and therefore I, as well as our ck-

per

re,

re-

87-

044 oth

nd.

ert

me

ind

red

11:

WO

aid

10 her

Ou

oul

de-

ly,

ny

the

int

re.

20

R

out

S.D.

friend here, desire you to continue your relation; and if you will take the pain-, we will have the patience to hear you to the least particular. Mrs. Dorothy being thus requested by us both, replyed, that the should be content to grant our delires, but then we must have a great deal of patience, and pardon those impertment ignorances that she should be forced to recount, in relating so many notable and various adventurous actions of another: We told her, we should willingly attend, and excuse her in all; and thereupon she thus continued.

Although (faid this old Trot) my Husband, and my black friend had quickly disparch't their business, by thus disparching one another, yet they were neither fo fadden nor fo filent, but I both heard and faw, them tilt at one another with their twords, which were bathed in each others heart bloods and fo they fell, grinning at each other with horrible Countenances and they lay so close together, that they could carch hold of one another, and fight with their hands, their swords being sheathed in one onothers bodies; but this contest could not, neither did it last long, their hearts being suffocated with Blood, and so in short time they both expired; which I discovered by the noise of hollow groans: and thus continued she, was I deprived of a Friend, and a Husband. I was startled at the present, but considering what was to be done, went to bed, and lay there till some of the house came and bounc'd at my Chamber door ; I fuffered them to continue knocking for some time, as if I had been alleep; but they growing more furious by reason of my silence, were ready to break open the door, when I jumped out of my bed, and in my smock opening the door, asked them what was the cause of their violent knocking; they replyed, they were glad to fee me alive

Hive, which they much doubted, by reason of my filence, and having feen fuch a doleful fight as was then in the Garden : I feeming ignorant of all, defired them to explain themselves, and acquaint me with their meaning; they were not long then ere they had told me, that my Husband and the Black-more who quartered at my Fathers, where both dead in the Garden: I was amazed, ran then to the window, and there beheld what I too well knew already; and then cryed out, and in lamentable and furions manner threw my felf on the floor, tearing my hair, and making great lamentation : by this time the Constable and other Neighbors were come, but could nor get any thing out of me to discover any knowledg of the fad I fremed a ftranger to all; and fo the Bodies being removed, word was fent to my Father and Mother, who quiely came thither; but finding me, as the reft, to pretend ignorance, nothing could be done; but the People conjectured variously, and though they could not accufe me as the murtherer, yet I was fhrewdly fufpetted to be the cause; they judging the truth as it was! but however, I was without the compals of the law, and therefore escaped all trouble.

Their Bodies were soon after buried, and I thought it absolutely necessary to abscond my self, lest (the time of child bearing being near approaching, I might be further discovered by the Complexion of the child, which I did verily believe would be black; and therefore I lest my Fathers house, and went to an obscure Village about ten miles off; I took up my lodging with an old Woman of my Mothers acquaintance, pretending a great melancholly since the death of my Husband, and therefore avoided all Company; I had all along attempted to destroy the Child in my Womb, and to that end I had taken Savine, and many

9

ny

Vas red

ith

ad

ho

ar.

ind ien CM

ing

ind

ny

ad

retho

re-

ple

ac-

il-

25: ıw, ght

gh

apy άğ

other drugs and potions, and uting to jump, and leap, and wraftle, to cause my felf to miscarry, but all in vain; fo that in fine, I was forced to use the same remedy I had done, and fmother the Child fo foon as it was born; I had all possible conveniences to do it, whilft the Midwife, who lived at some distance, was not much looked after, although it was somewhat black, which was now taken to be fo, only by reason of its strugling for passage; and wanting a Mid-wife, I caused it to be quickly nail'd up in a box, and so with little trouble paffed over the difficulty of this affair ; my Mother foon came to me, and accommodated me, with every thing fit for my condition, to that it was not long ere I perfectly recovered; and I having no mind to return to my Fathers nor to flay in that place. caused my Mother to provide me with a gentile habit; and money in my pocker, and being thus fitted, went twenty miles further, to the house of another of my Mothers acquaintance; and having been fo unfortunate with a Husband, was refolved not to own that ever I had been married, but to pass for a maid; which I might well enough do, not being yet above eighteen years of age. My beauty then was fo charming, that I quickly gained many adorers; and it being given cut the that I was a Virgin, and of a good fortune, had many Sutors in earnest, that woed me in the honest terms uld, of marriage. Having the choice of several, I was the eremore coy; but in the end, there was one, who was an ure lan-keeper, whose Father being lately dead, and left a ging handsome competency, him I accepted of, but with ce, great jealousie and suspicion of my felf, lett he my was a cunning youngfter, fhould discover the had want of my Virginity. I was sensible it would my be no difficult matter for him to finde me out, but which (faid the) I did in this manner.

I was resolved to try my Wits, and prevent his disdiscovery: to this end I delayed my marriage for some time, till I could bring my matters to pass:

There was a Servant. Maid in the House, whom! pfually had for my Bed-fellow, and with her I was very free in all my discourse, acquainting her with all palfages between me and my Sweethearis; and many pleafing discourses we had upon those occations, and commonly we spent some hours every night when we were in Bed, in these Conferences: I asking her which of my Sweet-hearts was the best, and liklieft to prove a good Husband; the and I both jumped in one mind, and the feemed to rejoyce at the good Fottune I was likely to enjoy, in having to handtome, and accomplish'd a Perlon, as he was with whom I was to be Married; faying that of all men breathing, the never faw one whom, the thought, the could love better; and adding, that the would give all the money in her Pocket to have my place one the Wedding Night. Well, thought I, att you there ? I'le be with you anon. Truly faid fhe, am a perfect Maid, not having yet had to do with any Man; and for deed, nay, for thought and word, until this time, was a pure Vitgin; but methinks, fince I fat your Sweet-heart, I have such pleasing imagination that loould willingly experiment the effects; but, continued the, I hope you will take all this in good pan and not be jealous of me for I shall not in the least in jure you, no, though your Sweet-heart should defin it; besides, my Quality and condition is so much be neath yours, that it would be but a folly to expect it but shall wish you all happiness with your belove t Bridegroom. She having opened her mind this free h to me, it was the thing I only aimed at, and above a things wish'd for; and therefore, that' I might no if-

for 51 m.I

ery

)a[-

ea-

mere

my boo

The

er. ing

the

Che

my art

ne,

ntil

ree

firif

fricke while the Iron was hot, I thus replyed; come, come, do not counterfeit more Modelly than needs, but tell me truely, and sincerely, if I can find a way to compals your delires, and be therewith content, and willing, will you obey me in what I shall defire of you? This is is a strange proposition, said she, and I believe fir from your heart to do, and only to try me farther; but I pray let us talk no more of this matter.

I quickly answered, that I was now in earnest, and would (if the would fwear to me to be fecret) difcover a fecret that was of the highest importance, and that then all things would be as the had withod; the wondring what I meant, and being defirous (as all wo-V to men are inquisitive after secrets) to discover mine, . foon made many protestations and vows, to be fecret in what ever I should impart to her; and thereupon I told her, that indeed about twelve moneths fince, being in my fathers house, a Gentleman of quality lodging there, and having divers times courted me; and I alwayes refuling to hear him, and being very ob-Rinare, notwithRanding all his endeavours by Presents, and otherwise; he, I said being hoany ly impatient, and resolved to venture all for favi for my enjoyment, took his opportunity, and came to bed to me; I feeling him near me, cry'd out but in vain, ions for my Lodging was at too great a distance from any con part bodyes hearing; and so in the end, notwithstanding A in my striveng, and strygling, he had his will of me; and efin indeed, to tell you the truth, the danger of the brunt bebe ing over, and I well knowing that what was past could A its not be recalled, was, in the end, willing a frecond, or ove third time, to permit him the fame enjoyment; and fo he went away in the Morning well fatilited, and I better pleas'd than when he came to me, I was resolved no to keep this from the knowledge of my Parents, and

A

0

RO

81 hal

me

did to, though he offered me Marriage, which would have been advantagious enough for me, he being, as I Gid, a Person of Quality; but however, he continued his practice with me all the time of his stay at my Fathers, which was two Moneths; and then he departing, promifed a sudden return, and that he would then die cover himself to my Father, and request me in Marriage; I trusted to his fair words, and permitted his departure; but he had not been long abient ere I perceived my felf to be with Child: I kept this from the knowledge of all, fo long as I could; but in the end, my Mothee suspecting me, charged me so roundly, that I confessed the Fact ; the thereupon took the best remedy the could, and unknown to my Father, fent me away to a Friend of hers, where I lay in of a Child which foon after dying, and I recovered, I again removed hither, where what hath befaln me you already know as well as I; and now, my dear Friend, faid I, the case being thus, you may do me a great kindnels, & and please your felf, as you lay, by taking my place of the Wedding-night; and he lying with you in my flead may be deceived, and take me for a pure Virging whereas otherwife I am in much doubt to be discovered, in regard, that not only I have loft my Maidenhead, but have also lately had a Child.

My Bed-fellow gave diligent attendance to what! had related, and after I had fatisfied her how the thould behave her felf in every refpett, fhe confented to take My business being in this forwardness, quickly consented to clap up the bargain with m Sweet-heart ; and the Wedding-day, being come, w were accordingly Married; and at Bed time I went to Bed with my Bride-groom, but feigning Modesty, com manded all to depart the Room; which they did, lear ing one Candle burning; I feeing the Company gone

Cor-

leap'd out of the Bed to put the Candle out ; which I did, and then, according to appointment, the Maid, who did, and then, according to appointment, the Maid, who was ready in her smock behind the Hargings, quickly got into the Bed, and enjoyed my place; I stand in the Chamber, and could well enough discover all passages between them, and how she made some faint relistances but not long it was ese they fell a sleep, and sleep so but not long it was ese they fell a fleep, and flept for long, that I was at a very great fland what to do, felt day-light should come ere the should awake, and then be seen by my Husband, and I disgraced and loss for ever: I ruminated in my mind many wayes; at last I was resolved to proceeded to violence, and hazard all, rather than lose my credit; and therefore seeing they shill slept on, I went out of the Chamber into the next; where with the help of a Tinder-box, I struck but not long it was ese they fell a fleep, and flept fo next; where with the help of a Tinder-box, I ftruck a light; and getting a Torch, and lighting it, let-fire on some part of the house, which soon encreased to a great flame; I then made no great difficulty to make a soise, and cry out fire, are; this was soon seen, smelt, and heard by my drousse bedsellows, who both arose; and I being there, caught hold of him, as if I had lain with him; and his bedsellow being now a little come to her self, and seeing me, began to consider what she was to do, and ran where her cloaths were, put them was to do; and ran where her cloaths were, put them at I an, and then came to help me to mine.

My Husband, and all the rest of the Family being thus raised, ran about for water to quench the sire; I being lest alone with my Husbands bed-sellow, could have found in my heart to have killed her with a Sword there in the Chamber: because the had been the occasion of all this mischeif; and the thoughts of that, and remembring what hurt she might do me hereaster, one in discovering my secrets, or, at least, in being my

W

b

f

1

N

u

П

¢

F

di

Corrival : these Considerations made me resolut to disparch her into the other world ; and there fore deliring her to go down with me into the Yard to fetch water at the Well, the did fo where I fpying my opportunity, in the absence of the rest of the Family, as she was stooping to draw Water, I turned her head forwards into the Well where, before any came to help her, she was dead. pretended to bewail her misfortunes ; but the fire, by the afiftance of some Neighbours, being now quench's we all retired into that part of the House that was un burn'd , where every one lamented, not only the mis fortune of the fire, but that of the Maids death; which I alone was principally concerned.

CHAP. IV.

She being at home with her Husband, is Courted by Ga by ber Gallant, and cheated of a Gown, and three Rings the is Coursed by another Gallant, and they fludy S Revenge on the first ; which she executes, by appoint ing the first to come to Bed to her; where ber Husban by her appointment, was in her stead : who taking his to in the manner, foundly whips him; in the mean tin the is in Bed with her new Gallant.

He next day after our unfortunate Weddin n night, all Persons concerned began to reckon their loffes ; in which, neither I, nor my Husbandie fered but little; for he had nothing there but 1 Clothes on his back, and I only had mine, and a Tro

rethe of award in the control of t

471 tit

n

of Clothes, and Linnen, which were fafe. Our Landlord loft some of his Goods, and an hundred pounds would not repair the damage the House had suffained by the fire; he therefore complained much of his loffes : but his lamentations were not equal to those of an Old Woman, who lived in the Town, and was the Mother of the Unfortunate Maid, whom I had fo treacherously, and ungratefully murthered : I was almost as joyful as the was fad, that I was rid of fo dangerour a Corrival, whom Ihad entrufted with my greateft fecrets.

The diforders of this House caused us to quit it fooner than we intended ; for that every day we removed to my Husbands Habitation, which was not above four Miles distant, and there we Lodged , where that night I received those imbraces from my Husband which were very pleasing to me, and then all things were as well fixed as I could defire; only my Mothers coming was every day expected, I having given her notice of my Transactions by Letters : She came in tew tte ng dayes, and that not empty-handed; for she brought an hundred pounds in ready money with her : this, he told her new fon-in-law, was but part of a greater Sum, my Father and the intended for my Portion ; although my Husband expected five hundred pounds with me (I having given out that I should have so much) yet he was content wirh this for the present; and this money was part of what was left me of my first Husbands. During the stay of my Mother, we kept open House; and giving up our selves to all manhin ner of mirth, I found my Husband to be but an eafie Coxcomb, and one whom I thought I should out-wir, and over-rule ; he was much inclined to gameing ; and, as the fortune of the Dice went, he sometimes won, and loft again as often; at which he would be somewhat waspish and griping : and what he lost by gameing, he would get up again out of large Reckoning, and trick he would put upon his Guefts, who now were more in number than formerly; for it being given out, that he was Married, and that to one that was handsom, all the Countrey came in upon us; especially all the roaring Lade, who foent highest, came all to see, and prefent their fervice to their Land-lady; and as a Citizens thop is never to well furnished, as when a handlome Wife is placed in a varnisht fear; even fo is an Innkeepers Barr; and doth draw in Customers, all in hopes to have a lick at her honey por ; and although a Woman be never fo chafte, and the Guelts finde it lo, yet if the be but hand fome, her company is ftill delired; but you know my temper fo well, that you may guels I should not hold out a feven years fiege, if I were but once bravely affaulted ; but withall, I refolved to be as cunning as all my Observations had taught me, and not be like a Glove for every ones drawing on. If I had any Servants, I resolved they should be of the best, and those I counted so, who wore most money in their Pockets; I had my choice of feveral of that kind; and though I ftill counterfeired a great Modefly, yet I was treated, and regalia'd both at home and abroad; there was no fport, or divertilements, but I made one of the Company : no fair near out Town but I vifited, being conducted thither by one Callant or ather : where I had feveral Fairing prefer-I had my Husbands confent to all my actions, for I fill acquainted him with all; and when I was carried to any place, I told him every particular, and caused him to meet me at the place and time ap pointed; without which I pretended a mighty unwillingness; and this I did, that he might put the greater confidence in me.

ed w be of

Par

ioy

15 Sc W

to G fa

üp cò 6

YC hi

fo h hi th

Ь 21 el

W fe I

F 2

2

This Trade I did drive for a long time, without joving iffue with any of my Gallants, and they gain. ed no more upon me than a kifs, or a languishing look, which I sometimes cast upon them to cause them to believe, that in time they might arrive to the height of their delires ; and for thefe my kind looks I was as kindly rewarded; they presenting me with Gloves Scarffs, Hoods, Rings and Cabinets, and fuch like Womanish toyes, and all in hopes that they might toy with me, as in fine they did : I had feveral of thefe Gamefters, but one above all the reft was moft in my favour, he having been the most prodigal in expences upon me ; I gave him full freedome with me, and I cornuted this as well as I had done my other Husband; he spent much of his time in gaiming, and was very earnest at it with his Guefts : and while he was at his game, I and my Gallant were at ours, My friend for his greater presence of freedom in our house, would humour my Husband, and Game with him, and lofe his money; for indeed my Husband was at that foort the better Gamefter, although my Friend pleased me better at the other; by these extravagancies of his, and his loffes at Gameing, he in time came to a low ebb of money in his pocket, and was necessitated to withdraw, and leffen his expences ; fo that he was not so welcome to me or my Husband as he had been : for I was of the Old Womans Opinion, No longer Pipe; no longer Dance : as he avoided expences I shun'd him Company; and having friends enough who defired to be my Cuftomers, l'endeavoured to be rid of him. He fill continued his wonted freedome, and defiring my Company abroad; and so confident he was grown, that he would ask my husbands leave, who had not yet refused him; and therefore a Comedy being to be acted at a Town not far off, he gained my company company to go with him; I had other company that I liked better than his, but I could not thift him off, although I very much endesvoured it.

The Play being done, he defired to treat me privately, which I accepted of, having a delign to manage that was newly come into my head, and which was this: I had feen a Gentlewoman at the Play, who had a new filk Gown, of a pretty colour and fashion, I was resolved to beg such another of him, and in case of refusal, to break with him totally : I therefore took my opportunity, and when he delired his wonted freedom with me, I told him e was mistaken, and l absolutely refused, and forbid him turning up any more Coats then he was willing to pay for : he asked what I meant by my discourse and refusal : I told him unless he would give me such a new Gown as I prescribed to him, he should have no more to do with me: my Gentleman was as blank as a Bell founder, and his courage was somewhat cooled at my demands; so that he foon arole, and walked up and down in a muling posture; at length he spake, and made some excuses and paufes : but I being resolved on the question, told him, that he had forborn his Pension a great while, and therefore I was resolved he should be the more liberal, and that I would to try his love by performing that request; if he would not grant my defires, I would also refuse him his; but if he would give me such a Gown, he should still oblidge me, and have the first taking of it up. Come, come, faid he, you and I will not fall out for such a matter as that, and you shall have it, or any thing ese that is in my power, or indeed that you can wish tor; and within these three dayes ! will fend it you, on condition that I may have a full nights lodging with you, well, replyed I, be you fo good as your word, and I will order the matter 10, 25 you you shall have your defire: and thus we having clapt up a bargain, concluded the discourse with two or three kisses; and so after a considerable repast, we returned home, and there we parted; he to contrive how to be so good as his word, and I to order my Husbands absence, that we might lye together, as I had promifed.

d

d

11

11

d ſ

11

My Gallant examining the matter, found that at present the strength of his Pocket would not be fufficient to accomplish his defire, and therefore he supplyed that defect by the strength of wit ; he visited the Gentlewoman who was owner of the Gown, and being of her acquintance, he requested her to let him have her Gown to flew a Taylor to make fuch another by for a Sifter of his; his defires being modeft were the fooner granted; and a Taylor of his acquaintance receiv'd it of her, and immediately at his commands brougt it to me, I accepted it with a smileing countenance, and giving him a small peice of Money tor his pains, difmils'd him; when foon after my friend likewise followed; and my Husband being abknr, we concluded that night to devote our felves holy to Venus; and he being us'd to lye at our house, it was no great difficulty for him to quit his bed and come to mine, where we fpent all that night in all those amorous enjoyments that we could devise : but he thinking he had paid dear for his nights pleasure, was refolved to have fomething more into the bargain; and that he might engage me another time, if Ifell our with him, as he forefaw I would ; wherefore he taking his opporunity when I was affeep, flipt no less then three of my Rings off from my fingers, and put them on his; and early in the morning he left me and my Bed, and went into his own : and having before contrived now to play his Cards, he went to the

br

CO

of

lie

ob

an ki

ap

pr

th

W

61

th ne hi ab

W te If

to 10

W

ti W

fe

b

Taylor, and advised him to come to me, and tell me he had forgot to finish somewhat that was very neceffary, and had been omitted to be done in the Gown. and therefore he was come to fetch it, that it might be mended, and he might have no difgrace by his work; I being without all suspition, and seeing indeed there were some defects, which he shewed me, delivered it to him, desireing him to make hafte with it, because ! intended to have it home before my Husbands return, and then to tell him that my Father had fent it me; but I reckond before my Hoft; for although I waited two or three dayes, and fent to the Taylor, and asked my falle friend, yet I could have none, but idle excules and flashes; fo that in conclusion I found my felf cheated; for as I understood afterwards, the Gown was presently sent home to the right owner; whom I faw wear it the next funday, and then knew it, by fome particular marks to be the same. This passage vexed me to the heart; but I was three times more angry when I miffed my Rings, and upon examination found that he had beguil'd me of them ; and indeed for further confirmation, I faw them upon his fingers; this (faid the) extreemly perplexed and inraged me; fo that then I converted all my love into (its contrary) hatred, and Rudyed nothing fo much, as how to He finding that I was angred, recompais a revenge. frained my Company at prefent, and that gave oppottunity to another, who had long time courted me at a distance, to lay a closer siege to me; and he so fat prevailed with me, what with gifts, treats and prefents, that I promised him that in short time he should reap the fruits of his defired Harveft ; but I was refolved to make him inftrumental in my revenge upon my sbufier and to that end I thus broke the matter to him

1 ıt

1

C

H

I

0, d

d

3

0

t

e

d

.

0

1

C

0

Sir, your friendfhip and love I very much efteem ; e and believing you to be fincere, and one in whose breaft I may repose trust and confidence; I shall difcover fomewhat to you, that may for the future be of good consequence to us both; and it is this: I be, lieve you have not been to dim fighted, but you have observed more than common familiarity between me and Mr. fach a one, naming my abusic Lover; some relents he hath given me, for which he expected more freedome with me than I was willing to impart ; but I kill kept him at a diffance, although he preffed hard spon me to enjoyment; which I not thinking fit at present to permit, he began to clamour, at length through his importunities, I consented he should lye with me at fuch a time, on condition he gave me fuch a filk Gown as I named ; to this he agreed, and fent in the Gown accordingly : now it to fell out, that I could not perform what he expected, and therefore delay'd him for a few dayes longer, till my Husband fall be iblent, promifing then to keep touch with una; but whether he not believing me, or elfe the necessity of teturning the Gown, whinh he had but borrowed, as lance found; one or both these reasons induced him to be false to me, and by a while he got the Gown out of my hands; and he was not content with doing that only, but he also intending to abuse me further, when We were toying together, cheated me of three of my tings; which he as a Trophy of his Victory, and my weakness and shame, Aill wears on his fingers, and I fear he is so prodigal and lavish of his tongue, as to bray to his acquaintance, that he had those as my gifts for unhandsome service done me.

Thus did I disguise the trath of my dealings with my abulive Lover, and having given my new one this account, defiring his affiftance in a revenge; to this he le

N

1

n

0 fr

Ì

0

1

0

Pot

1

t

Ì

quickly answered, that as for the Gown I had been to out-witted in, he would make up that loss, by giving me another; and so he would also for the rings; if I pleased; or else compel my abusive lover to deliver them; and in all things else he would vindicate my credit I replyed to him, that I would not have any compulsion, for that would make too much noise; but rather have his assistance in my revenge, which I had thus contrived.

I would have him possels my Husband with Jealousie against my abusive Lover, and leave the rest to my ordring, which I managed thus : I gave my abulive Friend more freedom, & Thewed a kinder Countenance than I had done of late, & that only to draw him on, which lidid with much eafe, for he had a great delire to be friend swith me; and upon our first convenie pr parley, he confessed himself guilty, & made some trivial excufes, which I admitted of, as I did his love, in hopes to gain my rings, and a revenge; as for the sings, he presently returned me one, and promised the other two the third night following, when I agreed to lye with him, promiting fo to order the matter, that my Husband should be then our of the house; we after this parley parted, and my new friend had to dealt with my Husband, in discovering my abusive Friends freenels and privacy with me, that he now became abfolutely jealous, and intended to make me fenfible of his anger; burl knowing where the shooe wrung him: was before hand, and the next night told him, that if he did not rake fome speedy courfe, I was in danger, and he too, to be abused by my abusive Lover; for faid I, he hath gotten two of my rings, and thews them abroad, reporting he had them of me, as tokens of my dishonour; and to me he will not deliver them, unlefs

n

y

.

.

y

S

d

h

e

-

0

2

1

.

y

t

15

of

if

r

E

les I will promise him a rights lodging: now said I, if you have a mind to save my honour, your own, and revenge us both on him, I will thus uc; I will feemingly consent that he shall come to bed to me to morrow night, and to that end, I will have you pretend to go out of Town; but instead of your going, I will go to such a friends house, and there i'le stay; you shall lye in my Bed, and at the hour I will appoint him he will come to bed to you, when you and your friends, and servants, I hope takin him in the manner, will so handle him, as he shall have little cause to boast of his nights lodging; and you and I shall be sufficiently revenged on him for thus attempting my Chaffity.

To all this discourse my Husband gave very good attention; and it corresponding with what he sufpetted, he now wholly quitted any fuspitious thoughts of me, and agreed to execute all I had propounded ; fo that when the time came, my Husband pretended to lve out, took his leave of me, and my abusive Friend, who was glad of his absence : I made haste with him to bed, telling him about ten a Clock he might come fafely into my Chamber, and bed which he knew well enough, not to mistake the way, I then left him, and taking horse, went to my new friend, who expected me at our appointed Rendevonz, where he presented me with the defired Gown, and I according to my promie, gave him a nights lodging with me, which was much more pleasant to us both, than was that of my abusive Friend; who at the hour appointed, went to my Chamber, and into the Bed where my husband was exspecting him ; he believing it was I, began his embraces, and other actions, declaring his intent; with that my husband leap'd out of the Bed, and four good Old Women of my Friends, who were hid under the bed, discovered themselves, and having a dark

D 4

Lanthorn

h bo

C

W

in

for the

Pi

to

of

2I

W

CE

th

ca

W

21 hi

al

h

Lanthorn, lighted the Room, and fell to work: first they tyed his hands and feet to the posts of the Beds Head and feet; and then each being provided with a good handful of Birch laid on lustily, till he roar'd sufficiently; my Husband making offer to geld hims but when it came to that point, he begg'd so heartily, that my Husband consented to his desire, only he paid the two rings he had of mine, as ransome for his Jewels.

CHAP. V.

Her abused and whips Lover nows revenge, which is done in part; afterwards he is kill'd, yet kills his Corrival: the manner how, with other things very remarkable.

Ever did the Canicular dayes insuse into Dogs a greater thadness and sury, than did this whiping in Loves School inrage the minde of our sufficiently, jerkt Amorist; which for the present (whilst under his Chirurgions hands) he durk not express; for all that he could do, was to supplicate them not to deprive him of what would make him stand as a Neuter between the Sexes of humane Generation; which they granted him.

With much hazard, and greater fear, escaping their hands, only in his shirt, without shooe or stocking, he got out into the streets; and being overjoy'd that he was secure, but had the black mantle of night to conceal his shame, and convey him home, without the knowledg of the Town-inhabitants, can through the

Arcets

de

d

.

7, 10

is

3

1

Ľ

freets with all speed imaginable; but, by the way, neeting with a sharp stone, it so hurt his foot, that he was compellitteo flacken his pace, and lamely limp to his lodging. The Clock had then fruck twelve (an hour wherein supposed Bugg-bears walk, to frighten Children) as he could fee just before him two women. whom a third had raifed from their warm beds by her incessant cries, proceeding from the intollerable pains he then indured, being ready to be delivered, to haften to call up a fourth, viz. a Midwife. Hafte on both fides had made them fo carelefly heedlefs in their way, that they were within a spit and a ftride of eath other, before they could differn one the other. My cheating, and cheated Leacher perceived the women first; which put him to a ftand, what he were best to do, either to go forward, or backward , they, one the other fide, feeing athing all in white stand opposit in their way, judged it to be the troubled spirit of the lately diseased Husband of this woman they were going to fetch the Midwife for. He, on the other hand, refolved to go forward; and they feeing him approach them (skreeking out) ran back as fast as they could; who being stopt by the watch, and demanded why they made that hideous outtty, made answer, they had met the Devil, or some thing like him. Condemning the womens idle and caussels fears (as they judged) they advanced forwards, armed with Bills, Halberts, but principally with an unparallell'd resolution. My Gallant had ftept into by-corner, when the woman cried our to fecure himself from what might ensue that unexpected allarum, fully resolved to run home to his lodging directly, with what speed he might's he started out just as the Watch were advanc'd within half Piftol-fhot of him; the Sudden Surprize confirmed them in the womens report, fo that, without confideration there was te

(V

10

at 1

Wil

not 100

741 ha

dif

Got

fu

un

19 po

th

m

W

int

CE

W

lo

to afi di

he

not one of these desperate Kill-Devils to be feen,but |me fuch as with a too precipitate hafte, lay tumbling in the Kennel, one over the other. This accident gave new wings to my Lovers feet, which were so benumm'd with cold, that he very much flood in need of fuch learian practices, Dadalian inventions.

In conclution, with such knocking, he made a hift to get in. His Landlady (who was a Widow) feeing him in this condition, charg'd him home, asking, Where he had been how he came thus to lofe his skin? Whether he had been rob'd? Though wanting Garments, yet he would nov be without a Cloak to hide this Venereal enterprize of his, and therefore replied, That falling no ill company, it was his ill hap to fall into that damn'd irch, that tickling humour of playing; that having won fomething, and like to win more, they would not let him play longer, but seizing him, stript him, and would have done, I know not what, had not his fight procured his fafety.

His loving Landlady believing that he was thus really abused conducts him to her own warm bed, and like a kind friend would not let him lie alone, for fear of carching cold. But his Breech was fo fore, he could not lie on his back; and fo troubled were his thoughts, he had no mird to lie upon his belly. His Landlady finding him fo backward, imagined the cause to proceed from his being too forward abroad with others, and gathered by too many apparent fymptoms, that the was much deceived in his presended continencie at home; and being hartily vext to be thus disappointed of her expectations, the leapt out of bed, telling him engrily, the had more lodgings and Lodgers in her hou'e, and walld not be behalden to him for either; and had the known fo much before the did let him in, as the harh done fince the would have tried how the cooling ut moling Julip of standing in the street all night in his hirt, would have wrought with his feaverish concupi-

W kence.

ft

e-

2

.

de

d.

t

9

y pt

ot

S

it.

ie

뤰

d

Ħ

ñ

1

1, è

Netled he was to the purpose to hear his Landlady (who had ever fince their first acquaintance born him ch more than common kindness and respect) thus taunt thim ; but his thoughts were for absolutely taken up with a subject of another nature, that he returned her not one word; which so exasperated her spirits, not to be replyed unto; that laying a fide discretion, with her modesty, she was resolved to ring him a peal in the earraling-Rhetorick of Billing | gate, How now, (faid the,) bit not enough that my Servants, from time to time, have fare up late, or rather early, but that I must be difturb'd from my reft, to give repose to a reftless Stallion? Shall my roof prove the Protector to fuch Caternawling Night-walkers? Is it not enough, that I have familhed you continually with money, but you must ungratefully make that the Common procurer of your private Veneries abroad, and those gawdy Clothes I give you muft be the Gentleman-Ofher that muft lead you to them? Are all your former respects come to this? are your hot pretences grown fo cold at home, that nothing can warm them, but a fire in another mins Chimney, made there at my expences? She would have proceeded, but that her clamorous tongue interrupted her, by raising one of Her Lodgers, who time down at that inftant, to know what the matter Was , when my Come-Rogue, not induring her rallery longer, rudely bid her, rather then gently defired her to go to bed; begging that the would not trouble him after that manner, charging her with incivility, for disturbing him from his rest.

The Gentleman, that came down the flairs, hearing this; and judging the had profitured die

and

W

the fee

and her

and

LIV

ing

the fine

the

me

han

cen

Wit

con

tau refo

chie

TION

one

ATT

ton

MY

hw

toh

him how ther

W

hay

those kindneffes to one that scornfully refused the them, which he had fo frequently follicited her for partly for pleasure, but principally for profit; had not the patience to check her for it in any other place, than these down-right; outragiously bellowing forth, Am not I the oldest Guest in your house, and not a penny in your Debt ? Have not I pamper'd you at home, and Coacht you abroad, till I have not had a wheel in my pocket for your extravagant delights to move further on ; and have afterwards Rab'd my Credit, that you might deliciously feed, and fatiate your felt on the blood of the grape, then (when few refule to give themfelves fatisfalion) I have attempted to enjoy what you now profitute ; but you kepr me at that diffance, I knew not whether your breath funk or not. Nay, I have made use of Critical minutes to purchase my delire, more especially then, when I could see by the flaming of your eyes, what conspiracies wine and wanton difcourse had formed within you, to fire the Fortres of the most resolved Chastity. And shall you now be bid to go to bed? be begg'd to retire from your fatiated Lovers embraces? how can you fland thus impudently in your mock in a mans Chamber, and yet commanded to be gone ? Come, you forget your felf your dark- Lanthorn delights have dazeled the fight of your Reason; and let this (kicking her with his foot) light you to your own Chamber; and withal laying bold on her, would have forecibly thruft her out; which rude carriage of his made her cry out aloud, fearing some further mischief.

This out-cry fo ftartled my Gentleman in bed, that not enduring to hear his Land-lady fo grofly abused, got up, and closing with him, threw him; and having no other weapons, but their fifts , pounded one and-

ther

t.

differ to some purpose. The Woman fearing what misdief might enfue, put her head out at the window, d inderved Murder as loud as the could bawl; the Watch (hearing murder cryed out) came running to - the house with all speed (not dreaming they should . fe again that Spirit which had fo lately trighted them) and perceiving a great buftle in the house, and the fame E. herrid noise continuing, they broke open the doors, indentring, found two men fcuffling in their fhirts, living blooded one the other sufficiently (this bleed-1 ing excused very well the other blood that came from 1 the firked-back and breech of my Gallant) I fay, finding them in this bloody condition, they doubted they had injured one another with fome tharp infirument; they needed not to fearch farther then their hinds, having neither of them more cloathes to concal any thing than what modefty commanded. Notwithfranding they were parted by the Watch, yet they could not hold their hands off one another; which truled the Watch to interpole again, and new they Molved to fecure them that night (from further mifdieving one the other) at the Watch-houses, and so commanded them to put on their Cloaths; which the one quickly did, but the other could not. It would live been worth all my revenge to have feen in what mususion he stood, at that word of command, or so he known what the watch-men thought when they liw their Prisoner could finde no Cloaths.

Though their wonder was great, yet they refolved whave their curiofity refolved; and therefore askt him, where were his cloaths, and how he come, or how he could be without them? by the way, furely there was not much wit in that Conftable and his Watch; for had they had any, they might prefently hereconcluded (from the posture they found those

Gentle-

in.

he

mi

G

he

the

the

ne

fur

ot

he

cla

lig

to im

nig

eg

ra

18

211

for thi

eff

fell

Ho

in my lef

he

for

WE

Gentlemen in) that they were a couple of mendicant Poets, who had but one fuit of apparrel between them, that when the one went abroad, a wheedling the other was forc'd to lye a bed a staring; and difputing who should next scout abroad to find ont the Enemies of famine, and not agreeing upon the point, fell together by the ears. But to return where I left of. the Constable having interrogated him as aforesaid, he endeavouring to excuse himself, and palliate the scurvy usage of his revengeful Mistris) answered him, that walking that after noon, it was his mischance, by push of that Gentleman they found him fighting with, to fall into a Common-house, (Pox on his witty alluston) and that having no fuit than that, he intended to have lain in bed till it had been cleanfed and dried. That the Gentleman aforesaid would not let him reft. but came into his Chamber, and with scoffling and irritating expressions, provok'd him to rife, and endeavour to be rid of his trouble.

The other told the Constable, that what was faid was a greater lye than the Devil could invent , that the canse of the Quarrel was his endeavouring to hinder his Leachery that night, by preventing his Landlady from going to bed to him. The Woman hearing this, replyed, they were both of them a couple of confounded lyars, and (that the might make one of the number) told them; that they intended to have ravillit her, and that the one breaking up her Chamber-door, the other followed, and fell together by the ears, who thould be the first Actor in their damn'd delign; to prevent which, the was compell'd to cry our Murther, upon which they withdrew out of her Chamber, and went into one of their own, where (faid she) you find them like a couple of malicious dogs, fighting for that morfel neither of the Curs is ever like to tatte of.

15,

nht

or, ho

er,

ou

115

This Forgery was more semblable to probability in the Constables opinion, than any thing else he had heard. Wherefore not to spend further time in examination, he charged his Watchmen with my two Genilemen, and fo inconsideratly rash he was, that he he vow'd they should go with him; and had carried 11, 11, 12 them in that very condition, had not the Woman of the house interceeded, that she might cloath his nakednels, as well as the could for the prefent; hereupon the y furnished him with a Peticoat of her own, having no at other Cloaths that would fit him : instead of a cloak, 1 he helpt him to a red Rugg; and to crown all, the h, capt upon his head ber ftraw-hat. Had it been daglight, it would have been worth twelve pence a piece to to have feen this Slavonian, whose garb, for Aranged. nels, the barbarous World might admire, but never R, imitate. I do not hear that he over-flept himself that night; nor can I believe, that the morning gave his eges no great satisfaction, in viewing the preposterousness of his habit; and his Twinklers lookt, as I an inform'd, as if they had been imployed in nothing he all that night, but on looking on the phantalms of et ty some of his dead and damn'd acquaintance.

Islept but little my self, that night, partly, by thinking how this revengfull plot of mine would take that, but chiefly, by reason of my unsatisfied Bedfellow, who kept me waking in spight of my teeth-However I arose early, and being but a little way distant, soon got home; where arrived, I understood from my husband, that my Rings were restored, that he had lest me his Breeches, as owning me his Master; and so he might well acknowledge, tor he was never so whipt for being a naughty Boy, as I caus'd him to be; and well he escap'd so, having like to have lest behind him a most pretious remedy against several temale distemp-

1 ĺ

1

1 ir

in

m

th

il

9

20

ers; a Recipe, as infallible against all manner of obstructions, as ever was applyed to any Chalk, or Outmeal Enter, since Eve lay in with Cain in her sust that Knights incomparable Adventures, and how he was secured; and had a particular account of the pleafant dress he was in: never did any thing tickle me more, than the Relation, how ampy and fully I was, revenged of him; yet I could not but entertain a thought that might incline to pity him; but it would extend no further than to send him his Cloathes, and withall a Letter, to give my self the pleasay satisfaction on of laughing at him, and those sufferings he underwent by my procurement; the words and sense were to this purpose.

The Letter.

Sir,

I Am much troubled that one of your age and experiance should prove so meer a Novice in Loves-School, as to be guilty of any amorous erratum, that should deserve the lash: I see now you are a meer Baby in our
ex. and ought to be whipt again into a better under standing. What, trust that Woman whom you have abused! Why, a Child of the first head, in the non-age of Amorous matters, in the Hanging sleeves of Courtship, knew this as a Maxime-that if Love, though never so fervent, be once by abuse converted into hatred, the woman is indefatigable in her revenge, till Death half put an end to the Controversie. Henceforth be better advised from me, how you behave your self before your little Sparkling Goddesses (as wantonly you are pleasold to call them;) if you will preserve your good esseem,

f

e

t

5,

d

1

į.

t.

1

le-

HT

W

ge

rt-uer

the

ath

ad-

1860 es-

78 pd

and be dayly cherishs with their Soul winning, and ravishing Smiles, you must not be relax in you offerings ? but if by flighting, cozenage, &c you instigate their in seft Deities to revenge, nothing but an absence as distant m the two Poles, hall protect you from their Subtle and freedy revenge. And now, thank me Sir, that mine bath fallen fo flightly on your Shoulders, baving giving a stript bimmar, for the Gown I fould have had: I am forry though I had not fecured you witnesses of manhood, that they might have been Testimonies continually by me, to affure my felf you will not for the future abuse my love by fondly affecting an other. Lastly, hearing that pon are clad, as if you were fent Embassadour from the Northern Witches to their Emperor the Devil, I thought fit to fend you some Cloaths (in lieu of those Rings you left with my Hu, band) which are more [ntable for humain conversation. But let me advise you. baunt me no more in them, left I conjure you out of them ugain, and the Devil into you. Be wife, and have a care of being amorous, when pennyless.

> Your abused, in part revenged, &c.

I commanded the Messenger to observe his carriage in reading the Letter, who told me, all the mad-men in the World, put them altogether, could not in their most extravagant gestures, have express madness so to the life as he did. However, he was not so mad, but that he did put on his Cloaths, which upon old acquaintance so complyed, as to fit him to a hair. Soon after he was discharged; and now invoking the Devil to be of his Cabinet Councel, he walkt into a solitary place, that he might hatch mischief, that is, be revenged on me, my Husband, or any else that he supposed

b

N

fr

6

de

071 an

fo we

posed might be his rivals. He was quickly furnished with a misch vious design, agreeable to his desire; and how could he otherwise, for there are millions of hellish imps of the worser fort, who continually attend the motions of the malitious and revengeful, to execute the commands of such who care not how they precipitate others and themselves into ruine and design uction.

This stratagem he contrived, by the help of a little credit he had yet surviving, he puts himself into a new riding garb, mounted with sword and pistol; having gitten a Perriwig of a colour clean contrary to what he usuall wore; having for the better carrying on his Plot, procured a false beard, with a black patch on one of his eyes; in this disguise, the most discerning eye of his most intimate, and familiar friends and acquaintance, could not have discovered him who he way. In this equipage he rides out of town, some half-score miles, only to dirty his horse and boots; and leaves a Letter with a Friend to be delivered to my own hands, in these terms.

Tyreged year

is the formed, but

osmi-bem No is -2011; his logocher, foods nor in their b

The

The Answer to the former Letter.

Madam,

ORrather Mad-dame, for the that is madder than you was begotten in Monte Gibello, where troubling the Sulphurous wombe of that burning Mountain, was belieft into the World, and carried on the back of a whirlwind, to disturb the inhabitants thereof. Think not I will trouble my felf to answer particularly every flouring investive, the which your letter is fluft withal, but shall tell you in general, you are too dangerously wicked for my acquaintance; and he that intends to contract a friend-Jup with Hell, must first shake hands with you; your eyes will be his light, to guide him; your cheeks, and breaks, are his high way; and you mouth the gate or entrance thereinto. I do not intend to buy repentance at so dear a rate, as ever to see you again; therefore your threats were needless. I am not yet fallen in love with my winding freet, that I should court Death, or hug a Contagion. My Sense of smelling is indifferently well recovered of its late distemper, and can now distinguish the scent of sound Bodies from putrifaction. My eyes too have regained their fight, and can plainly fee the shedevilin you mangre all the paint, and sucus, that is on on that daub dface of thine. Prishee name me not at anytime, left thy breath for ever poyfon my memory; and to that intent, forget that ever I had a being; and lo wishing thou never badit one, I take my eternal farewell of thee, &cc.

th

th

00 le

hi

ly

CC

hi

0

th

31

CO

th

G

b

to

th li

ĺ

This Letter he fent me, to the intent I might believe he was so far from revenging himself on me, that he never intended to fee me more; by which means he acilitated his purpose. In prosecution thereof, late In the evening he came to Town, and directed his course to our house; upon his alighting, he seemed much tyred, which we verily believed, his horse being all of a foam; and defiring his Chamber might be thewn him, it was done accordingly; and order being taken for a Sack-posser, he supr it up, and laid his head to reft; he lay abed fomewhat long the next day, pretending indisposition by reason of his long iburney, but getting up ; he feemed fomewhat pleafant, calling for a pint of Sack for his and his Landladves Mornings draught, affuring me, that as a Aranger he would not be indebted for any civilities he should receive in my house. I on the other side, feeing him fo forward to part from his money, gave him a confiderable lift by my usual way of spunging: Dinner time approaching I askt him what he would have; who ordered me to provide variety of what was in leafun ; not imagining that Table, on which this meat thould flar d, thould fo foon prove the Stage on which a bloody Tragedy must be acted. A little before we face down to dinner, I fent for my friend (that lay with me that night I acted my revenge) to participate in our good cheer; who coming, we late down together, there being no other, than this dilguifed Gencleman , my Husband, my Self, and Friend, We did eat, and drink freely , about half dinner this Gentleman feemed to be very officious in helping me at laft, Madam faid he, I will help you to one bit more, which you shall not refuse for my fake; I returning him thanks, in an instant he whipt off with his knife, my Hurbands ear, and laid it hastily on my Trencher,

C. HI

Trencher; and turning his head quick about, be not angry, Sir, (faid he) you shall have bitt for bitt; and thereupon endeavoured to cut off my nofe, but I was to nimble for him, and by running out escap'd the danger a my Friend observing what had prit, being too suddenly done to be prevented, stept from the Table, and drawing, bid the Rogue disguised draw too, or he would pin him to the wall, for this matchless piece of villany, whereupon he did, but behaved himself so ill, that my friend wounded him desperately in the body at the first pass; concuding he had received his Mortal wound, he resolved not to dye alone wherefore he made a full pals, and fo running upon his Adversaries point, each dyed at once by the swords of one another. I foon returned with a long trais of Mirmidons, whom I had inftructed how to chastife this infolence, but Lord! what a confusion was I in, when I faw the two combatants lye dead on the floor, and my Husband gazing on them motionless, like one converged into a Statue for the loss of his ear , which he should have lost, by right, long before that time.

Some more busie then the rest, stirring their bodies, the salse beard of the disguised sell off, by which he was presently known who he was; and because it was every where known through the town, how this Gentleman had spent what he had on me, and was abused for his pains, I was immediatly cryed out upon, as the Authoress of all this mischies, I endeavoured to excuse my self, by relating what he had done; with the cutting my Husbands Ear off, and the endeavouring to cut off my Nose; but this allegation signified little. Searching his pockets, they found a note, or letter sealed, & seeing it was directed to me, they then, without my consent, break it open, imagining they should find therein the mystery of this tragical encounterere all they could discovre was only his intension ordinary

0

fe

P

th

I

2

th

A

tl

it

5

li

ting off my Note, and my Husbands Ear : the Lines were these which follow.

Watiate Strumpet ; perjur'd painted-Whore. Who halt the vice of all thy Sex, and more, Devil may worfe; for thou canst by thy face Make Men Apoltate in the State of Grace. Be thee I fell : then did my Pagan knee Oft render Worthip to thy Devilree. I (being conversed) Idols won't allow . Down must the Dagon of thy face I vow. See where it lyes : that tdol, once ador'd. Must be for want of it, by all abhor'd. Thy Husband lends an Ear, then let thy Nofe. To Sifter-Sense ber wretched State dischife. And then consult thy Glass . See thy fare face Is vanishe, and Deaths-head stands in the place. Thy lips, some Ne Etar sipt from I suppose Will be exclaim'd on, fogh, they want a Nofe. And may thy [parkling eyes, which me did win, Be thought to kindle from a fire within. May ulcers seize thee, for the wrong th'ast done. And living rott, without compaffion.

The rumour of this sad disaster ran swister than a Torrent through the Town, insomuch that our house was so cram'd with People, that our servants were forc'd to acquit their imployments, to give room to the inquisitive Incomers, a chirpresonwas tent for to dresmy Husband; & a Coroner to sit upon the other two that were sain; glad! was, that I had the opportune excuse to leave the Company; and attend my Hubband; by which means I avoided the hearing so many thousand accrimations that were said to my charge knift e mean time the Jury sound their Deaths happed by Man-flaughter: and fo thereby though we were present, we could not be found accessories.

The noise of this accident did also flye into the Countrey, not escapeing the ear hardly of any one Gueft that frequented our House ; report had rendred the Fact fo horrible, and my Husband and Self fo notorioully accessory thereunto, that now all our former wickedness, and roguery was drawn up in a long Scrol, and this last added in Capitals, to make up a compleat Sum of Villany. By which means we had little refort to our House; and our House rent being great, and our Trading small, my Husband and I were now necessitated to put our heads together, by some other means to patch up a future lively-hood. Thou feeft, faid he, the more serious, and reputable fort of People, shun our house, as if old Belzebub were there fitting abrood to hatch those diseases which should be the deftruction of the Universe. And therefore to be revenged of their thus flighting us, I will meet them abroad, and what moneys they forbear to fpend with me, I will compel them to lend, and more. Though I am not fout and resolute enough or my self to do this, yet thou knowest Humpbrey our Tapiter, is a frong Fellow, and hath a good heart; he and I, fear not, will do the business.

For my part, I must needs consess, I question'd not Humphrey's performances, having made try al again thereof; I ever fancyed to try experience, and marking what a rough-hew'n Fellow he was, all Bone and Sinew, with a face like a tann'd Bulls hide, I could not be at quiet, till I had found the difference between this Man, nerv'd with wire, and others, that were clean limb'd, and streight slender bodyed joynted like Bartholemen-Babies, with quaking Custard-faces; but so vast a disproportion between them, that were I

E 4

Widdow

Part &

th

th

th

de

re

he

TO

fu

ge

W

A

T

-

lu

Qu

the

Cei

bu

ma fin

for

in i

at i

paf

hot

1 fee

WI

des

Widdow, and were courted by a Knight worth fire thousand pounds a year, with an handsom fair whitely face, I should hardly be persuaded to accept of a Lady-fhip, but for the fake of his revenew.

To be fhort, Sir Philip Sidney's Cowards were not much ranker than my Husband; but, thought I, if he hath courage enough to look a Man in the face, and bid him stand, Humphrey hath strength, and valour enough to compel them to deliver. Wherefore I perfwaded my Husband by all means to go forward with what he had propounded: I was the more willing to it, in hopes that he would be taken some time or o ther, and as he was mark'd for a Knave, fo he might be hang'd for a Theif; and to be freed from an impotent Husband. He feemed well fatisfied that I affent. ed to his proposal, and look'd upon it to be a good Omen, and promised success to his undertaking, On the other fide (faid he) you must not be idle at he me, you know there is now none but the debauched that refort to our house, and therefore fuit their inclination ons, if ought can be gotten by fo doing. Your daughter is young, and handsom, let her be the fign to attract; but pray let me have you furnish your felf with other Utenfils, The Boy too is no fool, who, by observing your carriage, and direction, hath very all spent his time- if he cannot to erably pimp as well for others, as his Mother. Well, (well, (laid 1) huse band, you are merrily disposed ; look after your bafinels, I thall manage my own well enough, I warrant you. My Huband and his Tapfter, committed many sobberies in a little time: and very few. but what were on our Guelts ; who freely discourling their affairs over a glais of Wine after Supper, many times dile covering what store of money they carried with them, and for what purpole, gave them a fair opportunity in

٠

X

e

d ä

h

0

.

.

10

d

n

11

-

Ŋ

Ш

植

1

di

補 сă

śij

48

相

the Morning to set on them, and deprive them of it. Nay, so little suspected he was of robbing, that several have returned to our house after he hath robbid them, and maid their complaint to him, how basely they had been abused; it was alwayes his care, and indeed therein he shewed the utmost of his prudence, to return home with all the speed he might possibly, after he had rob'd any; by which means, he and his Man rob'd a long time fecretly.

It was generally their good fortune to meet with fuch as durft not fight them; a thing that Travellers generally, and justly, are to be condemned for; who, with easie parting with their money, they not only hew how meanly spirited they are, but encourage the Thief in his robberies. Whereas, on the contrary, would they shew themselves as desperate, and as resoluce as their affaulters, it is my opinion they would quicly turn tail, as not daring to venture the hazard of the dispute. But to return, though my Husband succreded fo well in his attempts, by meeting with none but Cow-hearted fellows ; yet once, waiting with his man in a thicker, earely in the morning, for the pafling by of a Gentleman that had lain the night before in our house, who had a considerable Sum of Money, in his Port-mantle, there travelled by another in the dawning of the day, whom, by a miftake, my husband affaults; the other drawing a Piftol, fired it uhim, but mist him; however, the report had like to have done as much mischief, as if the bullet had put through his body, for with fear he fell from his hotfe, and had like to have faved the Hangman a abour, by breaking his own neck. Our Tapster feeing his Master fall, and verily believing he was kill'd by that was resolved to revenge his death; had not he feen another come Rideing

th

no

to

fri

pre his dec don

der

to him (which was the Gentleman they lay in wait for) which made him altar his purpole, and ride way, for the preservation of his own life. The Gentleman supposing too, that he had really dispatche this Pad, no: feeing him move all this while (which he confest to me afterwards, he politickly did, to the intent he might be exempted from fighting, and fo curely fee the event of the Combat : the other two that came to his affiftance judg'd the fame, and advised him to Ride away with all speed to the next Justice. not only to avoid the present, danger, for (said he) this other Rogue is rid away but to get fome more of his fellows, to make a further attempt) but you will also receive the thanks of the Country. for destroy ing such Gaterpillars, that eat up the Fruit of their Land. Setting Spurrs to their Horses away the Gallopt, to find out the next Juftice ; my Husband perceiving they were gone, got up, and mounting rod full speed home, without so much as once looking be hind him. Coming home, he found me almost drown in tears, and half frighted out of my wits ; not le much for forrow of his death (which news I had pi varely fent me by our Tapiter) but for fear, as foons it should be known who this flain Theif was, Thoul have my goods instantly fiezed on, and my doors ha up. I was in a Room by my felf, getting some Plan together, with other choice portable things ; 10 coming to the flair head, with an intent to conve them out of the house, met with my Husband to butt; whole face bring pale and wan, by reason of date great fear, possessing with so strong a conceit, the this was his Ghoft, that the fright made me skeet her out, and letting fall what I had in my Apron, I a lettered. This sudden surprize so amazed him, to him he stood indeed like an apparition at the Chamber The cd foor, and had not the power to come in : this increast my belief, however, I pluckt up my Spirits, and boldlyaskt him, what he was, and what he came for? He heakingly, in a low voyce, (for he was more than hilf dead) answered, he was my Husband, and that he time to fee me. My Husband, faid I is dead ; and if thou be his damn'd Ghost, I conjure thee, by all that isgood, presently depart, and trouble me not now, fince whilft living, I could never be content, nor at quiet for thee. Not speaking one word, he turn'd his bick upon me, and went down flairs. I never beleved my felf a Conjurer till now (although I have been called Witch a thousand times) and indeed I knew not what to think of it, (comparing altogether) whether this was a phantalm, or not, but troubing my thoughts no further about that matter, I took up what I had dropt, and getting into the yard, would have march'd off with what I had in my lap, had he not hastened after me, and holding me fast by the arm, told me, that he was not quite dead, though almost fightned out of his life, and therefore begg'd me I would not remove any thing that might tend to his prejudice; and if I would walk in he would tell me his whole morning Adventure.

The two Gentlemen coming to the Justice, amply declared what an eminent piece of Service they had done their Country, by killing on the place one Padder, and putting to flight another; and that if his Wight pleased to Summon a quantity of the Parish, to desend them if occasion should require, they would have them the place where the dead lay. Hereupon there were a great many that offered themselves freely to go along; but coming to the place-found neither man, nor horse, nor the sign of one drop of blood. The Countrey People anding themselves thus abused,

EO

m

1

H

3.

To

W

BM

5.

Sh

and not knowing what the delign of these two Gentlemen might be, in putting such a trick upon them, laid hold on them, and carried them back to the Justice; who being informed that there was not the least appearance of what had pretendedly been done; aske them the reason, why they thus abused themselves and others, with meer forgeries: to which they both replyed, that their eyes had seen what their tongues related, and concluded, that other padders, confederate with this, had carried off the Body of their Brother, that they might avoid suspition. The Justice and others were of the same opinion, and so the Gentlemen were dismiss.

Our Tapfter hearing that his Mafter was in health, returned home, refolving for the future, never to ha zard his life with fo great a peice of cowardize, and to speak the truth, it was high Itime to leave off, lince they were shrewdly suspected by the whole Town to be High-way men, they being feen to often together on Horse-back, both early and late, My Trade however diminishe not; for I was taken notice of, all the Country round, to be a dealer in le crets, and ready money commodities; nay, there were not a few honest mens wives, that would not flick to trust me in the disposal of the whole Cargo of their reputation. Nay, I was fo excellent at my art, that neither Privateer, nor Publican would act any difficalt matter without my advice, I could Pimp, if oc calion ferved most incomparably , and I was looks up on as the best Procure & in all our Countery; which would not have been, but that I was fo much tyre with my daily, nay, hourly Visitants; for though A and Time have conspired to ruine the glories of face, I can affure you, the remains may inform they were good, Being so generally noted not

.

ıd

h,

1

.

VC

he

fo

ic,

cn

Ce-

ere

to eit

hat

ffi-

OC.

up:

四年 五

for my beauty, but my art in Pandarizing, a Song was composed on me by some riming Doggril or other, which I will sing you thus, and so finish the Story of my former lifes actions,

I. AT the Sign of the Swan There liveth a man, Igo not about to deceive you;
Ten thousand to one,

If you come, he is gone,

That his Wife may the better receive you.

2. Lovely brown is her hair, Her face comely fair,

Her waste you may fpan, 'is fo flender ;

Negro black are eyes, Passing white are her thighs,

All the allu ements of Venus attend her.

3. Her Twins of delight,

(Which are alwayes in fight)

Her breasts which are whiter than snow.

By their panting de beat An Alarm to the feat.

To combate her Lovers below.

4. With her smiles she invites

Which I would if I durit form

Which I would, if I durft fo prefume;

But I fear she bath fires Which will quench my desires,

But my body to after confume.

S. She's an excellent Pimp,

She's Bawd, She's a whore, that's too common

If you intend for to fly

Hells flames, come not night;

She asbing, that is worfe than a Woman

CHAP

Pe

the

II

De

CO

me

m2

TO Wi

WO

the

ter

Que

fan

ble

WH.

tem

ng

WIL

taci

di B

WOO

of t

his

he

her

that

CHAP. VI.

Mrs. Dorothy goes with her new Acquaintance, who perswades her to accommodate a harren Gentlewoman a friend of hers, with her child, as soon as born. I character of this Gentlewoman, and her amoroni practices: the manner of her being rob'd by one of her Gallants; he is apprehended and executed. Mrs. Dorothy is delivered of a Boy, who is made Heir to great Estate, and she highly rewarded for her consent.

He Old Woman having thus finisht her Story the addrest her felf tome, faying, Dear Heart you fee how free I have been with you, not concealing from your knowledg any one remarable paffage of mi life, though never to infamous or fcandalous /l and though our acquaintance is very young, vet put you confidence in me, and queftion nor, but that I fall fo affift you in the management of your concern, that you hall have caule to thank me as long as you live. Hereupon the acquainted me, that there was Gentleman (nor far off) well known to her, that had been married a dezen years and upwards to a very beautiful, and well proportion'd Gentlewoman; ye had no iffue by her; that for want of an Heir, the Estare after his decease would fall to the younger bro ther; that it was a very great grief to the Gentleman but especially to his Wife ; and (faid she) this Gen tlewoman knowing me to be a person fit to be advise withal about matters of this mature, often fent forme to her house, where some years dince, I counselled he to make trial, whether the or Husband was in fault

MARC

Kİ

A

1

V.

Mich

joyment of at least a score of several lusty young in order thereunto I have helpt her at times to the en-Persons. And because I would take the furest way, the never had more than one at one time, and him neither not above a quarter of a year together ; he then Intrating our expectations, I counfell'd her to make a myal of another. The first I made choice of for Her, was a proper young flaxen-hair'd man, tall and lender; a delicate young man he was indeed, whole complexion (being Sarguine) furnished him with more hear than is in any other temperature; which made his hair like fine threads of Gold, twirl in rings, orrather you might call them the lines and hooks with which the little wanton God of love did usually ingle for female hearts; had you feen them, you the heart of a Vestal-Maiden, or the most resolved Vowould have fworn that they were sufficient to catch quick and nimble, and penetrateing; he had a ftrong fancy, a quick invention; and a most incomparable ntterance; and his carriage and deportment was incredible winning; whose single touch of the hand was fufficient to have thaw'd the most congealed-frozen temper in the world into affection. Norwithftanding all these allurements, and feir promising properties with near upon an half years mutual converse with ach other; the found her expectations frustrated.

Being resolved to make further tryal (for the would not be convinc'd that the was either defective barren,) the confulted me, how the might be rid of this her amorous Hot-four, and have fome other in inplace, of a different constitution; alleadging that he being of the same complexion, she verily believed her impregnancy proceeded thence ; faying further, that the had heard feveral, as Well Phylitions as others fronly affirm, that the grand reason, why seve of ral Women have no children , was the too near aft nity of their husbands complexion and conflictment ! to their own; and that on the other lide, none more infallible enjoy'd the fruits of their labours, the of the foring of their bodies, than such, whose corporal temperaments were diffimular or different.

th

Understanding her humour, I was resolved to comply with her in whatfoever she defired (being fo proply with her in whatfoever she delired (being so pro-fitable a friend to me) but I knew not how to dil co place her Sanguine complexion'd Gallant, who grew if by this time a most passionate Lover; at length 1 be to thought me to perswade him to follicite her waiting of Gentlewoman, making him believe that the was atdently in love with him, and that he had a good Sam to by her, which would infallibly be at his devotion; my lar credulous young Gamester greedily swallowed my his advice, and followed to a hair my dictations ; having he won her (for I know not who could withftand him) it he came to me, and informed me of the time, and Co place, that he should commence those delights they in to tended to continue as long as life lasted; being jay con ful of this opportunity, I presently addrest my fell the to my Miffris, giving an account to her of her friends new courthip, and when it should be confumated the adviling het to watch them, and eatch them in the ad the by which means the faould be freed from his future up, addreffes, and likewife confirm her Maids fecrefie and mo fidelity to her. All which the performed, by threatning live her Maid to turn her away, and fhame her to boot, I gar ever the affociated her felf, or entertained him agu hir in her house ; and calling him falle , fairhles man, an I know not what, banisht him for ever from her pre to fence for his pnconstancy.

The next Dick I pickt up for her was a man of l tric color

lou pte

160

ng

1

colour as contrary to the ness, being swarthy; whose hair was as bracked ness, but he was more with child in hugger-mugger, but he was more his too, proved an eff. Aual Operator. She now be-0en to suspect her self of barrennes; but being promptd with hopes, and strangely induced by the sence of bleafure which the reapt in the variety of her amotous Confidents, the refolved on a third, a Gentle-man of her own election, who having been a confiderable time a Student in the Inns of Court, was returned into the Country, to enjoy that plentiful effate his DY lately deceas'd father had left him, the antient Seat of his Ancestors; of stature so low, that he could but Intake the upper-hand of a dwarf, being only elevaof led by the pole ab we him. She was fain at fielt to Court him, inflead of his courting her: and indeed, I could not fee how he could prefume (without her eny. couragement) to carels a Gyantels, fo much taller ell than himfelf.

There was not so great a disproportion in their bodi dies, as there were conformity and agreeablenes in their wills; and that the Soul of his which was coopt ut up, and confined within too narrow limits, became more active and vigorus; fo that attacking her with a lively and sprightful courage puffeffed himself of the gurison without atedious liege of a 12 months court-hip, his hair was of a darkish brown, or chest-nut cofour, non handsome enough to be a woman, yet too fair to be a man. Though he was not tall, yet nature exptell no irregularity in his formation : being fymmefil trical, or proportionably composed from the lines

tit

ch

lo

th fre

tr

to fet

0

WI

jay

CT

CI

Wa

COL

P

CC

my fer

ne

ne

of his face you might have collected Capital Letter an enough to have spelt a Gentleman; and not an action, or expression of his (excepting this of his too incimate familiarity with another mans wife) which did not largely declare the immenfity of his Soul, and the virtues that thereunto belonged.

So dearly the loved him, (that notwithstanding he did not answer her exipe ations in making her Belly (well) the fo doted on his Company, and converte, that the give her husband too many palpable cause to suspect her honesty, and integrity towards him. Not, but that for the fake of an Heir, which he queffion'd whether he should ever ger himself) he would ho be content to wink) as he hath done several times] at the freedome his wife hath taken with feveral & thers besides himself. But looking on my little dapper squire to be to little for that purpose, and that would come fort home, as to that bufinels, bu took an occasion to affront him, that it might product a quarrei, that should eloign him from his house, and M further intimacy with his wife. However, though he his had low and undervaluing thoughts of this Gentle w man, by reason of his stature, yet he found him in field, full as tall as himfelf in true valour, being (# die we fay) metrie to the back. It was the hap of this Gentleman to be desperately wounded by the lester in and fo dangeroully, that it was supposed his wounds would end all the future differences between them; in however recovering, this Combate seperated theme in rernally.

My Mistris was fo well acquainted with the loss of her Gallants, that the was not much troubled to be deprived of the fociety of this last; but all het trouble was to get another in his room. Shee sp plyed her felf to me again, her undeceiving Oracla and received her accordomed comfort, that in a little time I would procure her another, that should our throw the rest, at least a Barrs length; I was not ch nd long in the procuration; for there was a Gentleman that trequented our House, who spent his money very freely, yet had not a foot of land, neither had he any الع الع mide, or tools, but the high way, fword and pistol to bring him in a lively hood. He was a lufty well feman, and red-hair'd; a complexion that hath often ct gone through-flich. I had often tryed him my felf, and m. therefore I could the better commend him to a friend, li-One day (his flock being low, and he ar that time in our ild house) he desired me to lend him half a peice. I be-J ing glad of this opportunity, told him I would, and withall defired to confer with him in private; he p-nd joyfully accepted my motion, thinking I had some femet delign to take my accustomed use for the loan ; S, but he was ftrangly furprized, and even diffracted with ct excellive joy, when he heard me tell him, what & nd Miftris I had provided for him; that he fould have he his belly full of sporting, & be liberally paid for it too." le-We appointed the day when I should introduce him in 10 to his new Mistris's acquaintance, but with this condition, that I should share with him in his gettings. It was concluded on, and he possest of his Treasure, to cly the full content of them both. My House was now his ds conftant receptacle, or dormitory, but when he was 1; in the embraces of his miftres; and he was very honest 24 ingiving me my thare, my half part, and commonly spent the rest (to my advantage) of what he had reof crived; and to the intent the more might come into be my pocker, I advised her by all means not to starve his iet fervice, but incourage him often with fums of mo-P ney; urging moreover, that the poor Gentleman could ic, not but be at great charges in maintaining himfelf nd

ŀ

he

d

W

in

is,

m fo

P

in a strange place, exiling himself freely from his on his habitation, to be near at her Command; beside the mich great expence he is daily at in costly broths, jellie, T with other provecatives, or restorers of decai'd at minute.

I need d not to have tempted her to liberality, helen being naturally prone thereunto; always extravagant funday rewarding kindnelles of this nature. She began non Mift to grow very pensive, and unusually melancholy, un fee all her swelling hopes thus dasht; and was noth met focuable as the used to be with her friend; which gan by him fome cause to suspect her inconftancie, or that the would speedily defert him, and accept some others his which put him on the contrivance to fave formething to that might be a support to him, if his fallary should me fail, or at leastwise keep him alive, till his Country oth Contributions, or padding incomes should supply his wit profule, and unn ceffary expences.

When ever he came, the entertain'd him with fud of an undreserved franckness, that she concealed nothing and from him, that might either please his fancie, or satis ele he his curiofity. Understanding the was admirabled the her Needle, he defired her to thew him forme pieces of ice her art, that he might by the applauding of the one par admire the other. She readily condescended to what h. propounded; being glad he had demanded a thing in which came within the verge of her power to pleat him withal. Opening a large Cyprels-Cheft, he thew'd him great variety of excellent pieces of he to own hand-working; and withal he discovered several to bags cramm'd with other pieces, which he had a great er minde to handle ; which I conceiv'd she shew'd him out of meer oftentation, telling him withal, that " long as one p nny was in them his pockets frould not be unfurnisht with money ; and that when all those baggi m les were emptied, her Husbands annual estate would la mickly fill them again, and fix times as many.

its, This affurance of having his constant stipend coninved, prevailed not in the least on this Caret-pated illains ingrateful designs; but he resolved, with the stift opportunity, to make himself Master of those time, although be knew he must unavoydably sosehis the acquaint him, that her Husband was gone some the menty miles off, and that he would not return in sive the place where he lived. This damn'd Dog, hearing the place where he lived. This damn'd Dog, hearing the place where he lived. This damn'd Dog, hearing the proceeded from his thinking what a long time he had no enioy his Mistress uncontroulably whereas it was the otherwise, for now he knew how to kill two Birds with one stone.

However, that the might not mistruft him as guilty d of any treachery, he behaved himself so pleasantly, and his Careffes were fo agreeable, that his Miftrefs chem'd her felf the happiest woman in the world, in the enjoyment of the person of so facerous, and most accomplisht Lover; nay, fo fond the was of his company, that she was resolv'd to make the most of him in. her husbands absence; and therefore caused him to lie in the house, not induring him our of her light, till the dy before her husbands returne; at which time he walkt out : what feaftings, junkerings, and jollitings together there were in that time, none are better able to conceive than fuch who, with their large purfes, have inlarged hearts, caring not how dear the purchase is fo that the pleasure be great, though not of two minutes lasting. You must understand, that I went hips with him in thefe delights ,as well as in his Profits; I had a liquorish tooth Rill inmy head, and therefore

be

his ju

an he ab

b

V

fa

if

ti

W

P

t fi

a

t

1

herefore would not be out of call, fo participat and with them in their Viands, and Banquetings; Indeed bid I was ever an excellent fmell feaft.

That day (wherein he went a broad, as I told you) was the curfed time in which he procured affiftants, wo on carry on his hellish plot, which had like to have proved my utter raine. It feems he appointed them about four of the clock in the evening to come to the Gentle-womans house, where (as before) we were all making merry; and knowing the ftrength of the house, there being never a man at home, the Green w being gone with his Malter, and only a foot boy left, he appointed only two that should manage the delign beside himself; who knocking at the gate, and the foot-boy opening it to them, they instantly leiz's him, both binding, and gagging him. Having bolid the Gate, they advanced into the house, and feeming ly very peaceful, they mounted the stairs, having secured those who were below in the fame manner, if they had done the boy; aftoon as I faw two men now entring the Chamber, were we were, I then concluded that we were betrai'd, and that the principal Traytor was our supposed friend; I hereupon opened as Wide as my jaws would give me leave; which one of the rogues perceiving, clapt a gag within my mouth, and so kept them at that gaping distance, the Rogues might have had some consideration before they had ferved me thus, as knowing I had few reeth to barricadoe my gums from the injury they might to ceive from that confounded instrument which Arecht my mouth afunder.

The good Gentlewoman, feeing how barbaroully they handled me, did not question they would exercise the like cruelty next on her; to prevent which, tell on her knees, befeeching them nor to abufe her,

Ou)

5,10

vel

w

the ere

the om ft,

gn

2 2

d

par and throwing them the keyes of what they lookt for, ed bid them take what they pleased. Her accorfed Vilhin had the impudence to view the tears run down ber lovely checks, without the least remorfe, or piry on a foul to dearly loved him, he only rais'd her with his hands, affuring her, the thould receive no other inprie than the lois of what money the Riewed him, and his eternal happines; for I know Madam (faid he) how infariate you are, how variable, how changeble upon the flightest occasion; I am not insentible what variety you have already tyred (the more to blame me that imforced him;) and how many more you intend, may be sufficiently drawn from your unfarished humour, and inconstant nature. And now ifyou love your life, flir not till we are gone; and mank our lenity, that we have not fecured you otherwayes. Taking up the money, every one carrying a part ; hold (faid one) we have forgot fomething yet, that Ladies hands must be tyed, least she ungag that ferious and now filent Matron there : her hands and legs must be tyed too, lest the talk or walk to fright us. Having fo done, come now let us go (faid the Red headed Traytor) it is high time, lest that old witch swallow on of us ; don't you fee how the gapes? God byon (good Madam) you are bound to be con-, hant now ; dear Partner (pointing to me) farewell, I thank you for your procuration money, and so away they went; in less than half an hour the Gentlewoman had with her teeth fer her hands at liberty, which foon gave my hands, feet, and tongue the like, and discending the stairs, we found the maids, and boy bound, and gigg'd; having loos'd them the whilper'd her boy in the ear, I knew not what, but it was to fetch a Constable, which he did in an intant; and whilft I was conduling my Friends loss, and misfor-

de

fo

pl

fi

fic

lo

61

0

W

ih

CC

h

TC

6 H

n

h th

2

21

C

1

une. I was apprehended by her command, and con- re veyed to Goal, there to bewail my own too rigid fate, w

I cannot much blame her suspicion of me, fince then ti were arguments too many, and strong enough to perfwade her I could not be innocent, and therefore what ever I alledged in my justification stood for a Cypher. I fent for my husband, with many other friends, ba none of them could prevail with her from fendingme to Prilon ; feeing there was no remedy, I was refolved to endure my confinement as patiently as I could.

These three rogues had their horses not far off, ready fadled, which they mounting, rode directly in that road where they were fure to meet their prize; and as the Devil would have it, they waited not two hours, be fore they could perceive two riding directly towards them, and foon after could difcern them to be the Gentleman and his groom; the first of an undaunted resolution, but weakly, by reason of a Chronical distemper, that had a long time aff at, d him ; his man, by his bulk, shipe and looks, appeared like one that could teach a Guy of Warwick to fight, and give a prefident of fuch a valour, as only become a Royal Champion to own. The Gentleman was first commanded to fland and deliver, which he did, but it was a P flol which he discharged withour any execution; they fired at him again; and wounding him in the fword arm, he dropt his fword, and whilft he was fubmitting to their disposal, his man lets spurs to his horse, and mon valiantly ran for it; getting to the top of a little hill, not far diffant, where turning his horse head, molt manfully about, he had the confidence to look on, whileft the Thieves robbid his Mafter.

The gentleman feeing himfelf thus deferred by this lubberly-cowardly-Hog driver was ready to burt With anger; but knew not how to come at him to be

revenged

te.

10

ď.

it.

Ct,

T Dt

ed dy

ad

he

di

he

ed II.

n,

al al

10

1 fi-

D,

to A

H,

A

B,

15

e

d

revenged; and therefore begg'd the robbers, in lieu of what money they had taken from him, to do him the kindness, to baste his man foundly that stood on yondet hill, as a meer looker on. I, I, faid the one, I will give you that fatisfaction presently my felf alone, and fo letting spurs to his horse, rode up to him, and complemented him no otherwise at first, than with the flit of his fword, which notwithstanding made his fides and shoulders smart to some purpose; this great looby took all this with incredible patience; but the Pad by chance cutting him; nay, now faid he, flefh and blood is not longer able to endure; and with that drew abroad two egg'd Scotch-fword, and handled it fo well. that he cut this fellow off his horse presently; the other two feeing their fellow over-matcht, advanted with all speed, and both affaulted him at once : but he leeing them approach, and being now blooded, made ready to receive them by drawing a Pistol, which he fired fo luckily, that the shot deprived him of one of his enemies more, and he had now no inequality of number to oppose him. Success had so flesht him, that he fought more like a Devil, than a man, laying about him backwards, and forwards; forhat he difinabled the third, which was the first Plotter. Had bis Mafter been able to fight, and there had been as many more aginthim, he so behaved himself, that there was no work for any to do but himself, Thus did this one min, who had never fought before and therefore like an horse, knew not his own strength till it was tryed) conquer three, that were accounted Cocks of the Hectors.

The Gentlemen searching their Portmancicks, and finding 400 lib. was amazed at so considerable a purchase; and securing it, with this surviving Rogue, and their Horses, rode directly to the next Justice;

where

i

e

h

P

W

Z

th

de

19 up

nò

of

afi

10

re

W gi

th rai

ral

for 6

for

WI

Wh

me

Pri

joy

for

where leaving the Booty in his hands for the prefent 1 the Prisoner had his mittimns drawn up, and was sen to the fame Gaol his Lanlady, the Hoftels was in Not withit anding all those disguizes he made use of to seen another man, he was known by me, and received from me a whole broad fide of just reproaches; which had like to have lunk him deeper, than the pressures of his present misfortunes could do. What (faid 1) did you not live too much at your eafe? had you not but too much plenty, which took you off those desperate courses, of might have done, which would with out doubt have brought you to the Gallowes in the end; but having fo little regard to your own wellfare, I could not expect much from you as to mine; though gratitude might have commanded you to have fludyed my prefervation, although you should hourly hazard your own. Inflead of applying (mooth, and foothing answers (which might have been as Cordals, or Balfom to my wounded mind) he gave me this corrafive, this Choak-pear, that if I would no hold my clack, which dinn'd his ears worfe than the Catarachts of Nile, he would declare before the Bench, upon his tryal, that he would never have don To foul a fact, but by my indigation; and that if held not my rongue, he affured me, that (lince he knew that it was impossible for him to escape with life) he loved me to well, that I should dye with him, to bear him company in the other world.

Perceiving what his desperate resolution was, thought good to alter the Scene of my chat, and be him to be patient; afforing him, that what I had fall was not out of any ill will, but to make him fentile how much I was his friend at all times; and that m own imprisonment (for his fake), troubled me not much, as the danger that he was in ; and that he migen

01.

en

on ad

his

1

out

th-

he

1

e;

ITE

y

nd

建 京 豆 餐 平

日云艺

accuse me, if he pleased, and so endanger my suffering with him; but I charged, withall, his Conscience with my innocencie in, and ignorance of what he and his accomplices had acted, contrary to my privity. It was some come fort to hear him then acknowledge before a great many witnesses, that I was no way accessary to his guilt; and when the Assistance, he acknowledged upon his Arraignment, that none abetted, or were concerned in what he had done, and their stood arraigned for, but himself and two others, which were slain in the contest. Where-upon I was discharged by Proclamation of Contr, note coming in against me; and he received sentence of death, which was accordingly executed three dayes afterward; he then again at the Gallows declaring to the spectators my innocencie in his robbery.

This Confession of his, I thought, would as well reintroduce me into the favour of the abused Gentlewoman, my former friend, as by his fuffering death give full fatisfaction to her inraged revenge. In order thereunto, after my Gael delivery, I fent her feveal Letters to pacific her passion, and implayed feveal friends to acquaint her with the reallity of my former fidelity, and prefent integrity : at length they for mediated with her in my behalf, that the fent for me (when her Husband was abroad) and in the walks of her Garden, discourft me largely, as to whatever had past between us, or any body elle by my means. And now, faid the, this last unhappy and unexpetted villany from a friend you procured me, and one dearly loved, hath tyed up my hands from ever enloying the like opportunities again. For my Husband hoding that the purchase he took from the Thieves was but a Pig of his own Sow, his own money, and mowing the principal Robber to be the Person 1 of-

fo

q

76 pi

th

A

fo

D

0

f

1

n

¥

'n

th

b

W

CO

fo

W

in

in ag

16

6

ten treated at our house with much civiliry, fhrewdly suspects, that I not only consented to the Robbery. but would be easily induced to believe to his death too, were it not for the great loss he knows I should receive by his death if he should dye without iffue. However he is much more cautious of me than he used to be, taking his money into his own cultody, and he lets a warch over me to observe what company I keep abroad, or entertain in our house : and therefore, if ever you intend to redeem your former credit and eflimation with me, fludy some project how I may carry on the delign afore propounded, of having an Heir, that the E tate may not pale to the next Brother. A man I cannot but hate, for feveral weighty The crookedness of his disposition, confiderations. and the unsuitableness of his humour to mine, were fufficient to make me not love him; but his infufferable wicked practifes, both against me, and my Husband, make me absolutely detell the very light of him. When I was first married (quoch the) I thought my felf as capable of conception as any the that ever worter head; & my husband being then healthful, & actively vigorous, foon confirming me, in the opinion of being a teeming woman : It feems I was with child, though I knew it not; and finding a great change and alteration in my body, I was fo ignorant, as to believe I was breeding some ill humours, which, if not timely purged away, might ingender a difease that might prove my death. My Husbands Brother (which was wh fer than my felf in that point) knew very well I was breeding young bones, the growth of which would infallibly lift him out of all his flourishing hopes of enjoying his Brothers Estate; therefore out of feeming tendernels, and vigilant care of the preferts tion of my health, followed my own perswations,

C

L

4

E

èÌ

y

n

1,

e

e

n

15

S.

8

H

1

d

É.

8

i

with his damn'd advice; and at the end I was induc'd to take a vomit to clear my stomack, he telling me, for certain, it might be very foul, fince I was fo frequently troubled with puking in the morning, and romiting after Dinner. An Apothecary of his own procuring (with his Devilleh instructions) made up the Composition, which, without imagining the least harm, I easily swallowed, which wrought with me fo frongly, that, having nothing left within my ftomack for it to work on, I thought it would have brought up my very heart with its appurtenances; the Devil of a Physitian all this while seemed to comfort me, by faying, be cheerful, Sifter; this will clear you (and lo it did of what it should not) and clense you of those malignant humours which so much prejudiced your healthful constitution; and that he might make fure work of me, counselled me to take a purge; and that would carry all downwards, and then my business was done; I poor easie fool, was quickly drawn to it, and the second time swallowed that, which the next day made what I went withal prove abortive.

I had often seen, but more especially heard, that this Doctor was no sooner gone from his Patient, but he was immediatly in the Company of my brother, which made me, with a great deal of good reason, tonjecture, they plotted no good together; wherefore I got two Doctors more to vilit my Husband, who plainly told me, at the first sight (both agreeing in one opinion) that he was poysoned. Hearing them say so, I could not sorbear; but, in the agony of my Spirit, cryed out, I know the Murderes; and their lives shall here, for the loss of his, make satisfaction in part, and in full, by their damnation hereaster. They desired me to be patient, assuring me that they would use their utmost skill to over.

power

1 đ

T

CO

th

dh

CT:

In

DC

leg

dic

nin

100 ma

fine

ha

you

by

ing

шу

hap

upo and

OWI

Effa

Rone

I

power the poyfon; and doubtlefsly he had dyed, had not thefe two eminent Artifts bestirred themselva to purpose, In a little time they raised him on his feet (which made his former Doctor berake himfell to his, having not been heard of by us fince;) but they could not affure me how long it would be ere he would be down again; for (faid they) he will be in infirm, impotent man, as long as he lives.

If now my hatred to my Husbands Brother benet juffly grounded, do you judge; and I hope heaven will not be offended with me, in finding out some way to disposses him of his hopes in having the Estate, who rob'd me of my fruitfulness, and would have deprived my Husband of bis life,

Madam (faid I) there is just now a plot come into my head; which if you please, shall be put in practice, and that is this. Since your Husband is thus infirm, and you barren, this most be the only way, which must crown your defines. I will imme diately go upon the fearch for some young thing with Child, whether fhe be Wife, not neither Maid, Wife, nor Widdow, it matters not : whom with large gifts, and larger promifes, I will perswade to part with her Child, when born, and you shall lye in with it; let me alone to the management of all: but firft, let me find out a Person fuitable to out purpole, and I will warrant you to carry on the reft to your full fatisfaction. I will instantly for London where I cannot mils of Subjects enough of this fort, out of which I may pick and choose. She liked this proposal so well, that the would not suffer me to flay a minute longer with her, but that I should instantly leave her, and make my felf ready for my Journey! and thus far have I travelled in order to the finishing thereof, when I met with so bleffed an opportunity,

clf

10

1

to 10 ne

in

is

Ty co Bod,

h

to ye

at ty ly

of falling into discourse with you, Dearest Madam, which I hope will tend to both our happinesses, if you will be ruled by me.

Thus, faid Mrs. Dorothy, I heard the whole relation of her felf, and others, with great atention : and thought it was now my Cue to speak, which I did in this manner; not only cauteloufly, but with much keming refervedness. Mother (for so, by the dispaviry of our Age, I make bold to call you) the account you give of your felf is fo monstroufly wicked that I know not whether, with fafety, I may interthange any twrther discourse with you; neither can I but take notice of your subtility, and marchless maftinels, as well as your unparallel'd debauchery, and wantennels; you may very well excuse me, if new I fland on my guard, and wearily entertain a parky with you fince you are known to be an old Souldier in the Wars of Venus, and so may fight too cunningly for me, that am but a firipling upon any fuch scount. However make your proposals (and if I may be affured you pump me not to intrap me) as I and them faisable, and profitablefor the future, I hall accept rhem, and be ready to be fervicable to you, and your delign.

The good old Gentlewoman, as one transported; by hugging me in her Arms, interrupted me, saying; Daughter, mistrust me not in this affair, and my whether I will not in a little time make you as happy as your own wishes can make you; and there-spon asked me how long I had been with Child, and whether I would be content, that, by anothers owning it, the Child hereafter might be owner of an Estate (it seems born to) the tenth part whereof sone of my Ancestors ever yet enjoyed.

It is confest, said I, my own weakness, and Fe-male

he

fo

11

· fic lik

lit

10 th

de

E. -

. in te

y fe

bu

di

th

1:

m

10

fo

male frailty betraid me to unlawful embraces d'ex a handfom young man, whose subrie follicitation ne could not be withflood by a Nun, much less by me. on and yielding, I now carry both the Sin and the tham! ha of those stolen delights about me, where ever I go be That though it was my ill Fortune thus to lofe (by one throw at play, inconsiderately) a thing of that con value my Maiden head I mean, yet it was fort in comfort to me, that it was a Gentleman of no men the worth that won it; and I question'd not but the offfpring would be like the Father, as well in the Hi comely proportion of the Body, as Gallantry of Mind, being thus fully perswaded it will prove fo good y a Person, it will the more trouble me to put with it to another; that if I should do any such thing it is not for necessity; for, as I had money considers ble of my own, before my deluding Lover cant acquainted with me ; yer, to compensate that fingle kindness, he hath so showred his Gold and Silver one me fince, that my Weal h may procure a Match considerable enough, though my face carryed init no other invitation. Come, come, Daughter (faid the Old Woman) Something hath fome favour? and although you have enough, yet more will dom harm ; belides your Child will be well look't after, well provided for (which you may fee when you please) and you rid of that incumbrance, will be in a better condition for any one to follicite you it M rriage. Being thus convinced by the subtle Argaments of this cunning Matron, I condescended to whatever the would have me to do; and fo without further delay, the next morning we rode together w the House of this old Gentlewoman; where alight ing, the had no fooner provided a necessary Room for me, and given order for my Supper, which was

CXIII

10

01

1

u

1

extraordinary, but her impatience immediately hurned her to the Gentlewoman, her Friend , and being out of breath, fold her, as well as the could, that the had effected the bulinels beyond expectation ; but because she would not leave me too long, begg'd her excuse, promising the next morning a full account of all her proceedings. That night was fpent in all the joility imaginable; Fowles of all for the the choicest of the season were provided; wine flowed fo plentifully through every room of the House, that I wonder it did not reel into the ftreets Iam fure the fervants would, had not a noise of Mate fick held them by the ears, whil'ft their Legs caperd like a pair of Drum-flicks. Although they took but little repose that night, yet my Hoftels got up early to wait on her Correspondent, who had not flept that night, for the eager expectation to hear how her defires were accomplisht.

But overjoyed the was, when the faw the old Weman approach, who taking her aside in one of the walks of the garden, askr her how the had fped, and in what manner. The old woman (as much transported with joy as the) have patience, and I will tell you, faid the; In my way to London, I met with several that had nibled on the bait of concupifence but they were such flounder-mouth'd, draggle-tail'd, dirty-Puffes, that I would not venture upon any of them; but at length comming to an Inn on the road, laccidentally fell into the Company of a Gentleweman (which is this that I have now brought with me > to be ferviceable to you) who by her deportment informed me, that the was not meanly extracted and by those wanton torches in her face, which Nature had drawn to allure, and captivate hearts, I gueft the was unacquainted with the Mafeuline gender, and

di

Wa

en

dec

my

my

1W

p07

for

for and pin

as I imagined, so it proved; for I have so rigled of felf by discourse into her concerns, that I soon man her unravel the bottom of her secrets. To be short in I found her every way fit for our purpose, and by a extraordinary device, I have made her ours; and h that you may fatisfie your felf farther. I will brin her to the Park, a mile from your house, where I for delire you to meet us in the afternoon. Hereupe delire you to meet us in the afternoon. Hereupa the departed, and acquainted me how the had ope ed the way to confummate what we had agreed on and to having dined, we went to the place appointed where the Gentlewoman was already come to meet a the Gentlewoman feeing us at a different meet. The Gentlewoman feeing us at a distance, min to up to us, but was strangely assonishe when the faw person so unexpectedly handsome, and in a Gun which as much exceeded that which the wore, as the my face, the faw excelled most others that the had fee before; and therefore thought it requifite to make her address, as to a person of no mean Quality ;y thinking again, should the fo do, I might think the mockt me; (for had I been nobly born and bred would never have condescendep so low, as to prefi tute my body to the unlawful embraces of fome bot fpe blooded Gallant, and afterwards mercenarily expos the Infant to the disposal of a meer ftranger;) there fore familiarly thus the fpake, Sweet keart, Though never faw you before, I am not unacquainted will your affairs, and am much troubled, that fo good face should be fo deladed, and groffy abused by an Promile-breaker of them all; but fince what is put cannot be recalled, I shall endeavour to redress you to misfortunes, after this manner, you shall lodge wit mine; but be fare you keep your felf private; when you have a mind to take the air, and com your self, you shall not want a Coach to carry you whither you list, so it be far enough off: your provision at home, with all things necessary; and your expences abroad, shall be at my charge; all that I shall require of you is, that when you cry out in labour, your Childe may be at the dispose of your Landlady, whom I constitute your Guardian. If in the interim you want any thing, let me know it, and you shall be supplyed, and enjoy your self as freely, as if you were Empress of the whole World; and when you are discharged of your great belly, you shall not want a sum to make gou a good portion for any honest man. Be not seen in the Town, and do not come to our house, but be ruled by your Guardian; and assure your self this, your Child shall be my Child, and what estate I have, or my Husband, hall be his: and so she took her leave of me, cramming my hand sull of Jacobuss, as the earnest of a better penmy.

I was forthwith conducted to this house, which

I was forthwith conducted to this house, which was intended for my lodging privately, where I was entertain'd, according to instruction, with much respect and gallantry; a Maid was their ready provided to attend me, and there was nothing wanting in my entertainment to make my life comfortable, and my looks cheerful. Here did I merrily pass my time away, being often visited by my old Hostels, daily puzzling each others invention, what we should have for Dinner; what recreation in the afternoon; what for Supper, and what divertisement afterwards; how to make our pleasure more poyant by their diversity, and variety; but the greatest difficulty lay in our cunning projections of going abroad, which we knew we must carry with a world of secrecie, or spoil all whatever we intended to do.

Part s Pa In the mean time, the Gentle-woman (understand for irg my true reckoning, which was three moneth on gone with Child) calculatted her time accordingly, and and gave out, the was with Child: every one admirant red at the news, having not had any in so long a time did of marriage, and knew not whether they had be we give crecit to the report ; her Husband would no fel be induced to beleive it by any means, looking upon i 100 as incredible, nay, almost impossible; but that which not most of all favoured what the would have eredited we was her being troubled at that instant, with somehy be dropical humours, which had so swelled her belly 14th that she had much adoe from perswading her selled that the was really with Child. Her Husband pound and by his belief wrought all the Neighbourhood in way to the like perswation : but that which knockt the me nail on the head, was the opinion of the Midwife (thice Creature of the Gentlewomans, made absolute the her devotion by gifts, and promise of future rewards non whh proclaimed it every where as a wonder, the lafter one after so many years, having never born a Chill they should now at last conceive. Neit er was the kind prov and over-indulgent Husband, backward in spreads and offentationsly, his glory, that he should at last work called Father, when all the glimmerings of the time hopes were quite extinguisht. His joy made him out rath and inconsiderate, that he bespoke Goffiips, sinte concluded upon a name for it, though he knew miner the other fide, the feemingly over-joyed woman po kot vided clouts for the bantling, and all other things this ceffary, which an over-bulie Lullaby could invent. Then many wet Nurses were sent for, that they came to the ling to the house by dozens; and so many faults with o found with them, that they Troopt off again as fast ; one was diflik'd for her Hair, it being of a red colour, and therefore her milk was lookt upon as too het, mnk, and venemous; every one giving in their Verdia, that the could not be wholefome, fince the Turks were accustomed to make the rankest poylon of the feh of flaves that were red-hair'd. Another was no tall, and therefore flothfull, and unactive, being not talkative enough; a third not clear skinn'd, nor well featur'd, having a cast with the eye, which might the ill pattern of directing the Childs eyes amils: 14th had a too indulgent husband, whom they fearand fo endanger its health a fifth had had formerly way might be polluted: a fixth was too melancholly melancholly but melancholly judged would not only preju-(nincher luck, but deprive her of the talking qualifications of most Nurses, who look upon the impertinent monfensical tittle-tattle to their Children , to be the be lass of all there future learning, With much adoe, they at length pitch upon a lovely brown woman, full town, well featur'd, quick fighted, clear skinn'd, and readile flatur'd, with breasts little and round, her blood wirkling them in the pleasant blew Meanders of her had reins. Now lest they should loose her, if she went out of their light, the was hired , and entertained as me the house immediatly, although her Mistrils had no hemoneths to go of her supposed time.

Part. 3.

O Though her Husband was extassed with joy, his tother was moved by a contrary paffion, his folly the string him shew it, in so unseemly away, that every menow concluded him that, wen they only surmized fore, a villain, that had both studied and practised the of his nearest relations, & he was often accused & upbraided

ce

A

to

C

to

upbraided for fo doing, that he was forc'd to leave the Town, and fince is gone to a Cozen of his living in Barmudas.

My time began now to draw nigh, being groan h bigg I could not with convenience flir abroad, and the refles to flay at home. As I felt any pain, I cauled my Mistrife to be acquainted therewith, that she might be to too; if I fele my felt much difordered, I fent away her confident prefently to allarm her; who acted her part as artificially, as I did it really. Thefe out crie of hers made the whole Garrison continually stand to their arms; there being about her continually the Mil wife, Wet-Nurle, Dry Nurle, with many Neigh bouring affittants: the Maids below ready at command, and a Man & Midwife, if need fould require with fo many instruments ready fixt, as would will the very Iron fer up a Black-imith, and all for the strangeness of shape, surpassing any rarity in Treas cames Collection.

After fo many falle allarms, a true one came at lan carried by our Confident aforefaid, with my Child her lap whole very appearance was watch-worde pough for the Gemlewoman to express the pangs of Child-birth, which the did then in a more violent min ner than before, imagining something more than or dinary : The approaching the bed askt her lowely how the did, and how the felt her felf, and at that very in Mant elapt the Child into Bed to her; who immediate ly skreeking our, the Midwife ran to her; where feem ing to be bulled about her a while, at length takes the Child from her, and doing withit, and her, as is all al; the news of this has happy delivery was conver ed to the Husband, who was near ar hand, attending and with tears lamenting the fad pain fils poor wik

で 音楽 子と できる ななな を 日 き

Son bern, wip'd away all those tears, and so anisated his feeble Carkafe, that he would have en-red the Room, before it was either Civil, or Conrenient, had he not been from by meer force. Ifhall metrouble you by relating what an Universaliteeyceing there was through the whole house, but onwinterm you, that before the expiration of a moneth the Child was Christened, being as lovely Child as could be bern of a Woman, nor any limb or part of his body, which did not promife to exceed his true Father in every thing. The Gentlewoman being up, as foon as the understood I was well and fally recovered, appear'd abroad in publick whole happy delivery was by all congratulated o And to gratifie me, the fent me an hundred pieces of old Gold, defiring me to remove my Quarters, and toengage my tongue eternally to conceal the fecret. 10

I now thought it high time to fend to my two Gallants, who were obliged to me in bonds, the one; to pay me fourty pound, and the other fifty, upon my delivery , they being both affured of the truth thereof delayed me nor, but fent me my moneys by the fire conveniency, which added to my late purchase; and what money I had before, made up to weighty a

Danghage book ninereen, a Chi u berlain, a I spiter of Winds, an Hollier, Soperald, caution, and two on driving and & reading good has le execut in 200 portion, for fo light an Honfwife as my felf, will amply a under the rehers,

VMI naily vilues they equa dans la villaglia . G 4 dilivard ing of one another wield, they becaused one insuler, fi

fo

to

th

to

th

th

ke

H

of

th

DO

10 br

gn be bel

21

601

CHAP. V.

Mrs Dotothy relates several passages in the Inn: m, how the Host drew Guests to his House, and then obeated them: the Boy by his Example, attempts to cheat, but is taken in the manner; is beaten by his Mistris, but is revenged of her and his Master; is turned over to be corrected by the Under Hostle, but is wittily, and pleasantly revenged on him.

I was now (continued Mrs Doro; hy) rid of my great Belly, and instead of that, had a great Bag of money; and my Child being thus provided for, as have told you, I retired from the place where I had lain in private, now to appear in publick at the House of my very good friend, the old Crony; part of whole Adventures I have already related to you; and since you have not thought me tedious in the discoursel have already made you; I shall give you an account of some such Transactions in her House; during my stay there, which I believe, will be no less pleasant that what you have already heard; and then having made a short paule, we thus proceeded.

The whole Family, consisting of her self, her Husband, a Son of about twenty four year of Age, and Daughter about nineteen, a Chamberlain, a Tapster or Winee, an Hustler, Cook-maid, Scullion, and two on three boyes; who were imployed under the others, were all alik, knavish enough, all guilty of such unparallely, Knaveries as I have rarely heard of; and knowing of one mothers tricks, they out vyed one another, striving and contending weich should exceed in Roguery, and so sly and counting y they carried it, that I was difficult to discover them, especially when they të

H

16

7

8

d

6

1

1 á

d

di

di

a

ti

all joyned together to cheat or abuse any body; but when they fell out among themselves, they made excellent sport in acting the revenges they took upon one another, My Landlord loved his pleasure and profit so equally, that he made it his business to contrive how to soyn them together, and although he commonly had the best Custom of any house in the town, yet he would practice wayes to gain, and bring in more; among other wayes, he used this for one. He would take his Horse in an Asternoon, and ride out some ten one welve miles, and so return home again; but he seldome came home, but he brought Guests with him, which he would take up by the way, thus.

If he law a parcel of Travellers, who he thought to be good fellows, and fit for his purpole, he would then enquire which way, and how far they travelled to this they commonly answered, directly, and if they were for our Town, then he would joyn with them; and foon after, his fecond question would be, to know if they were acquainted at the Town, and at what Inn they would take up take up their Quarters : lishey were strangers, and by that means indifferent of the place where they should lodge; then he told them, that the best Inn in the Town was his House, but not naiming it to be his, or that he had any Interest in is, but only that he knew there was a good Hoftels, tho had a handsome Daughter that would use them well; and he feldem miffed with this Bait to win them to agree to go thither with him, and accordingly to bring them home with him. But if they would not afree upon the place, and he faw there was no good to bedone, then he would pretend some excuse to flay behind them, & would wair for fuch company as would mall points be for his turn ; and with them would he oner the House as a Stranger : indeed he would call call the Chamberlain, Hoftler, and Tapfter, by their Names; but they who knew their Daties, would in the cafe flow any Ducy to him. Then would he, being acquainted in the House, tell his Bellow To would be fore to draw them up to the highest Billy Fare he could. If the Hollels, or her Daughters con pany were defired, he would be the forwardest role them, and only treat and cooverfe with them as fome fmall acquaintance, efter fupper, he would e deavour to draw on the Gompany to drink high, an ale all pollible means to enflame the reckoning ; at when he law they were well heated with wine, in the fury of their expenses was over, he would prerend, out of good Haibandry, to call for a Recke mil reckoned, or flaid from the partait of their Je ney in the Morning; withis they would common he would be the fift man that would, without ferm or inquiry into the particulars, lay down his lie and by till examples thereit would follow; if a did quellion shedter before the Victoria, or the qu the of the Brink, he would by one means or oth take them off, protesting that the House is was too h next to mirrick on them, and that he had kept as Secoune hintelf, and was well fatisfied; or elle thould be be crutions from parting the book is more They would by the kentle pay the from Thus we he many Ames, byohis Crown or for hillings of the Reckon the American or wency faillings per ally frethey exmerted high drinking and the reckoning being paid, they went to bed, he re with his wife, and he would ly cabed in the more and let them march off alone; but if they, in the Morning, did fall to drinking again, taking a hair of the Old Dog, then would he up, and at them again," make one at that fport, and many times put themiour of capacity to Travel that day, and fo keep them there to his profit, and their expences , he thifting his Liquor, and in the end, thifting himfelf out of their Companies, when he has feen his Conveniency, leaved ing them to pay roundly for their folly. If they efful quired after him, my Hoftels would presend he was a Chance Gueft, as they were, only, such ad feen him the last year, or such like; and thus he would force a Trade, and enjoy his pleasure and profit, by joyning it when Guefts came not in of their own accord, for that our house was feldome empty.

As mine Hoft, who was the Head and Cheif of the House, had his tricks, so had the rest of the Family theirs, even the least in the House; for there was an unhappy boy, who was fometimes with the maid in the Kirchin, fometimes with the Tapiter, attending Gues in their lodgings, and other times with the hoffler and Horses in the Stable; this boy, though he was little was witty; and seeing that every one had their tricks, he cast about how he might have his and have some profit in the Adventure; fo that one day, mine Hoft being abroad, and the Tapker our of the carried bottles of wine to the Suefts & feeing them in merry wain, he thought to try his skill at mil reckenthem, when they come to pay, he reck oned them eight; and though there was fome questioning of the truth, yet he justified it, and stood to it, that he had the

This

enc

hac

Wi

the 10 tat bu

im M

T

ng

th

22 di

pe fe

gr th

M

d sh

D

th

d

This being his first considerable attempt in this Na- Ind ture, for he had gained two shillings for himself, he gui was refolved to keep the prize for himfelf; and there- he fore putting that up in his Pocker, he delivered the reft ing at the Bar; the reckoning being wiped out.

But the Company falling into discourse, in short in time called for more wine, and then the Tapster being returned, he officiated in the boyes place, and turning him into the stable; more wine they had, and staying di longer than ordinary, and falling again to drinking, they quaffed off the other half dozen bottles of wine, and then calling to pay, the Tapster, thinking to put his old trick of mil-reckoning in practice, told them, there were feven bottles to pay; but one of the company who was more cautious than the reft, had made his observation, and every bottle that was brought in. he unbuttoned a button, and fo was able to aver and juftify that there was but fix , and withal, the reft of the company believing him, they all fell a ranting. vowing that they would pay for no more, and farther alledging, that they were mif-reckoued one or two bottles in the last reckoning : the Tapster, although he was guilty as to himfelf, yet he did not believe them as to the other reckoning, because he could not imagine, that the boy would be fo bold as to attempt to cheat them, and therefore he huff'd as high as they in justification of the boy and himself; and such a noile they made, that the Hoftels went in to know the cause of that clamour they at first were lo hot on both fides, that they would not hear her fpeak, neither did they speak reasonably themselves, but in the end the understood the matter, that they were wronged of one or two bettles by the Boy; and one by the Tapler; the hearing the matter, did not fo much stand to justifie

ng

100

g,

e, ut n,

c

1,

f

1

0

d

and vindicate the Tapfter, whom the did imagine was he guilty, but as for the boy, the was very confident, that e- he had not wronged them, and when the hear of their the inger was somewhat over, the examined particulars enquiring how many bottles they paid for, they faid re light: the who had not fo foon forgotten what the had received, averred that the had but fix fillings for wine, and therefore it was a miftake; they till aledged eight, and the flux : till now no body could end the concroversie but the boy, who was sought after, and in short time found in the hayloft asleep, or meditaring how he should bestow his purchased Treasure; but being found, he was without any questions there immedialely led away before the Gentlemen and his Millrels, who were to be judges of this matter of fact. The queftien wa's foon flated to him, and he too well understood the matter, which he stoutly denyed, but there was quickly fuch clear evidence appeared against against him, that he was found guilty; for he not dreaming or miftruftir g any fuch matter, had not conreyed the money away, fo but that the pockets being fearched, there the two skillings were found, to the great shame and confusion of the small delinquent a this was to the great amazement of the Guetts, his Miltrefs, and the Tapiter; but the money being laid down, and two bottles wine being brought in for it, the Gentlemen were well enough pleased, and made no further enquiry into the other bottle, which the Tapster had likewise mis-reckoned them; fo that he staped without shame or punishment, so did not the boy, who was not only ashamed, but was ordered to be severely punished, and therefore the ext morning was feiched up by the under Hoffler, one who was not fo wife as the boy, though in rowth he was much biggar) with a Cat of nine tailes, which

t

1

CI

d

Ь

P

0

h

h

d

I

W

P

h

B

101

which gave to great an impression on the poor boy buttocks, that he was refolved on a revenge, which effeded, as I shall prefently tell you. This boy w now looked on as an errant cunning Rogue, and or who without good looking to would be too wife f them all, for he had prefumed to mif-reckon two M lings in fix fillings, and put it all into his own pocket whereas the Tapiter who was a proficient in che ing, and licensed therein (but with this provise, the half of what he gained thereby was to be paid to h Mistres) only endeavoured to mil-reckon one fin line in fix; fo that. I fay, the boy was narrowh warched, and had many a blow on the back, and be on the ear, more than formerly; he who knew he ha deferved it, for he was guilty of many perty was geries, was forced to bear, but however he made pro vision against it, for his Miftress using to pommel his on the thoulders with her fift, he one time took ; m per of pins, flicking them with the points upward placed them between his Doublet and Caffock : an his Mistrels striking him, as the was wont to do, di light upon the pins, pricked her hand till the blood in down her fingers ends, and the boy running away, I could not imagine how this was done, for the faw no thing upon his coat, that thould cause it ; so the by getting away, removed the paper with pins, and the w san end of the matter for that time. The Miffed finding the had fuffered by striking him on the show ders, would come no more there with her bare hands but uled a cudgel, if it were near her, and if not the would ale to flap him on the mouth with the backs her hand; and one time, he being in the Kitchen, the running after him to ftrike him, he claps a knill which lay near him, into his mouth, with the ed outwards, the not minding that, but endeavouring intending to give him a great blow did fo, but to her coff for the cut her knuckles in fuch pitious manner. that the blood ran down abandantly, and now it was no fooling matter, but Chyrurgions work, wherefore one was fent for, and the boy san away to his wonted dormitory, the hay-loft. The Miftress took her Chamber, and towards Evening the Mafter cause home, and bringing with him fome Guefts, the foon miffed his wife, and thereby knew the occasion of her retirement, and it was not long ere he faw the boy, the Authour of the harm ; he therefore took up a cudgel, and ran haftily after the Boy, who tearing the danger, betook him to his heels, and ran crofs a dunghill in the yard; the Mafter being erger to purfue the boy, did not take the same course the boy had done, who had paffed over a board he had laid there on purpole, but the Master milaing of that, went on one fide, and fell into a great filthy hole, which by reason of much wer and rain, was there flightly covered . and had he not been helped out by the Hoftler, he he might have fifled, he having recovered his feet, left the pursuit of the boy, and was forced to be conduced to bed, which was to his great grief and dammage, for he had spoiled his cloaths, wet himself, and, which was worft of all, he by this means was difappointed of his purpole in making a prey of his gueffs he had brought in with him to that purpole. But the Tapfter and others, did their best in that behalf, and the Boy was again committed to the disciplination of the under Hoftler, who by the command of his Mafter, almost flead the poor boys buttocks.

The Boy was now revenged of his Maker and Millrels, who finding him fol unlucky, had no great mind to meddle with him, neither did the Boy studdy Mysevenge upon them; but so often as he saw the under

Part arti3

under-Hostler, who had now twice been his torme he ho tor, his blood would boyle at him, and all his studiors, was to be even with him; and thereupon he wach ween for all opportunisies, and it was not long ere he too ng hone. There was meat at the fire to be roathed, and back was ordered to look to and wind up the Jack, who by pr was made to go by a stone weight, which was fastin in a to pullyes, and when the Jack was woond up, it sishes stone weight being on the out-side of the house, walnut drawn up two fterves high, to the eves of the houle move down, and feeing his Enemy the under Hoftler in the Yard, just by the jack weight he lifted that off from the hook, and conveighed it under the girdle of the Hoftler, just behind, he not perceiving it : when he he thus done, he ran into the Kitchin, and woond up the Jack, the Hoftler being none of the wifest, wonden what it was that first of all held him by the back, and afterwards drew him up from the ground ; but it we The too late ere he discovered the truth, for he was not hanging in the aire; his girdle was of ftrong leather with a great brafs buckle and thong, which he coul hot possibly undo ; neither durft he attempt it for feat of falling, and therefore he was in thort time draw up to the top; the boy not thinking this revenge not enough. feeing no body came, proceeded further, and taking a parcel of wet horfe-litter, and fume dry hay he placed it juft underneath the Hoftler, and fet fire if fa it, which made fuch a smother and smoke, that the poor Hoftler was almost cheaked, wherefore he roam out most hideously , the boy having done all he intended, said, Now remember the Cas with nine taylin, and fo ranaway , by this time the Hoftler made fo much noise, and the jack together, being forced by weight to go fafter than ordinary, that at the noise

fo 0

ti

1

the houshold ran to fee what was the matter, when, in whore, there was found the poor Hoftler hanging bechween heaven and earth, and with coughing and roasing he purged forwards and backwards, but most backwards; in regard his girdle forced it downwards in by pressing and gripeing his stomach, so that he was main a most lamentable pickle; and so great was the aftomatishment of all the beholders, that he was come down in similar to the bottom, ere the smoaking hay was resemble moved, or he relieved; but at length down he came; and thus ended this adventure.

CHAP. VIII.

The Boy learns, and practifes Vaulting and tumbling, the maid servant attempting to do the like, is intangled, caught in the manner, and laughed at; she puts a trick upon a Puritanical Church-Warden, and makes the boy by another trick, to lye in bed, and lose his ding ner; he is revenged on her by a Gunpowder plot.

MRS. Dorothy putting a stop to her discourse, gave us conveniency and leisture to express our suisfaction by our laughter, in which we continued for some space, and then rehearsing and commenting on what she had told us, we again renewed our laughter, she joyning with us in the same exercise, when we had put a stop to our mirth, she thus continued.

Truly, Friends, I did think I might a little diurt you by my relation; but I fee you are pleated much better than I expected, and if you are

P

1

t

1 ti

W

V

h fu

f

01

fo

1

01

so well contented with this which is but a take of what I can tell you. I am fure the rest would be much more delightful sbut being desirous to put an end in my discourse, by relating to you such matters as only concern my felf, till my arrival here, I therefore be your excuse, Nay, replyed I, and Mirrels Man you must not refule us the request we both make you of proceeding in these pleasing Adventures of your houshold; and, continued I, it is enough to know and find you are here with us, we are fatisfied in the and hope you will give us the other fatisfaction we do fire; and I pray be as full and free in your recital as you can, for we cannot think any thing to be tedious that is to pleafant; the hearing my defires, after few excules, agreed thereto; and thereupon the thus reaffumed the discourfe.

The poor under Hoftler being thus descended from his place of Torment, was almost in as pitiful a plight as one taken down from the Gibbet half hanged to be quartered , he had as little motion or fense ; for he was almost softocated with the smoak that ascended and flew up his nofe, and down his throat, and as Ma lefactors do (as they fay) pils for fear, or fome other cause; so had he done; and not only so, but we could perceive somewhat else, of a yellowish colour, that bad foaked through his breeches, run down his flock. Mes; fo that few would touch him; but at length, the Honler, his superiour, considering his condition and former good fervice, took him up, and carried him to his bed adjoyning to the Stable; where, with the Milance of Aqua vite, he was foon brought to his former lenles. Our young Rogue in the mean time ly ing in the Hay-loft over him, laughing at the roguer tichad done, and the groans he heard the poor fellow fetth, YOU TIE fetch, where as fo many inftruments of mulick to raile his laughter to the higher pitch.

This Rogue, who wanted nothing so much as Roging, or a good Gat of nine tailes, now escaped without either, there being no body in the whole house that had any mind to meddle with htm; he was threated by some, whilst others only laughed at him, and he went merrily about his business; and to conclude, much company coming that day to the house, and the particulars of the Adventure being told them, they sent for the boy and Hostler; and after several questions, and much laughter, they made them drink to one mothe, and become Friends.

The boy being thus freed from punishment, fet his wits at work, how he might employ his time to the best advantage, and be getting of money as well as the reft of the Family did; and foon after their being a fair at our Town, among other fooleries that attended it, there were a parcel of Rope-Dancers, and Tumblers; our boy was Mafter of fo much money, as to fee them two or three times and having very much affiction to that quality, he purchased acquaintance with fuch another Crack Rope as himfelf, who was a very nimble and active youth at the Art of Vaulting him he invites to our house, and treating him with fuch as the House afforded, by all means desires his inftructions in that nimble miftery ; he fcon affented, and our boy being ingenuous, and very willing to learn, foon attains to the knowledg of this miftery, and taking ill opportunities of practifing, could foon leap through a hoop, vault over two or three joynt stools, tumble on the ground in various manners , and being a pretty proficient, had money feveral times given him by Gueks that came to our house, for shewing his cricks by vertue of his money he would brag and vapour a

H 2

ARCH

Par

err

Mil

mig

lati

bel

and

wh

Gi

wi

for

He

for

H

W

(u h

1

h

d

fo

well as the best in the house; and the rest of the fervants feeing his gain would attempt to do the like, but many times came off with the breaking of their fains amongst the rest, the Cook maid had a mighty great itch to learn and practice some of these tricks belike supposing that if he, who was a boy, did get so much money by them, that then the might gain much more being a maid; and that the might as well do them as he; the obstacle of Perticoats she removed by tefolving when the had learned, to have a pair of Breeches and Doublet for that purpole, and that the queftioned nor, but to get money enough, it being a greater Nevelty to fee a woman in breeches; but before the purchased them, she resolved to practice in her ordinary Habit, her Petticoats, and did fo when the had convenient time and place; fo that the likewife could perform fomwhat in that practice. One time most of the other fervants being abroad, the was fent into the Cellar to draw a Gallon Pot full of Claret Wine; the believing it would be some time ere it were full, by reason it ran only through a small Cane whilest the Por was filling, the lies d wn on her back, and refolved now to try whether me/could put her feet in her neck, in order to practice fome new trick of tumbling; the shoon put one there, and with some difficulty likewise pur the other, when she had so done, the could not possibly under what the had done, her feet were as fast to her neck, as if they had grown there; and though the tumbled and toffed, yet it was all to no purpole, for the could not by any means difentangle, or difengage her felf frem the posture he was in & the finding her felf in this condition, knew not what to do, for the Pot was now full, and the Wine ran about the Cellar, and with tumb. ling about the had made her Coats to fly about her caff

4

ut

 # C #

U

.

ats; at length the refolved to cry out, hoping her Miftrefe, or fome other of the females of the house might hear her, and come to her rescue; this resolation the put in execution, and cryed out amain, help, help; we were all in the Room over her, and therefore foon heard her voice, but not knowing whole, or what was the matter , mine Hoft ar length hid to the boy, firrah, rundown into Cellar, and ice what is the matter there; the boy did io, and after. some little stay came up again, and cryes out, Oh Heavens! Mafter, I think our Cook-maid is murthered for I went down, and there lyes her body without a Head, and a great deal of blood about her (which was the fpilt Claret) bur, faid his Matter , are you fare her head was off? yes, yes, faid the boy, come fee how it is cut of from the neck; and yer, continued he, I cannot think the is yet dead, for the moved her hands, and Rill cryes out, but her head I cannot find. Mine Hoft hearing of this strange matter, foon ran down into the Cellar, which was not fo dark, nor he fodier fighted, but he prefently discovered how the matter was. The only thing he did, was to stop the Wine from running out, by putting the fpigger into the faucer, and foreturned up to us, and told us that the boy was a little miftaken; but fuch a fighe had he feen as was very unufual; and thereupon delires us to defend into the Cellar, and fee what he had done; no fooner had he faid fo; but our curiolities likewife induced us to go down, where in there time we likewife had the fatisfaction of feeing this ftrange light : how faid I, this is some Moniter, and it would do well to keep it in this manner till the next fair, and then we may gain more by it then all the Tumblers did. A pox of Tumbling , faid mine Hoftels, i believe this came from that Exercise-

H 3

ph

To

feet

400

Pul

WI

fo

0 di

C

i

We thus having spent our Verdicts, helped the wench to disingage her self, and put her in her wonted natural posture; but when she was so, she was not come to her self, so much was she spent with strugling and her joynts were so out of order, that we were forced to lead her up stairs, and put her to bed.

She was mightily assumed at this mischance, so that we could hardly perswade her to be seen by any body but the boy was as well pleased, as she was troubled it was honey and nurs to him to tell the guests, how the Cook-maid could do some seats of activity, as well as he, and then relate to them, in what posture he sound her. Nuch sport was made upon this account; and although the Wench was shy at first in being seen, yet in time she bose it out bravely, when the guests gave her money to talk with her about this Adventure.

By this means the wench became a great Enemy to the boy, and did him many threw'd turns, but durft not meddle with his body politick, dreading the danger the should run into by the harmes of others who had been his perfecutors; wherefore the was forced to let him alone as to matter of action, only now and then the would exercise her wit upon him, in which the feldome came off but with the difadvantage. She was famous for this her trick of activity, by which the got money, but much more by another, which the foon after effected, and came more clearly off with it; It was then in time of rebellion, and all observations of Christmas, Easter, Whit souride, or any Holy-days, were by the Factious, accounted fuperfitions, especially any observation of Christmas; and therefore, the more to crofs the defire and humon of those who would observe the feast of Christmas, the men then in power commanded a first fatt to be on that day kept and observed, with penalties on all those whe

the

tel

100

g. Te

Ħ

W

LS

ic

she should drefs any victuals and althorough the Town, and especially our house, was of another perfunction, yet fuch was the prevalency of the Factions harir was frictly observed; & it was given out that the Officers of the Town would fearch houses, to find and punish Offenders. Our Cook maid hearing of this, was refolved to pur a trick upon the Officers ; who all bout the middle of Sermon-time came attended with at Guard, to fee and examing our Kitching, where they found not the Jack a going, yet they found a good fire, and the pot a boyling: How now, faid Mafter Church-warden , How dare you break the Lawes, by dreffing victuals on this day? What have you in the Pot? Quoth the Maid' Nothing but plumb por ing . How; faid the Church-warden, Superfistions Porriaget this is a very great offence, and deferves as great punishment, to do thus in contempt of the Laws; I will fee your Master fined for this, and severely punished. Well, replyed the, but I pray, Master Church-warden be not fo angry, but be pacified; which I know you will be, when you fee further what is in the Pot, and with what the porridge are made; and left you foould mistake I will shew you ; whereupon the went to the Pot and took out a large pair of Rams-horns, and faid, Look you, Mafter Church-warden, this is the meat; how like you it ? I hope so well, that you will taste of the broath your self without foruple of conscience? The case was so plain, and Matter-Church-warden was fo fensible that he was jeer'd, that he made all possible haste out of the house, threatning what he would do to the Wench, who now only laughed at him, as did fome of his attendants, who knew the Church-warden was very fenfible of the affront, his wife being one of those who were cork-heeld shoes, which made her pals for a light Huswife, as indeed the was.

POW

der.

ma

Pair

not hun

pen

ter

flev

too

Dir

the ed:

Th

p

This trick which our Maid put upon the Church whe warden, raised a great noise in the Town and Country, and brought all the Cavileers to our house, who gave in her fomewhat to her box, fo that the was very happy low in this project, and our Hoft had very great Custom.

But fill the Boy and Wench could not agree to fet their horses together; for his buliness was to be up in the morning with the first, and help her make her fire. this he could not indure, for he loved his bed mightiby well, and would rather want his belly full of victuals, then fleep, he had liberry to lye a bed on a Sun. day, fo long as he pleased, because then they had few gueles; wherefore he would conflantly lye by it till dinner time, which he knew by the jack going; for fo long as the jack went, fo long would he lie by it, but but when that was flopt, he then thought it was time, to rife to dinner.

The wench observing that he observed this Custome was refolved to put a trick on him, and therefore one Sunday, though dinner was dreffed by twelve a clock, and earen by one, yet the let the Jack go on till four a Clock after-noon, fill the boy lay h'fining to the Jacks going; and hearing that go ftill on, give himself to lazynels, and took many a fweer turn, which the laughed at heartily; at length the floor the Jack, and immediately the boy arole, and came down flairs (for he lay in a imall loft over the Kitchin) to fee what was become of the roaft; but he found none in the Kitchin, nor Hall, nor no body in the house but the wench; who seeing him search about for his Dinner, and asking her queltions about the affairs of the belly, the could not answer him for laughing; but soon after the family returning from Church, he discovered his own miffake, and for roquery; for this, he refolved on a revenge, which he had upon her the next day, when, then, a considerable dinner being to be dressed, he micalled up in the morning to make a fire; he did fo, intwas more than ordinarily diligent, for he laid a y low of Ginders, then fresh Coals, then a row of gun nowder; then a row of Cinders, then more gun-powder, and fo Cinders, till this pile of building was eneted, that done, he flightly kindled it and departed, going on an errand out of the Town, The Wench not knowing, or diffrusting the intended mischief, hung on her Pot; and both the Spits of Geele, Capens, and other Fowls ; but before they were a quarin roafted, the train of Powder took ; with that up hi flew the Pot , and both the Spits, with all the Fowl, took a fecond flight; the Wench was amazed, and the Dinner spoiled, for the aftes and Cinders had made all the Fowls of a fad colour : fo that the Wench fampdand iwore, as if the had been bewirch'd.

CHAP. IX.

The Maidis out-witted by a Country Fellow in an eateing wager, and so is her Master, mine Host; who makes himself whole again by another eating wager. Three Women drink off eighteen Gallons of Rhenish Wine at one sitting, and the manner how.

MRS. Dorothy pauling, and we laughing, gave her the conveniency to confider of what the was to say further; wherefore in thort time the thus proceeded.

The

Part.

m

th

in thi

dit

die

thi

bit

VO

BI

COI

ID:

201

the

CYE

oth

elfe

for

Co

it :

dru

pro

her

roa

Igi

ot

this tha

HO

The poor Whench was at a great lois, to think this the Guefts muft toofe their dinner, and the could not for a long time think how this came about, nor diftruff that the boy had been concerned in it; but a langth, the mift being removed, her eyes were opened. and the believed the boy to be the Authour of this mifchief. But fince it was done, and what was put could not be prevented or helped; the berhought her felf how to proceed; and therefore, her Mistres coming into the Kirchin' and feeing the flate of the matter, they likewife called me and the Daughter, to affift in the remedy; whilft the Wench made the fire good, we fell to waking the Fowls from the fowlends which the Cinders and Afhes had caused; but when that was done, we had a further and more redion work, to pick out feveral corns of powder that were fastned into the skins of the Fowle; at length, with many hands, we likewise performed this work, and with an hours loss, the Dinner was in as much forward nels as it had been; and at length, it was dreffed and eaten; but the Guells talling, and feeing some remaint of the Gun-powder, my Holt excused it well enough by telling them that those Fowles were shot by an accident.

Thus was the Dinner eaten, and much Wine drant off hafore the boy returned; but so soon as he came in, mine Host took him by the hand, and led him into the room where the Guetts were still a drinking; and first desireing silence, and then their pardon, he sold them this was the Gunner, that had shot all those Fowls they had eaten, at one shot; how, said they, he is an excellent marks man: yes truly, said mine Hol, but he had a strange kind of instrument to do this frecution; and I pray, Gentlemen, do you examine his how it was done.

E

The Guests thinking there was somewhat in the matter that was pleasant, desired the boy to acquaint them with it; he seeing how matters went, and believing no harm would come to him, in plain terms told them all; they were strangely pleased with the boyes discourse; and he having told them the manner how he did it, they desired to know the cause, wherefore; to this he replyed, it was because the maid had cheated him of his Dinner, by letting the Jack to go, as I told you,

The rehearfal of that Adventure pleased them as much as the other; and the maid was call'd in, who confessing all that the boy had told them, the Guests made them Friends, and gave money to each of them; adving the Wench not by any means to fall out with the buy, and fo they difmiffed them.

Thus had we much pleasure by Adventures, which every day fell out between this boy and fome body or other, but I will leave that, to tell you of fomewhat elle, as considerable and pleasant. Our Cook-maid, though the were pretty cunning and witty; was yet lomenmes our witted; for one day, an ordinary Country fellow came into the Kitchin; and calling for a Flaggon of beer, fate pown by the fire to drink it and thus he began with the Wench : Here is good drink at your house, but I wonder you are not as well provided with V Quals; why, faid the, fo we are, for here is good meat at the fire, thewing him a peice of roaft beef, that weighed above a stone; yes, faid he Igain, the meat may be good, but there is but a littleof it, there is enough for you, replyed the; no, but there is not, laid he ; how. laid fhe, can you eat all this? Yes, that I can, faid he; I'le lay a wager of that, faid the ; what you dare, faid the man ; for World have the wager be a quart of wine (for the was resolved

Pi

20

CI

bu

cn

do

W

th

in

m, tip

(1

CO

th

C

in no

th

W

re

to an

w

ch

th gl

pr

at

be

fo

W

CI

dr

refolved sgainft money wagers) nay, faid the Man. pint is enough for me with this meat, and fo much will I lay : She thinking, that the less the layd the less the should lofe, if the loft, and being very defirous to fee this great wager of eating performed; agreed to his Terms, and thereupon he fell, too luftily, and did est confiderably, but far short of all, so that he consented his wager to be loft, and the pint of wine was called for ; he leizing on it first, put it to his note, and drank all off; and throwing down fix pence for his pint of wine, and two pence for his pot of beer, was departing when her Mittress, mine Hoftels, enters the Kitchin and feeing the fellow departing, asked, who must piv for the meat? Not I, faid the fellow; Nor I faid the wench, fo that a controversie arole between them; but mine Hoft and fome company coming in, ended it , by sjudging, that fince the Country-man called for me meat, it was not fit he thould pay for it, and he not paying, the maid must, which she presently did it but was laughed at for her folly. But the was not the only over-reach'd person in the House, for it was no long ere mine Hoft himfelf was finely caught.

There came three men, who although they were neighbours, and famous for eating, yet mine Hoft and knowing them, they thus over-reach'd him: they came to sup, and lye there that night, and therefore went into the Kitchin to see what was for Supper. There was Capons, Pidgeons, and Sparagus: Very good meat, said they: Now, mine Host, what shall we give you a peice for our supper of their three sorts of victuals? He asked, how much they would have drest drest: they asked him the same question, How much he would dress: Why, said he, I will dress three sapons, three dozen a Pidgeon.

H R R R H

dist

1

u 1

e K

R T

il k

Pidgeons, and fifteen hundred of Sparagus. Very good, faid they : bur if this be not enough, we expect to have more. That you fhall , faid be ; but you shall sup first, and I hope there will be enough for my felf and family, when you have done. For that, you muft adventure it, faid they ; Well now, your price? Said mine Hoft, I will have three fhillings four pence a peice, that is, ten fhillings in all. Content, faid they ; Make hafte that we may drink afterwards. Thus was the Bargain made up, and the Fowls laid down to the fire. In the mean time the three Travellors fetched a walk, to get them (as they faid) a flomack to their Supper; which in convenient time being ready, and they returned, they thus began ; each of the three took; each of them, a Capon whole on their trenchers; and cutting them into peices, they made one mouthful of each wirg, another of each leg , and scraping all the meat from the Careals, into two or three mouth-fuls, the Capons were invisible; then they drank each his cup of Clater, to whet their appetites; that being done, they fell to the Pidgeons, and cutting each Pidgeon into four quarters, they eat them, bones and all, at four bits; and then they drank again, and fell to the Sparagus, which was in short time bestowed where the rest of the victuals was a mine Hoft feeing them fo quick at their work, stared at them, and they calling for another glass of wine drank to him, and told him, that he must provide more victuals, or lofe his wager, he being angry at both their propolitions, at length thought it was better to let them have more mear, than not to be paid for what they had, and be laughed at into the Bargain; wherefore he replyed, they fould have enough and calling for the Cook-maid, commanded her to drefs the same quantity of victuals; the staring OR

t

hi

H

C

fe

n

P

21

th

31

İ

-

b ı

d

0

R

0

b

m

TC

10 20 fp

L

m

-

on the Guelts, they bad her go down, and make hall for they wanted their supper : down she went, anddil accordingly and whilft supper was dreffing, the walked and imoaked, in their Chamber, le time it other course, confisting of three Capons, three doza of Pigeons, and fifteen hundred of Sparagus wa brought up, and in as little time as before it was can up, as the former had been: to the great coft, lois, and confusion of mine Hoft; who tared now worse that he had done; but however he again asked them, they would have any more to this they readily to plyed, Yet. He again called, and the Cook-maid being come up, was commanded to drefs the fame quantit again, and that quickly : She replyed, the could not for all the Fowl that was killed, was eaten, andi would be a great while, ere the could kill, pull and drefs the like quantity; belides, there was no mon Sparagus then to be had; they told mine Host they must have their bargain, or he lose his wager : he to plyed, if he could not furnish them with that, yet they might have of any other fort of victuals : they fail, they would have that, or none, or elfe a third way, come to composition, to this mine Host gave ear, and asked what composition: they told him, that indeed though they could give a dispatch to more victuals, yet they would for once forbear further eating, and exchange their victuals for drink: fo they reckond what their other mels of victuals might come to, which being computed to ten faillings, they defired ten fill lings worth of wine. Mine Hoft shook his head at this and faid, they did him too hard, which they confeffing, and a little further discoursing on, it was ! greed, that they should have each of them a quart of Canary, in full fatisfaction of the wager : this this I to, this they drank off, and fo went to bed, when they flept more foundly then mine Hoft, who with all his Family went supperless to bed a and he was exmeamly vex'd, that he should be our-witted and overreached by three Bumpkins; but what could not be cored must be endured; it was but a folly to complain, felf do, felf have, and now he remember'd the wager between the Cook-maid and Country-man, and had no cause to laugh at her any more. Night being spent part in fleep, and part in thele cogitations, he arole, and fo did his guefts, who honeftly paid their thot, though not half fo much as their reckoning came to and at departure they told him, that if ever he had occasion for an eating wager, if he would fend for iny of them, they would do their weak endeayours to affift him as much to his gain as this had been to his lofs; and thereupon, acquainted him with the places of their dwellings, they departed : and indeed, it was not long ere he had occasion to make use of them; for a Person of Quality, being to travel our Road, fent his boy before to our house to bespeak & Supper , the boy, having mistook his Master in his direction, instead of a couple of Capons, and a dozen of Larks, which he had ordered him to bespeak, he bespeak, a dozen of Capons, and a Couple of Larks, mine Hoft did somewhat diffrust the boy for his directions, when he spake of a couple of Larks, and told him furely he was miffaken, he must bave two dezen of Larks; no, faid the boy, my Mafter is but a small eater, and the dozen of Capons and the two Larks will be enough for him and his Company, which wbut one Gentleman, belides himfelf; well, replyed mine Hoft, however l'le provide i wo dezen of Larks; and if your Mafter will not ear them, I'le have them my felf; to this the boy confented, and the fowls were ordered to be dreffed accordingly : mine Hoft WAS noted o

E 7 0 7 4, 500 de

Ň

doce

him

tha

Sup

ma

the

ed .

910

to bal

it

by pa bo

th

te

h

hi

TK

m

17

m

0

0

C

ti

h

1

was very fenfible of the miftake, and that the Boy should have bespoke but two Capons, and a dezen of Larks; but however, the boy being fo confident that it was a dozen of Capons, he was refolyed to dreis them, and that his Mafter flould pay for them ; but left they should be left on his hands, and deducted for, he bethought on a way to have them disparched; wherefore he dispatched away a boy to one of his three Capon and Pidgeon-eaters, defiring him to favour him fo far, as to come that evening to his house; for he did believe he might do him a kindnels in lome affairs relating to the teeth and guts. The Country man was at home, and came at his time: but before he came, the Mafter of the boy came thirher, and asking what was for Supper, was answered, a dozen of Capons, and two dozen of Larks; and for whom is all this provision ? faid the Geneleman. For your worthip, faid mine Hoft : how fo, faid the Gentlemen , by whose order ? by your dervants, replyed mine Hoft; and thereupon the boy being called, firrah, faid his Mafter, what orders did! give you about my supper, ? Sir, faid the boy, I believe there is a mistake, and so I told mine Hoft. For I only bespake a dozen of Capons, and a couple of Larks ; and he faid, it was too little, and that he would The Gentleman and his dress two dozen of Larks. Friend laughed at the Boos miftake, and excule; and mine Hoft faid, that he thought two dozen of Larks was little enough for one dozen of Capons. That is true, faid the Gotleman ; but I ordered the boy to bespeak only a couple of Capons, and a dozen of Larks. You fee faid mine Hoft, It is not my miffake, and did nothing but was reafonable. I but, faid the Genstleman, it is unreasonable to think, that we two and the boy can eat fo much as you have provided for us; not fo unreasonable neither, as you think, Sir, replywine Hoft; for l'le lay a good wager, that I'le prodoce one man, that can, and will eat up all the Capons himself ; how, faid the Gentleman ? I'le never believe that, and I'le lay twenty fhillings of it, and venture my Supper ; done, faid mine Hoft ; done, faid the Gentle. man; and fo both their moneys were laid into the other Gentlemans hand. Thus was this wager concluded of and mine Host went to his Teeth and Gur-Chamgion, who attended the fport; he told him the wager ; withat he shook his head, and faid it was a hard task a but he would strive to serve him. Supper being ready, it was Ushered in by mine Host, leading his Champion by the hand; who, after due reverance to the Company, fits down; and the meat being placed on the board, the wager was again recited; and it was further agreed, that the Champion might have what drink he would call for ; and thereupon he began to use his teeth, and the rest of the Company their eyes, to behold the manner how he made fo quick a dispatch of his Victuals. I told you already how, and in that manner he did eat; but now being to do much, he took more time than ordinary ; but in time, ten of the twelve were made invilible, being put into our Gutmongers Christmas Cup board, and the eleventh was on his Trencher, and part of it fent down his belly when mine Hoft looked on him with a more than curious eye, and descovered somewhat of discontent, which caused him to cry our, Come Friend, bear up, and bere's to you; thank you, replyed the Eater; and taking the drink from mine Hoft, he whifpering him in the ear, said; You have lost, I can eat no more. How, said the Gentleman, what sayes he? Nothing, faid mine Hoft, but that he is fure you have loft, for he can eat a dozen more : How.

WES

DOE

.

. 6

0

1

f

6

ŀ

.

how, replyed the Gentle-man, but by my faith he shall not, for i'le have this my self for my Supper; and thereupon he seized on the twelfth Capon, and laying it on his Trencher, cuts it in peices, and give to his Friend. Nay then, said mine Host, I see you agree the wager to be mine: yes, replyed the Gentleman, I had better do so, than fill his belly, and lose my own supper; and thereupon the money was given to mine Host; who now, meerly by his quickness of wit in thinking, and confidence in speaking so contrary to the Eaters saying, won the wager; and, which was most, saving his own credit, and that of his Champion, who clearly confessed, that the wager was in great danger to be lost.

Thus did mine Host get as much as he lost by the former wager, and the Gentleman was well pleased at the loss of his; and all parties being contented, they Went to bed, and next day parted.

And now, continued Mrs. Dorothy, that my hand is in, i'le tell you one Story more of the like nature, and fo conclude with this eating discourse.

It was not long ere some Company came to the House, and in the Company three Women, who were good girls, absolute Bona Roba's, they had a great desire to drink Rhenish wine, and therefore asked if we had any? Mine Host told them yes, he had a Runlet of eighteen Gallons newly come in, and it was excellent good; the women said that would hardly serve one sitting: no said one of the Gentle-men surely it will: they said no, they would wager that they themselves could drink it off at one sitting. The Gentleman told them that if they would, he would not only pay for it, but also give unto each of them forty shillings, to buy a new Petticoat; this they agreed to, nay, they said they would not rise from their seats e'the

31

he

er:

ind

Ya

2

le. ole

en

of

-

ch m-

12 0

d

t

Part. 3:

e're it was done, provided they might have Anchovers and Neats-tongues, and fuch like victuals to intermix a this was agreed on, and that they might the more conveniently do their business, they had each of them an empty Butter-firkin with the head knock'd off, and so taking up their Coates, they laid their bare burns on the firkins, thus they sate, and thus they drank, sometimes eating and other whiles talking, so that in four hours time, all the wine was drank off, and if they had occasion to evacuate, they did that without trouble sitting as they did on butter-firkins.

CHAP. X.

Mrs. Dorothy discourses of the several cheats of Drawers and Tapsters, in venting bad drink and small measure. The Host carries two men before the Justice, where he came off with the loss: He is outwitted by two Guests, but is revenged on them by the boyes assistance.

These were the frolicks we daily had at our house, which were commonly to the profit of mine Host, for whoever won or lost he went away with the profit and gain; and indeed his gain was very great both in his victuals and drink, for when wine was to be fold at eighteen pence the quart, we had two shillings or half a crown, and that we might not tome within the compass of the law, to every bottle of Wine, a small plate of Olives was carried up, neither

Par

faid

Ido

mi

100 ger

aid

tirc

fare

tisf

for thi

Dr

the

th fo

et

10 m

ch

to do

b

neither was this enough to have the price, but the Wine was generally mixt, and bad ; and that the Guefts might as well be cheated in quantity as quality, it was commonly fold in bottles, where we many times had two shillings or half a crown for a bottle of Wine that would not hold above a pinte and an half; and for instance, I will relate one little fine Cheat to that purpose : A Company of Gentlemen come to our house and call'd for Wine, which they drank off but liked not, wherefore they called the Drawer, and defiring another bottle told him that there was two faults in the Wine they had drank, the one that it was not To good as they expected, the other, that the bottle was not full measure; they therefore desired him to mend both the quality and quantity in the next, fince they intended him, and always gave the best price, halfacrown a botile, he promised an amendment as to both, and fo went down, and indeed was as good as his word, drawing the best wine in the Cellar, and that in a Bottle of the largest fize ; they thanked him and for his encouragement to continue honef to them they gave him a fhilling, he pocketed the money and left them, they drank on and finding their wine good, called for more, which they had: But mark the falfnels and ingratitude of this rascally Drawer, he in short time first changed their wine, and gave them worfe, and not contented with that likewile cheated them of their measure, he carried a bottle of wine and filled a glass out of it, when one of the Gentlemen who was not yet fo dim-fighted but he could fee somewhat of the intended cheat, cry'd hold Drawer, let me fee that Glass and Bottle, and thereupon poured the wine into the bottle which was indifferent full but looking on the bottle, and feeing it was very small, he faid: furely this Bottle does not hold a full quart, Oh Lord! Sir, faid

c

hid the Drawer, do you think I would wrong you? lonot know; replyed the Gentleman, but I much difmit it, you have no cause replyed the Drawer, for I in fare that bottle is full meafure, what will you wager of that faid the Gentleman ? any thing you will ; hid the Drawer; But do you think I would put any ircks upon Gentlemen I have fo great respect for, no firely? But faid the Gentleman I muft and will be fainfed, that you may quickly be, replyed the Drawer, for I will fetch a new fealed quart pot and measure it. this was agreed upon, and in fhort time up comes the Drawer with a quart pot in his hand, being come to the Table he taks the bottle and pours the wine out of that into the quart pot, which when looked upon was full as it ought to be, now faid one to the Gentleman who complained, you have wronged the honest Drawtrand must give him fati faction for the abuse, truly replyed he he, I was very much miftaken, and my mind fill gives me that there is some cunning trick and theat in this contrivance, and that it is not as it appears tobe; truly replyed the Drawer, if you think I have done you any abuse you do the wrong, and besides the great respect I have for you who are my Masters best Cultomers, I know if I should attempt to wrong you, my Master would be much troubled and would not keep a Servant in his House that should do it ; well for allthis replyed the Gentleman, I pray let me fee the bottle and quart pot, the Drawer delivered him the quart pot freely, but parted from the bottle with much unwillingness, but in fine the Gentleman had them both when presently he takes the quart pot and out of that filled the bottle, and then he found the Cheat, which Was this sthere was more than half a pint of wine left inthe quare por, how now, faid the Gentleman who is wronged now, where lies the Cheat? The Drawer feein himself found out and fearing he should be beaten replyed; bein

Part

feei

Cant

beir

hou

Dra

up he i

col

the

out

did

ten

1D0

10

De

the cal

PO

01 fai

ho

W

to

th

being

replyed, I do not know, and so turn'd his back and left them ; great was the admiration of the whole company, of the management of this cheat, but much more at the impudence of the Drawer; now they all perceived that the Drawer when he went down into the Celle to bring up a quart pet, brought wine in it, and that a bove half a pint, the acting of the thing it felf was not fo much as the manner, that this knavish Drawer should be fo impudent as to stand in it, and justifie it with language, when as if he had not been too confident, and fo foon as he had put the wine into a quan por had immediately gone away, he might have elcaped undiscovered; but it was his fortune so to be found out to the whole company, who are with they found themselves cheated, yet were hugely pleased with the manner, and made it their discourse in all Taverns they came into for a long time aftet ; but I believe it was to as little purpofe with others, as with our folks, for when any fuch tricks or chears have been told in our house, our people would only give them the hearing, and feem to be astonished with the discourse, but be never a whit the better for it, but immediatly upon the next opportunity do the same thing or as band this was their conftant practice; they would dra wine in glass bottles that were fo thick at the bottom that when they were empty they were as heavy as if they were half full, and also batter'd pots that would not hold out measure, and sometimes would fill a pot not above three quarters full, and when the Drawer brought it in, he would presently fill our a glass and frage them in the face as Juglers do when they are about their Hocus Pocus, flight of hand tricks, and to carre and our of pretence to civility to fill the first graffes they they would do it, but their end was quite different, it pat

ı

6 ış

it

being only to deceive them and to hinder them from freing the falle measure that is brought them, which cannot be discovered when a glass or two is filled out.

Mine Hoft was finely caught one day with a pot not being filled: Two Old Country men coming to our house in a morning called for a quart of wine, the Drawer believing they were to be choused, brought up a quart pot, but it was little more than talf full, he intended they should have it raw, but theing a cold morning, they bad him roft it, that is part it to the fire and burn it; he was now at a loss in not filling out the first glass, but not knowing how to help it, he did fer it down before the fire, and I fun ble, he intended to fill it up afterwards, but he for that, and the old men being bufie in discourse for wit, when on a fudden they look'd, and the pot was melted almost half way down, which was as far as there was no wine in it; with that the maid feeing it all'd out to them, what honest men do you melt your pot? Not we, faid they, it is the fire, but you are like to pay for it, replyed the wench, that is when we do, faid they, at this mine Hoft came up, the maid tells how that these two old men had been telling their Canterbury tales from that the pot was melted, then they must pay for a hid mine Hoft, for it was given to their charge; thereupon the Drawer was call'd, who likewise averred that he gave them the pot with the wine into their charge and custody, and that therefore they ought to look after it, and fince it was damagdto pay for it. They replyed, they took no charge ofit, neither did they touch it, but only ordered him, to burn it well : mine Hoft faid they should pay , and they faid they would not, whereupon he threatned them with marices Warrant; they were fonewhat unwilling to be troubled, and were content to pay for pea

med

Law

hor

had

BOW

coul

tent

upe

fuch

exti

WAY of a

IWC the

Wh

ma

rec

gro

ing

pen

II,

one to dos

buj

210 ath

Bo

Gi

ing

the thi

41

1

the wine, and allow fix pence more for mending the por, mine Hoft replying that would not do, for it could not be mended, and he must have a new one : they feeing him so unreasonable, were content the Justice should decide the Controversie, wherefore before the Juffice they went, and mine Hoft there made his Com. plaint that those two men had melted his quart por and refused to pay for it. The Justice perceiving where the matter lay, and that he told his tale wrong, defired the men to speak, who in plain terms told him they took no charge of the pot, but onely defired the Drawer to cause Wine to be burnt, that he had accordingly fet it down by the fire, and wirhout their handling or touching it, the pot was melted. So, faid the Justicer aid neither of you drink of the Wine? No, not one drop, replyed the old men, and yet we offered to pay for the Wine, and give fix sence towards mending the pot. This is more than you fill need to do, faid the Justice, & then he thus proceeded to mine Hoft.

Friend, with what confidence east you demandany money of these men that had nothing of you? since you would not do them justice, I will; and hereby acquit them from paying any thing for Wine, because they never had any; and for the melting the por, how did they do it ? It was not they, but your fervant who drew the Wine, who had he filled the porfull of wine, the Fire could not have melted it; for I very well understand that the pot was melted no further than it was empty: And further, continued the Justice, this shall not ferve your turn, for I shall Fine you for not filling your pot ; Your Crime is very app rent and evident, and fo shall your punishment be, and I order you, as a Fine, to pay down Twenty shillings for your misdemeanor, or elfe I that make your Missimus, and fend you to Prison. Thus was the Case altered, and the Tale was now of another Hog; for mine Hoft who expected

peded fatisfaction, was forced to give it, and that im-mediatly, or elfe go to Prifon.

This went against the hair, but Necessity hath no Law, and therefore down he paid the money, and came home heartily vexed, not fo much for the money he had paid, as for the diffrace he received a for he was now become the Town-talk: But however, fince he could not help the difgrace, he was forced to be contented with that; but for his lofs, he foon fetch'd it peither in fall measures, Over-reckonings, or some fuch practifes as I have told you. And besides these extraordinary gains he made by Drink, he had his ways to cheat in Victuals, he would reckon for a Difh of anchove's that stood him in ten pence, or a shilling, two fhillings or half a Crown at the least; and carry them in a large Dilh an inch alunder from one another. Whistphalia Ham of Bacon he would cur lothin, and make such a large thew of a little meat, that he would recken two fhillings for that which stood him in two groats; nay, and some times be paid six pence for fouling of Linnen to it. A Neats-tongue of two shillings, he would reck on four hillings, or four hillings fix pence for it, nay though they were cheated of part of it, as I remember he was caught in the manner about one. A Neats-tongue being call'd for, and carried in to the Guelts, but fielt (as the manner is) it was flit down quite through the middle, and not barely fo, but mine Hostels her self had gelded it, and eut off from each fide a fine large flice, which the intended for fome other Gentlemen in the House, to draw down th'other Bottle of wine. This Neats-tongue being carried to the Gueffs, one of them complained of the cutting it, faying, he had rather have had it whole; for (faid he) there is less loss in cutting it in slices cross-ways than this, Why (faid another) you may and and thereupon he took the Tongne

di

ı

to

DO

20 bu

all

on fav

WC

to 01 hav

mi

tw

fizi

bee

gue

200 to g

100

INC

CITE

it h

fire fupp

they 100 nnec

als,

fire,

ing,

and clapt it together again, but it would not come close by above half an inch; and they discovered the place. where it had been pared, to look wide like a month; they perceiving the cheat, were resolved to try a little farther experiment, and therefore called in for mine Hoft, who with a Sit you merry Gentlemen came near: Landlord (faid one) I pray what do you recken for this Nexts - Fongue? Not above four shillings, or four Shillings fix pence, faid he : I but that is too much, reply'd the man, this is but a little one, and I think not a whole one. How! reply'd mine Hoft, not a whole one! that were a good jest indeed; I say tis a whole one, and a large on too. I'le wager a quart of Satk (faid the Gentleman) that you are mistaken; Done, laid mine Hoff: whereupen the Neats-Tongue was clapt together, and mine Hoft quickly faw that he had loft; he began to flounce and flutter, flying, that fome of the company had done it; but leaving the Room, and going to his wife in the Kitchin, he foon found that he had lost indeed : the company being good guests to the house he was unwilling to displeate them; wherefore he drew a quart of wine, went in and acknowledged his error, and paid for it, exculing the matter as well as he could, and they took all in good part. Thus was he fomerimes caught, and paid for it; but not one in twenty times but he caught his guefts, and made them pay for it. They would not only cheat their guelts, but their own fervants bellies; for except they had good trading, that the Servants might feed on the revertione of their guests dinners, they were like to go without, or at leaft have a poor one : the wasvery niggardly, and when they had falt fifth, which was commonly once a week, the would allow them neither Oyl nor Butter, but only Muftard, but the was broken of ther custom in this manner; after they had one day din'd with fifh, dreft as I tell you , down flairs went one fervant, then another, and fo one after ano. ther they all dropt away and went into the Cellar; where when they were come, the Drawer faid, now to our old Custom, that is, fince we have had no oyt nor butter, to our fish, we will foak it in fack, friends, and that of the best, every one his half pint, and fo away to our business: mine Host having some bulinels with some of the fervants, and finding them all missing, went to the Cellar door, and there he not only heard this proposition made by the Drawer, bur law it also confirmed and executed; whereupon he went to his wife, and commanded her for the future to allow his fervants not onely oyl with their mustard to their falt fish, but butter and eggs too if they would hive it, and fo they had for the future. I have known mine Hoft fell and take money for one Joyne of mear twice, in this manner: when a Feast hath been above fiirs, Joynts of Meat, and Fowles that Have hardly been touched, have been brought down and fold to guests below, as fresh brought from the fire, at a very good rate : indeed no opportunity hath been omitted, to gain money. There was a pretty passage hapned thout a couple of guests, that upon occasion lay there two or three nights together ; thus it was : two men came one night to lodge, and being not well in health, it having been cold and rainy, they defired a good he in their Chamber, which they had without any Supper, or any drink, but a quart of burnt wine, and fo they went to bed; the next day proving cold and rainy and their business not being very urgent, they conti-med there, and kept their Chamber, with little victuals, and as little drink ; but however they kept a good hre, and mine Hoft feeing they had little elfe but firemy, was refolved he would get fufficiently by that,

Part

rits

tron ber :

for l boy

and

THE

tour

bat

ber,

the (

uru

ing I

the r fupp

ther

Boil

then

1 C3

four

ney,

with ligh

W15

king

thith

ly to

by th in fe

greal

joy (

and therefore the next morning when they call'd to know what was to pay, he reckoned them ten faillings for fireing for two nights and one day: this demand they thought was very unreasonable, but, they knew that they could not help themselves, for he would have what he demanded; and belides, to fay truth, firing was very scarce and dear in that Country: the two Travellers paid their thot, and intended to leave the house, but the weather proved so cold and stormy, they they could not; wherefore they were forced to flay; but they resolved withall to be better Husbands of of their fireing than they had been, but could not tell how, till in the end looking about the house they faw a great old fashion'd Bed-flead, that lay useles ina Hole : they not telling for what use, asked my Land. lord the price of it, who not dreaming of their purpole, in few words fold it to them for five shillings; when they had bought it, they hired a fellow for one thilling to cur it in prices fit for fireing; and now being furnished with fewel, they resolved to keep a good fire which they did, and calling for mine Hoft, and quart of wine, bad him welcome to their good Husbandry; for the wood they had bought of the bed-Read was asmuch agen as they had paid ten shillings for, wherefore they made a good fire, and fung old role in the gun-room. Mine Hoft being thus beaten at his own weapons, and his own Goods by himself fold to his lofs, was somewhat netled, and discovered his anger to his servants. Master (said the unhappy boy) if you please i'le be revenged of them : do if you can (faid the Mafter) not doing mischief. The boy having a commission, was not long e're he put it in erecution; for joyning another Servant in confederacy with him, they went that evening to wait on the two guefts, when among other matters they talked of fpi rib,

nis and apparitions; quoth the boy, we are often moubled with them here, and especially in this Chamber: lam forry for that (faid one of our Travellers) for lam very fearful of any fuch things : and thus the boy possed them with fear of that which he inrended and executed; for about midnight he and his confedeme rook a Calfour of the Cow-house, and tying his four legs together, but fo as he might not only fland . butgo a little; they put him into our Travellers chamber, and there waited the event ; it was not long e're the Galt began to pace it about the Room, making an usulual noise; and in this manner he continued Raming till both our Travellers were awake, who hearing the noise, were poffeffed with fear and aftonishment, supposing it to be a spirit that was told them of: thereupon they fhrunk close into the bed for fear ; the noise continuing, and no harm or danger coming to them, at length one of them confented to rife and light randle to fee what was the matter; a candle was found, and some remains of fire being still in the chimney, thither he went: and stooping down fell a blowing with his mouth to light the candle, the Calf feeing a light, went thiterwards, and espying somewhat that was pendulous between the Travellers Legs, and taking it to be his Mother Cows Teat, thrutt his chaps thitherwards, and feizing it in his mouth, fell full luftily to fuching, the Traveller perceiving himself caught by the Members, and not knowing by what. and being in fear of losing them, fell a roaring very loud, to the great forrow and grief of his bed-fellow, and as great joy of our unhappy Boy and his Confederate.

1

(

th

CO

Po

tw

G

Wi

on

of

DOL

fho

CHAP. XI.

Six Country Blades steal a Goose and two Hens, by the contrivence of two of them and the Hoft; the other four pay foundly for them, and laugh at their Companions. A Traveller by a mistake lies with another mans Wife. A noise of Fidlers are forced to pay for their samciness.

ide poor Traveller, who was thus used by the Calf, ftill continued his roaring out, and the Calf being hungry, did fuck very hard, but to no purpole, our young Crack-rope and his Companion still lifeining and laughing : but in fine, the noise continuing, and they doubting that there was more than fport, they entered the Chamber, where they faw the Call schole to the Traveller, but could not rell what he did there; but the Traveller still making a noise, they came near, and perceiving the Calfs mistake, they thrust somewhat into his mouth, and thereby dilingaged him from the Travellers Bawble : He ftill lay on the Ground whilft they carried the Calf out of the Chamber, foon returning with a lighted Candle ro fee what was the matter : the Traveller was by that time somewhat come to himself, and feeling that he had loft nothing, was indifferently farisfied : they being now entered the Chamber, asked what was the matter? and wherefore he made fo much noise? he now looking about the Chamber, and feeing nothing but People with a light, whom he knew, could not well EE

ı

1

tell what answer to give, only he told them, that the Devil, or some wicked Spirit had been there, and he had like to have been mischiev'd by him, but that now he found himself well again : his Fellow-Traveller likewise said that there had been some walking in the Chamber, but what it was, and wherefore his Companion roared out, he knew not : in fine, they who had done the mischief were thanked for their readiness to come and affift them; and so with some perfwations our Traveller went to bed again, where he lay till the next morning, although he flept not, fo great was his fear of the foul Fiend; but fo foon as morning came they both arose, and though the weather still convinued cold and rainy, yet they could not be perswaded to stay any longer in our Inn, but paying there reckoning lett it, and half their wood behind them; fo that mine Hoft was now no loofer by this birgain, it being ready cleft to fell to the next cold Gueft that fhould arrive there.

The last passage hapned in the Winter time, a little before Christmas, which soon after coming, we had two or three notable Accidents that befel in our Inn ; the first was this : half a dozen of young Country Blades had been abroad a Fowling, or a Fooling rather, and among other purchase that they had, they coming near a Farm-house where there was store of Poultry, at two thers which they made, they kill'd two Hens and a Goofe: this with the reft of their Game they brought to cur house to be dressed against the next day for dinner : they drank fome bottles of wine when they brought them, and being merry (faid one) we will to morrow drink a health to the owner of the Hens and Geele: well, that we will (faid another,) but I would not for forty thillings that he should know of it, for if he did, I doubt he would make

Co

his

m11

pei

100

the call

Ho

Fro

fes

for der

ifI

for fay

you

wh

Wel

Co

tm:

wh:

leng

juft

ther

our lour

hey

(12

(fa

Maj

this

YOU

the

make us pay fawce: and truly I am yet fomewhat fearful that we thall be discovered : fo am I, faid and ther, and fo a third; well, if we be found out we can pay for them, and my thare thall be ready. This was their discourse, and so for that time they parted; butit was not long ere two of the Company returned, and calling for a bottle of wine fell heartily a laughing, and (fayes the one to the other) I am refolved it shall be so, and with the affistance of mine Host we may carry the matter very closely; and thereupon mine Most was call'd for : he being come, they told him that they must have his assistance in a design, which he promifed should not be wanting, and thereupon one of them thus began : mine Hoft, we have this day, as you know, been a Fowling, and part of what we brought in we plunder'd for, or in plain Euglish, stole; now some of our Company are very conscious of their guilt and are not only penitent, but fearful; now it is our delign to increase their fear, and get some money out of them to make us merry; and thus we have contrived it : to morrow when we are towards the latter end of our dinner, I would have you to tell us, that there is a Country fellow, who enquires for fuch persons as we are, and likewise that he was here as this day to enquire of us, and that he talks of a warrant that he hath sgainst us about some Poultry his Master loft, and that he suspected us to be guilty; and withal you may add, that he is resolved to have the Law against us, and that you have had much adoe to perswade him to be patient till we had din'd. Mine Hoft having heard the instructions, was no Fool, but foon understood them, and procur'd a Country Fellow to manage the bufiness fo well, that they should be all startled, only (faidhe) you shall allow him half a Crown for his labor, and him the rest that he gets of you (for I know you intends | way

COM

1

f.

.

.

e

d

d

1,

Composition) shall be justly return'd you. Thus was ills Affair agreed on and accordingly the next day managed ; for the Guelts alle came at the hour appointed, and merrily drank about till Dinner was sought in ; which being come they fell to eating and the Goose being well nigh earen, a Glass of Wine was call'd for to drink a Health to the Owner, and mine Hoft himfelf was then call'd for up to make one in the Frolick : he being come, and feeing whereabouts Caules went, thought it now a fictime to begin, and therefore he thus befpeaks the Company : Gentlemen, Iunderstand your Health, and shall willingly drink it, bur ill be not miftaken, you will have but little cause to be lo merry on this occasion : why? what's the matter, lays one? what's the matter, faid another? I'le tell you prefently, reply'd mine Holt, but firft let us drink; whereupon up went his Glafs, and down Gutter-lane went the Wine, and mine Hoft being grave in his Countenance, and flow in his Speech, they all, as amzed, flar'd either on him or one another, wondring what should be the meaning of mine Hoft's Speech : At, leng i he fpake, and acquainted them with the bufinels. just as he and two of the Company had agreed on a then having done, added farther, That he had endeavoured to underfeel the Fellow that was below, but he found him very obstinate, and doubted very much that y he word make no end but what the Law should: How! (faid one) is your fooling come to this! Oh Lord! (faid another) we have brought our Hoge to a fair Warket : Well (faid a third)but what muft we do in this case ? Truly (said mine Hoft) if I may advise 15 you, I would have one of you go down to treat with) the fellow, and fee what composition you can draw him to: This was in the end thought to be the best May, and thereupon one went down with mine Hoft !

To foon as the Country-man faw him) being well in Fo firmaed in every thing) he cries out, nay, I am surel of am in the right, for though the man hath changed in Clothes, yet that won't serve his turn: I know my well Sir, faid he, by your hair and beard. What a you know replyed the guefts ? why I know , faid in fe Country-man, that you are one of the fix that folem in Masters two Hens and Goose; I saw you well enough when you did it, and know you all well enough whe is Tice you sgain, I follow'd you hither yefterday, & le you hous'd, and able to Iwear before Mr. Juffice the you are the persons ; and my Mafter is resolved to pro te fecute you, for he hath loft as much Poultry this win ter as is worth five pound, and now we have found you you hall pay for all. How! (faid the Gueft) furth to you do not mean as you fay ; one body may be lik the another, and you may be miftaken , and belides, ifi je were fo, that we were the Parties, you mean yet! h great deal less than five Pound, which I hope will fere h the furn for two hens and a goofe, which you fay isal fa you loft. I (faid the fellow) that is all indeed that w for all my Master hath lost within this moneth, and my Master and I both believe you had them all, or else you would not fo readily have found the way into out yard; and therefore I fay, and fo my Mafter fayes, that wou hall pay for them. Nay friend, (faid mine Hol) in A pray let me perswade you to be more ressonable i g your demands : reason me no reasons, (faid the fellon) it was unreasonable for them to come and rob my Mafter, and therefore I will not be reasonable; I will fure I thall lofe my there of Goole and other Pouling this Christman, that I should have had, had not to been robb'd. Nay but come, (said mine Host) let to be sake up this matter : I fay you fhall not, (reply'd the

Pay

m

you

Fellow) the Juffice shall know the matter, and no bo" tel dy elfe; but if they be your riends, if you will make in end, and pay me the money, I'le be rul'e by youthe Arm, and leading him into a drinking room, faid, come the let you and I talk a little further of this matter, and in the mean time, said he to the Guests, go you up to your Friends and confer with them about it. How, the said the fellow, you mean to lead me out of the way while they get away from me. No, replyed mine Holt, the flepals my word for their appearance. Nay, that matters not much, quoth the fellow; for I have fuch a Warrant in my pocket, as will fetch them again in the you Devils name. Having thus faid, he and mine Hoft went todrink a pot of Ale together, and laugh a while; in the mean time our Gueft went up to his companions to if it telate how things were like to go with the fellow, but te needed not tell them, for they being all concern'd. bud liftned at the flairs head to what the Fellow had fild, and therefore knowing in what case they were, W they all agreed to contribute to the fellows farisfaction; but they thinking five pounds were too much, grumbled at the demand, but was refolved to give that rather than fail, and have further trouble. One of the two confederates feeing how matters went, and though he that was willing to put a trick upon his companions, yet ihought five pounds was too great a fum to get by wag. e gery, he therefore made a proposal that he would go OW) down to the fellow and mine Hoft and treat with them, and he would warrant to get the business of for a great deal less: They were soon content with the propoficion, whereupon down he went, and after fome time fpent with mine Hoft and the Country man, be returned, faying, Come, come Friends, draw your moneys, for I have ended the Controverfie, K 2

di

15 pt

10 th

A

in

be

Br

CI

m

he fel

fig

10

in

do ly

his

fo

th dr

H of

w

te

th for lib

th

and I hope to your content; we must be Noble-men! a Noble a piece, in all Forty fhillings is the fum agreed upon to compound this brabling Bufinels, and herein we are much engaged to mine Hoft for his civilia. who hath much perswaded the fellow, and indeed the fellow by his perswafions is brought to be so civil, that I have promis'd him Half a Crown for himself. All the Company were all well contented with this Compolition and thereupon readily laid down their money, which one of our Confederates pretended to carry down to the fellow, but he put it up in his own pocker, onely giving him the Half Crown he had promised and ordering half a dezen of Beer more for managing the Affair to handlomly. And thus was this Advent ure end dand in thore time the Company feperated, but the two Confederates foon came back again, and shared fakes of the moreys, and there they laughed at the eafinel and credulity of their Companions, and mine Hoft was as merry as they, and had as much cause, for if the Provert be true, Let them laugh that win, he was fure to Win moft, and therefore might well laugh; for he made them pay fawcily for the Sawces to their Goofe, and in the confusion they were then in, it was no hard matter to mif-reckon them feveral bottles of Wine, and the two Confederates who onely managed this Affair to make sport and not for gain, delivered all their profits, which was 26 s. 8 d. incomine Holis hands to be fpent two or three days after, when they were to bring more company to laugh at this Adverture, and I remember they then came, and mine Holl knowing they came eafily by their moneys, wasteldved to put in for a thare of it, and fo he did, and had it; for they had but three Difhes of Fift, but he agin made them pay for their Sawce, reckoning fourtes thillings for that and dreffing it, although the Fift itell did 0

¢

t

D

.

y

t,

Id

3

re

ıc

d ae

nc

10 he

h

u u

of

ed

اله fts

ey

1 of

ol-

u;

110

didacoft but half fo much ; thefe were his Tricks.

But there was about that time fuch a trick plaid by smiftake, as I have feldom heard of: Several Companies were in the house and lodged there, and it being long nights, much of that redious time was spent in Gaming, and higgedly piggedly one with another, all Companis mixt in that Pastime ; but it growing late, those that were weary and sleepy dropt away to bed : Among the reft, one man who had a very handsome woman to his Wife went to bed, and his Lodging was in a Chamber where there was another Bed; the man being in Bed, laid his wearing Clothes, viz. Doub'er, Breeches and Cloak upon him, and puting our the andle went to fleep; in fort time after another fir gle min who was to lodge in the Bed in the same Chamber went up, and walking about, a conceit came into his head, that it was probable he might have a Shee-bedfellow, and in order thereto he thus carried his on Defign: He put off his own Clothes, and laid them very orderly on the Bed where the man was afleep, first taking off those of his Chamber-fellows, and when he had done, he very fairly spread them on the Bed he was to lye in ; having done this, he went to bed and put out his Candle, expeding the event, which happened to be loss he hoped and expected; for not long after up came the woman, intending to go to bed to her Husband, undreft her felf, and feeing and well enough knowing her Husbands clothes, believing that to be a sufficient sign of her Husbands being there, not looking on the face which was purposely hid, sheput out her Candle &went to Bed to the wrong man, who although he pretended then to be afleep, yet he did her right before morning; for the still supposing it was her husband, gave him free liberty to do what he would. Her bed-fellow, though he had taken much pains and was K 3 Wear

Patt a Per

Ac

mı ki

inc ces

ran thi

weary, yet towards morning confidering that if the foli matter were discovered, he might have fower Sauce and his fweet Meat, studied and contrived how to come of ear as well as he had come on, and therefore turning tolilled Bed-fellow and kiffing her, &c. as a Farewel, he pre it an tending to rife and make water, went out of the Bed tho he foon found the way to his Chamber fellows Bellin fide, and there took off his clothes, dreff'd himfelf and mile departed. The woman miffing her Bed-fellow, which do the thought had been her Husband , much wondred ion what was become of him, and lay and fludied in green livi confusion, the knew not what to do or fay, and the be 1 gan to diffruft that the had a wrong Bed-fellow, especialis ally when the confied'rd with her felt that her Husband bu was not wont to be fo kinde : when the was partly fer when fible of the mistake, the could not tell how to think of in a remedy; if the should arise and go into the other Bed, the the might chance to be mistaken again, and therefore the in this confusion the Knew nor what to do : whilefile | m was in these thoughts a maid with a Gandle appeared, and who passing through the Room gave her clear light that her Husband was in the other Bed, the there the fore refolved now to rife, take her Clothes, and go to a Bed to her Husband; but he who had flept hardal Co night was now awaked with the noise of the maid pal fing through the Chamber, andtherefore he leaps out of the Bed and felt for a Chamber-pot, at the length he found one, having used it, and going to return to Bed where he had layen, his wife then took the opportunity to call to him, faying, Sweet-heart, whether go you! you miftak your Bed : No fure, faid the man, where are you? Here, faid the ; he bearing her voice foon found in out where the was, but could not be prefently be per-Swaded that he had layen there all night, you that fee pla that by and by, replyed the, when you can fee your in clothe

reg per 3. the lettes on this Bed : if it be fo, then you are in the rig ten othe, and that he agreed to foon after day light ap of eared and he seeing his clothes on the Bed, was fatispre i and the woman in the morning enquiring for the man ed mo had been her Chamber-tellow, could nor finde im; the was earnest in her inquiry after him. and this and miled fome jealousie in me, but I was soon after resalydof all by the man himfelf, who came again to our red bule and told me. This was a fine Christmas Frolick, mil will adde one more, and so have done with them.

The Fidlers of our Town haveing had good trading i dis Christmas were grown proud and furly, and had mil buled fome Gentlemen, who told mine Hoft of it ; he the was good at inventing mischief, soon contrived of sway to be revenged of them, and in order thereunto, ad, the next day a confiderable Dinner was bespoke, and the Fidlers were fent for to attend and play to them. mich they did all Dinner. The Gentlemen having didiche Fidlers had the Remains for their Dinner, and hen again they fell a tuning their inftruments and d played luftily, whileft the Guefts drank of their Cups a roundly; at length they fell to Dancing, and many Countrey Dances they had, spending the day in all manner of Joval and Sprightly Recreations; the night bing come, and therefore a fit time to put their plot in execution, they again Danced several Rambling Danits, and anon they all defired and agreed to Dance the Cultion-dance, which they did, and in their humours rimbled from one Room to another all over the house, this mulick pacing it afore them, and now one dropt imy, and anon another, till in the end all the Gueffs were gone, and none were left but the Fidlers, who ftill Plaid on expecting their Company. Mine Hoft feeing Wasnow time came into them, and cauling them to

it

0 li

H

20

h

25

2

21

M

in 01 ho

in m b₂

th

1 tu

tw pe

fer

Ma pri

to

Wi

m:

Ho

ftal

IF:

cease their playing, asked where are the two guests? they reply'd they knew not: no, said he, if you do not finde them, you are like to suffer; for if you have played away my Guests, you shall pay their reckoning: he was so peremptory in his demanns, that it was to no purpose to contradict it; and the reckoning amounting to three pounds. he made the five Fidlers pay ten saillings a man, and told them he was a looser in abaiting them ten shillings of his reckoning; they were forced and could not help it, and therefore paid down their dust, and they who had not money enough were sain to leave their Fidles, and go home without, and end, Christmas to the Tune of Lachryma.

CHAP. XII.

Mris. Dorothy discourses of mine Hosts missortunes, As first bow he was cheated of a Silver Bowl. Secondly, of a thirty pound reckning; and Thirdly, was carried away Prisoner, and forced to pay Fifty pound for his Ranson.

Thus, continued Mris. Dorothy, was this revenge managed by mine Host, and the Guests who had the reckening of thirty pound to pay, came the next day and paid it, and then appointed to come the next week and spend the fifty shillings mine Host had gotten from the Fidlers, which they did accordingly; and thus said she, did we finish our Christmas: and now hope friends, said she to me and Mris. Mary, that you will give me leave to finish my discourse; not so long as you can think of any more of these stories, replyed 1, and so did Ms. Mary; and thereupon we both joyned

91250

d

II

II .

d

M

g

d

Á

my

inlour delires to entreat her to proceed. Well, replyed he, if I muft, then I will alter the Nature and Quality of my discourse, and as I have told you of mine Hofts good fortune, and wayes to get money, fo I will acquaint you with fome of his misfortunes, and how he loft money ; for Fortune was the fame thing to him is the hath been to me. and I think to all others ; we all have our feveral turns and changes, fometimes we are on the top, and anon on the bottom of Fortunes Wheel; and as that is, so is the World, round and rouling, and still in motion, and so are our Forenes various: I replyed, I had full experience of this truth, and could freely subscribe to it; but, continued I, good honest Doll, let us be beholding to you fo much as to prevent your discourse, and relate all the other transactions that you can remember befel during your flay in this pleasant place, for by what you have told us, I muft needs term it fo. Well, faid fine, fince you will have it fo, i'le endeavour to satisfie you, and then she thus began.

Thave already told you of one of my Hosts missortunes in the quart pot, and how he was forced to pay twenty shillings instead of satisfaction which he expected; It was not long before that, that he had a more sensible loss, for one morning in comes a Countryman which calls for a Flaggon of Beer, and defires a private Room, for, sayes he, I have company a coming to me, and we have basiness. The Tapster accordingly shews him a room, and brings a Flaggon of Beer, and with it a Silver Cup worth three pound; the Countryman drank off his beer, & call'd for another Flaggon, & withal for mine Host to bear him company: mine Host seeing him alone, sate and talked with him about sate-affairs, till they were both weary & mine host was stady to leave him: well, said the Country-man, I see n

n

h

b

t

it

CC

be 1 lif

no

GE

ch

140

th

WO

RDI

fee

th lu

mi

ifh

h¢.

my Company will not come, and therefore I will not flay no longer, neither did he; but having drank up his Beer, he call'd to pay : A groat, quoth the Tapfter. there 'tis, faid the Countrey-man, laying it down, and To he went out of the Room, the Tapfter staid behinde to bring away the Flaggon and Silver Cup, but though he found the Flaggon, yet the Cup was not to be found, wherefore he haftily runs out and cries, Stop the man, The Countrey-man was not in such haste, but that he quickly stopt of himself; he was not quite out of the doors, and therefore he foon returned to the Bar, where when he was come, he faid, Well, what is the matter? what would you have? The Cup, faid the Tapster that I brought to you; I left it in the Room, faid the Countrey-man: I cannot finde it, faid the Tapfter; and at this noise mine Hoft appeared, who hearing what was the matter, faid, I am fore the Cup was there even now, for I drank in it ; it is there ftill for me, faid the Countrey-man . Look then further, faid mine Hoft; the Tapiter did to, but neither high nor low could he finde this Cup : well then, faid mine Hoft to the Countrey. man, if it be gone you must have it, or know of the going of it, and therefore you shall pay for it : Not I, faid the Countrey-man, you fee I have none of it:1 have not been out of your house, nor no body hath been with me, how then can I have it? you may fearch me, Mine Hoft caused me to be searched, but there was no Cup to be found, however mine Hoft was refolv'd not to lose his Cup to, and therefore he sends for a Constable, and charges him with the Countrey man, and threatens him with the Justice ; all this would not do, and the Countrey-man told him, That threatned Folks live long, and if he would go be fore a Julice, he was ready to go with him. perplexed, Mine Holt was more and more

P

d

le

h

d,

١,

e

.

e

3 ıt

.

ıt

15

1,

.

10

e

.

C

I,

1

n

Cq.

0 x

d

6

4

n.

the

and feeing he could not have his cup, nor nothing confeli'd, before the Juftice they went, when they came there mine Hoft made his complaint, and told the ftory as truely it was, and the Country-man made the fime answer there, as he had done before to mine Hoft: the Justice was perplexed, not knowing how to do inflice, here was a Cup loft, and the Country-man did not deny but he had it, but gone it was, and although the Country-man was pursued he did not flie, he had no body with him, and therefore it could not be conrighed away by confederacy, and for his own part he had been; and was again fearched, but none found abont him, and he in all respects pleaded innocency : this, though confidered and weighed in the ballance of juffice, he could not think that the Country-man had it, and therefore to commit him would be injustice; he considered all he could, and enclined to favour the Country-man who was altogether a stranger, and he believed innocent, especially when he considered what skind of Person mine Host his accuser was, of whose life and conversation he had both known and heard erough, and cause him to believe that it might be poslible that all this might be a Trick of mine Hofts to theat the Country-man, and therefore he gave his judgement, that he did not believe by the Evidence that was given, that the Country-man, had the Cup, and that he would not commit him unless mine Host woold lay, and fwear point blank Felony to his charge, and of that he defired mine Hoft to beware. Mine Hoft feeing which way it was like to go, faid no more, but that he left it to Mr. Justice, who being of this opinion Itold you of, discharged the country-man, and advised mine Hoft to let him hear no more of these matters, & ifhe could not fecure his plate, & know what company he delivered it to then to keep it up. Mine hoft thanked the Inflice for his advice, and fo departed, the Countrey-man going about his business, and he returning home, being heartily vexed at his Loss, and the carriage of the whole Affair, which was neither for his profit nor credit; but he was forced to fit down with the Lofs. being heartily vexed to think how he should lose the Cap the threw away fome money in going to a Gunning-man to know what was become of it, but all they could rell him was, that he would hear of it again, and To he did horrly after, though it was to his further coft, and to little purpole. He had some occasions at our Country- Town during the time of the Affizes, and there feeing the prisoneres brought to their Trials, a. mong others he espyed the Countrey-man whom he had charged with the Silver Cup, by enquiring what was his crime? was told it was for piching a Pocket: Nay then, faid mine Hoft. I may chance to hear of my Bowl again, and thereupon when the Tryal was over, and the Prisoners carried back to the Goal, he went and enquired for the Countrey-man, to whose presence he was soon brought; Oh Lord, mafter! said he, how do you? who thought to have feen you here? nay faid mine Hoft, who thought to have feen you here? I believe you have not met with fo good friends in this Countrey as you did at our Town, of our Jul tice ; but let that pale, come let us drink together, whereupon a Flaggon of Beer was call'd for, and fome Tobacco, which they very lovingly drank off, and Imobk'd together; which done, faid mine Hoft to the Countrey-man; I would gladly be refolved in one point which (I question not) but you can do; Isuppose you mean (faid the Countrey-man) about the old bulinels, of the filver Cup you loft : yes truly faid mine Holf, & the loling of it doth not fo much vex me, as the manner how it was loft, &therefore, continued he if you wild

F

a

15

16.

ne

nd

he

int

QU

fs,

&

190

me the kindnels, to give me latisfaction what became of it. I do protest I will acquit you although you are direally guilty. No, this will not do, replyed the Country-man, there is somewhat else in the cale : well then. faid mine Hoft; if you will tell me, I will give you ten fillings to drink. Ready money does very well in a Prison, faid the Country-man, and will prevail much ; but how fhall I be affured you will not profecute me. if I should chance to be concerned ? for that, replyed mine Hoft, I can give you no other Warrant but my Oath, which I will inviolably keep: well then faid the Country-man, down with the merty Griggs, let me handle the money, and i'le be very true to you; and as for your charging me with it, I fear you not. Mine helt being big with expectation to know how this cleanly conveyance was wrought, foon laid down the ten Millings; and then the Country man thus proceeded : I must confess that I know which way your Cup went, but when you charged me with it I had it not ; neither was it out of the room, and I must tell you this, that if you had fought narrowly, you might have found it, but it was not there long after. We who live by our wits must work by policy more then down right firength, and this cannot be done without Confederares, and I had fuch in the management of this affair, for I left the Cup fastned with foir wax under the middle of the board of the Table where I drank, which place of the Table by reason it was covered with a cloath, as you may remember it was, it could not well be feen ; and therefore you and your fervants miffed of it : you know that very willingly I went with you to the Juffices; and whilst we were gone those Friends and Confederates of mine shom I had appointed, and knew the Room and every thing elfe, ment into the house, and into the same Room, where they

Par

M

th

da

to bu

th ri

in di

P

H

they found the filver Cup, and without the least sufpi tion went fairly off with it, and at a place appointed we mer, and there acquainted one another with our Adventures, and what purchases we had made, we equally shared them between us. Mine Hoft at the hearing of this discourse was mightily surprized, although fully farisfied; but yer, faid he, I would be refolved one question, which is this, how if we had found it were you had put it whilft you were there? why truly replyed the cheat (for now I may call him fo) then you could have charged me with nothing, and I would have put it off with a jeft, and if that would not have done, the most you could have done, had been only to have kick'd and beaten me, and those things we of our quality must venture : you know the old Proverb, Nothing venture, nothing have, and Faint heart never won fair Lady; and we have this other Proverb to encourage us, that Foreune belps the bold; as it dort commonly those of our quality, and she did me I thank her in that artempt. And there did this Varlet descant upon his Actions, to the great fatisfaction of mine Hof, who finding there was no more to be had of him, left him, and foon after the Town; coming home, and giving us an account of this adventure; and this was at nother of his misfortunes, which was foon after followed by another worfe than the laft. and thus it was A Company of pretending Gallants one evening at rived at our house, and there was in their companys young lad of about ten years of age, on whom they all waited, giving him respect equal to a Person of Honot, and their Mafter ; they were foon furnished with Lodgings, the best in the house, where they bespikes plentiful supper, which was provided, drell, and lent to them. Mine Hoft enquiring what, and who the young Gentle-man was, whom he supposed was their Malter

Mafter ; they told him that he was the Son of a French Marquels, giving him a name to that purpole, and that his Father their Lord and Mafter, would in few dayes be there ; likewife that they being recomended to his house by a Friend of his, who warranted them good ulage, they were come thither, and there they insended to flay till their Lord came. Mine Hoft was hugely pleased with this recital, and he questioned nor the truth of it, because the young Gentleman could not, or would not speak any thing but a little Gibberifh French. Thefe Gueits flaid there a fortnight eating and drinking in most plentiful manner; and every day fome or all of them did ride out, leaving only one person to wait on their Lord, and they came home very honestly at night. They had now been fourteen dayes and lain at Wrack and Manger, they and their Horses; and their Bill amounted to thirty pounds, which being a round fum of money; he began totry if he could get any, and to that end spake by the by to him that was chief person next to the young Lord, but he was deaf of that ear, and told him that it would not be above two or three dayes e're he was fure their Lord himfelf would come, and then he fhould not only be paid, but also rewarded for the care, and respects he had shewed to his Son : Mine Host was fatisfied with their reasons, and so went about his businels; and fo did this Blade about his; for calling ? confultation of his Brethren, they resolved to be gone the next day, and give mine Hoft the go by for his Reckoning, and therefore they fo ordered the matter, that that night whilft they were at supper, and mine Hoft with them ; in enters another man, a new face, and enquired if my young Lord such a one, and his Attendants were there? yes faid the Hoftler, who took his Horse, and then calling the Chamberlain, he was con-

Part. 2 Part

inno

his f

his E

fow

enou que

Y

belli

Q:111

ond Cav

IWO

they

Nai

tor I

they

Sel VI

pret

whi

on I

him

101 thei

200

MOF

diff

WOI

as k

te b derv

they

that

Mo

kind

fed |

conducted into the Room where the rest of his Ac quaintance were, he being entered the Room, made his obeyfance to his young Mafter; and then putting his hand into his Pocket pull'd out a Letter, which he presented to him , and another who fate next him took from him, opened, and read, telling mine Hoft that the Letter was from their Lord, who promited to bethere with them by the next day at noon ; glad did they feem to be, and fo was mine Hoft, who thought now he was near the receiving of his money : the company then told him that he must provide a plentiful dinner, and that they would all ride forth in the morning to meat their old Mafter, only they would leave their young Mafter behind to his care; to this mine Hoft was content, and the next morning they arole early, mounted their horses, and away they went, leaving their Lord in bed. Mine Hoft provided dinner according to the directions, and noon came, but no Lord, or Attendants; at length dinner was forced to be taken up, or spoiled, and then the young Lord was enquired for, who was still in Bed, and could not rife, for they had taken his fine Clothes with them : in fine, upon fearch, an old Country Suit was found, which naw our your g Lord owned to be his, and could fpeak English, faying, they were gone and carried away his fine cloaths. Mine Hoft hearing he could fpeak Englift, asked him leveral questions, which the Boy answered readily enough, and by that he understood that they sook him up in those Clothes, and other rare matters if he would go with them, be ruled by them, and learn a few heard words; and fo in conclusion mine Holl found to his cost, that they were a company of cheats, who came to do that to him , he had done to other, and though his lofs was great, yet he was forced to lit down contented , as for the Boy he being absolutely innocent

innocent, he was only turned out of the doors to feel his fortune. Thus, faid Mistrels Dorothy you see he had his bitter with the sweet, and to his sweet meat he had sower sawce; and although his loss was considerable mough, yet soon after he had another of worser conser.

quence, and thus it was ;

You must note, that it was now in the time of rebellion, and there was a small garrison of Souldiers gurrered in our Town of the Round-heads Party, and about ten miles off there was another Garrison of Cavaliers. Now one day there came to our Town two Gentlemen very well mounted and armed; and they had a Pals from a round-headed Collonel our Neighbour, and coming to our Town, and enquiring for the best Inn, they were directed to our house, where they took up their Quarters; they pretended themselves to be Persons of Q elicy, and therefore spent pretty handlomely at the first, but in their stay there, which was about eight dayes, they had run five pounds on the score; mine Host desiring his money, they told him suddenly he should have it, moneys were coming to them, but if he had not the patience to stay until their money came, then (he knew) that they had two good Horses in his 'tible, and he should in lieu of his money have which he pleased, at such a rate as any indifferent person should adjudg the best of them to be worth : mine Hoft feeing them answer him to fair, was as kind as they, and told them that he did believe them to be Gentlemen of quality, and that he scorned to undervalue them fo much as to difmoun them , and as they came one Horie-back to depart on toot, but that he had rather wait a while longer for the Money, which they faid they flaid for they kindly thanked him for his courtefie; and promifed him to requite it ; and thereupon all Persons refted MCH

well fatisfied, but no money coming at the time they faid they expected, he again asked them for money and indeed it was their defire that he should do fo, a elfe the delign they had in hand, and intended to carry on, could not be well executed; and therefore that they might bring their project to execution, they s gain offered him one of their horfes , he had a greut mind to one of them, having a Customer ready that would give him a very good price, told them that fine they were fo willing he was fo too, and that they might possibly have their Horse again when their money came t it is all as one for that, rep ved the Gentlemen we had rather go without horfes than you should he disfatisfied, and therefore choose which of the two you will have they being both, faid he good, I care my which of them, and to that end if you pleafe to marow we will all three ride out of the Town a mile ! fo, and then you may conclude which you like beft,all as for the price we will well enough agree upon that; to this mine hoft confented, and the next day they il three mounted their horfes, and away they rode, be to the great forrow of us all, for thefe Gentlemen while had lain thus long in our house were Caveliers, and by donged to the adjoyning Garrison, and when they hil drawn mine hoft with them as far as they could will lingly perswade him, and that he offered to retun they then drew, and with Sword in one hand, and Pl tol in the other, they came up to him and commands him to Rand, for he was their Prifoner, he asked the for what? and would have disputed the case with the but it was to no purpofe; they were deaf to all po fwations, and he living in a Round-headed Gamin they concluded him to be one, and therefore he cheir lawful Prifoner, and as one they would guardin to their guravers , fo they faid, and fo they did, thing his Sword from him, they caused him to ride on space, till they brought him to their Querters ; before their Commander they conducted him, who adudged him to be a Prisoner, and the next day resolved on his Ransome, which he valued at a hundred sounds : the one half he ordered the Gentlemen fould have, and the other to be devided among the indigent Souldiers? this was his doom: and now my poor Hoff was delivered into Cuffody ; he writ away to his Wife to acquaint her with this doleful News, the could not raile fo much Money, and therefore he was like to continue ; but in the end, by the affiftance of fone Gentlemen who were Guefts to the houfe and Caveliers, the got on half of the Ranfome to be abated, and to the fifty pounds being fent, he was delivered up, and came home to chear his Wife and Family.

CHAP. XIII.

At the execution of a Felon several Cheaters meet, and feeing a Countrey-man draw a Parfe of money refolue to chear him of it, which they do first by a brafs Chain, and afterwards by drawing him in to bet as Gameing. They were again cheated by mine Hoft, and the principal Cheat comically punished.

A Iftrefs Dorothy here putting a ftop to her dif-Va courfe, we thereby underflood the had finished wherefore I thus discoursed her : truly now I find that to be true of your Holt, which I have experimented in my felf, and that we must meet with many rubs &c milis great comings in, by his extraordinary gain in trasibers true replyed M. Dorothy, but as he had con siderable gain, so he had many wayes to spend it, and many spenders, his Wife and Children being all as expenlive as might be, and what was got over the Devils Back, was fpent under the Devils belly : and therefore though much money went through his hands in a year, yet it went through, and little fluck there or flaid with him, to that he was feldome Mafter of any confiderable fum of money; and therefore it went hard to raile this fum of money, and fome of his Plate was fain to march off to produce it , but that being paid and he come home, we were all well enough fatisfied, and he rold his wife this was most certainly the forume of War, but he questioned not but in short time he would fetch it up again; as indeed he did in uling those feveral ways I have told you of ; and now I hope (faid the) I have told you enough to fatisfie your curiofity; truly, replyed I, you have taken a great deal of pains, but if you have any more in your budget out with them, for what you have hitherto related hath not only been pleafant but profitable, and very full of variety. Well, (replyed the) fince you will have it fo, I will proceed a little further, and recount some passages st considerable as any you have hitherto heard. There was (continued the)not long before this time a bloody murder committed, for an honest Country-man that lived about fix miles from us, one market day was driwing his Team of Horses and Cart loaden with Com to our Town to fell, and being come about half way, he was met by a lufty tatterdemallion rafcal that was on foor, travelling on the Road, he first asked the Countrey-man to give him fomething, telling him he was a poor Traveller and had been robb'd : quoth the Countrey - man, friend, I have nothing to gire you, for I have no money, being now going to Market with this Corn to make money of it ; the fellow

femed to reft contented with this answer, and therenoon walked on with the Countrey-man; but they had not gone far but the Devil entring into this fellow, perswaded him, here he might have a great prize, and therefore fill walked on, he at length feeing the Road clear of Paffengers, and a convenient place for him to put his purpose in practice, with a lufty Gudgel he had in his hand, he ftruck the poor Countrey-man over the Had, that down he fell a sprawling, and not content therewith, drew him a little out of the road, and in most cruel manner cut his throat; having this done, he leizes on the fore-horse of the Team, and leads him also with the Team and Cart out of the road to a convenient place, where he stops, and then drawing the body of the murthered Countrey-man to a Dirch-fide, he there made a hole, and having ftrip'd him of all his clothes, buried him, and stripping himself of those Rigs he had on , he putting on the Countrey-mans closthes, buried his own with the Countrey-mans body ; and having thus done, he lead the Team into the Road again; this was done one winters morning early before day; and fo he had the conveniency to do all this without interruption, and now with Whip in hand, and habited like a Country-man, he drives on to our town to Market; he took up his standing at the usual place, and had the good fortune not to be questioned of any body, but enquiring how the rates of corn Went, he accordingly fold his at a good price as any ? and he not only made money of his Corn, but hearing there was a horse Fair that day at a Town but three miles off, and having dispatch's betimes he drove thither and foon had a Cuftomer for both Horfes and Carr. and there he bought him a faddle horfe to ride on, being thus fitted to his purpole, he was not long e're he met with a company of Shirks and Cheats, who intending

Part

monl

one who

com

my

Nis I

to choose him, he was too crafty for them, and en ters himfelf into their fociety, and by degrees becames Knight of the Pad, an obsolute High-way-man, but the Devil who had fet him to work, was not long en he paid him his Wages, for he was purfued for a Rob bery he had committed, and so narrowly followed that he was forced to take the water, to crofs a River, he leap'd in an Horseback, but the Horse was soon drowned, and he narrowly escap'd to a little Island in the River, where he was fill in fight of his purfuers, they getting a Boat came up to him, he being armed attempted to discharge a Pistol, but by reason the powder win wer, it would not off whereupon they coming nearer to him he drew his Sword, and though there were three in the Boat he kpet them from landing, and being refolved to fell his life at a dear Rate, he kill'd one of them out-right, and wounded another, but now another Boat with more help coming he was in danger to be loft, wherefore putting his Sword in his mouth he again took the water, and Iwam away, and they after him, but length feeing it was in vain to refift hefulfered himfelf to be taken, and bound, led away to the Justice, and thence to Prifon, where he believing he must dye, grew some what penitent, and not onely confeis'd the Fact he was then acculed for, but amongother mischiefs he likewise acknowledged the Murther, and Robbery I have told you off; and the Affizes being come, and he tryed, and contelling he was condefined, to be hang'd in Chains at the place where he committed the marther ; this being nor above a mile from our Town, at the day of Execution it drew mon of the people out of it to fee the end of this wicked wretch, who did fom what penitently, but his Penitence and Repensancedid not work one jot upon others of his quality, who were there prefent ; but as commonly

CIT-

ne

but ere

06.

hat

h

VO-

RJ.

ct-

d

25

•

monly one Wedding-feast begets another Wedding, so one Execution does assually produces another; and they who are Spectators at one Execution, in short time come to be executed themselves, whether there were my persons at this execution that did soon after takes historn, I know not, but I am sure there were present many Cheats, and Pick-pockets, and such fort of people, for our Town was that day pretty well throng diwith them. Among other practices that was used, this was one.

Two or three Cheaters going together faw a Counrev-man who had a Purse of money in his hand, they had observed him to draw it to pay for some Gingerbread he bought on the way; wherefore they closed with him, and endeavoured to nip his Bung, pick his Pocker, but could not, for he knowing he was in a dangerous place, and among as dangerous Company, put his Purse of mony into his Breeches, which being closs at the knees, fecured it from falling out, and befides he was very fly in having any body come too near him. Our Practitioners in the Art of Thievery, leeing this would not do, fet their wits a working further ; and having all their Tools about themin readiness taking a covenient time and place, one of them goes before and drops' a Letter, another of his Companions who had joyned himielf to our Countrey-man, feeing it by fairly for the purpole, fayes to him, Look you what is here! but although the Countrey-man did Roop to take up the Letter, yet the Cheat was to nimble for him in that, and having it in his hand, faid, Here is somewhat elfe belides a Letter, I cry half, faid the Country-man : well, faid the Chear, indeed you Roop'd as well as I, bur I haveit; however I'le be fair with you; but let us fee what it is, & whether it is worth the dividing & therespon he breaks open the letter, & there fees a fair shafe

L 4

L

the

wh

had wh

the

Co

end

ene

ne

hit

be

R

Part. 3

or neck-lace of Gold: Good Fortube (fayes the Cheater) if this be right Gold: how shall we know that, said the Countrey-man? let us see what the Letter says, which being short and to the purpose spake thus:

Brother John. I have here sent you back this nick lace of gold you sent me; not for any distike I have toit, but my. Wife is covetous and would have a biggar, this comes not to above seven pounds, and she would have one of ten pounds; therefore I pray get it changed for one of that price, and send it by this bearer to your loving Bro.

the N. B.

Nay, then we have good luck' (faid the Cheater) but I hope, said he to the Countrey-mar, you will not expect a full share, for you know I found it, and befides, if we should divide it, I know not how to break it in prices, but I doubt it would spoil it, therefore I had rather have my thare in money. Well, faid the Countrey-man, I'le give you your fhare in money, provided I may have a full share; that you shall, faid the Chester, and therefore I must have of you three pounds ten fhillingsythe price in all beir as you fee, ferep pounds. I, but faid the Countrey-man (thinking to be too cunning for the Cheat) it may be worth Seven pound in money in all, fashion and all but we muft not value that, but only the Gold, therefore ! think three pounds in money is better than half the Chain, and fo much I'le give you if you will let me have it : well content faid the Cheat, but then you hall give me a pint of wine over and above; to this the Countrey man alforgreed, and to our town they came and into our house, and there the Cheat had the three pounds, and the Countrey-man the Chain, who belives ed he had that day rifen with his A --- upwards, because he had met with so goed fortune. They drank off their M

e

e

their drink, and were going away, but the Cheat not having yet done with him (intended to get the rest of the money from him) offered him his pint of Wine, which the Countrey-man accepted of , but before they had drank it off, in comes another of the fame Tribe, who asked whether such a man, naming one, were there? no, (faid the Bar-keeper.) our Cheater and Countrey-man fitting near the Cheat, asked of the enquirer, did you not ask for fuch a man? yes, faid the enquirer, why faid our Cheater, I can tell you this news of him that it will not be long e're he comes hither, for I met him as I came in; and he appointed me to come in here and ftay for him : well , then I were best to flay, said the Enquirer; but (continued he) we were best to take a bigger Room, for we cannot stir our selves in this; agreed, said the Cheater, so the reckoning was paid, and they agreed to take a larger Room, leaving word at the Bar that if any enquiry were made for them, there they should find them; they went into another Room, and our Countrey-man having done his business would be going; no, said the Cheater, I pray itay and keep us company, it shall not cost you nothing; well, then faid the Countrey-man, I amcontent to flay a little : they being now entred into their Room, call'd for a quart of Wine, and drank it eff, what shall we do to spend time, said the last Cheater? for I am weary of Raying for this man, are you fure you are not mistaken? no, said the other : one of them then pretends to walk a turn in the Room, and coming to the window behind a Cushion he pretends to finde a pair of Cards (which indeed he himfelf had laid there) look you here, faid he to the Countreyman and th'other, I have found some tools, now we may go to work, and spend our time, if you will play ; not I, fald the Country-man, I'le never play then I will, faid the other Chear, but not for money: why then, faid the other, for fix pence, to be fpent, and the Game Putt; they being agreed, and my Countrey. man being made Overfeer of the Game, fell to playing and the Countrey-mans firft Acquaintance had the better of it, winning twelve Games to the others four! come, faid he, what shall we do with all this drink? we will play two pence wet and four pence dry ; to this the other agreed, and fo they play'd, and at this lowcond ten thillings in money; the fecond femed to be angery, and therefore proposed to play for all money, hoping to make himfelf whole again , nay, faid the other, I thall not refuse your proposition, because I have won your money ; and therefore to it they went ; and the firft Cheater had ftill the fame luck, and wonten fillings more; then the other would play for twelve pence a Game, no, faid the firft Cheater, I am nor will ing to exceed fix pence a Game, I will not alter what I have begun, left I change luck, unless this honek Countrey-man will go my nalves ; I have no mind to Gaming reply'd the countrey-man; you need not play faid the other, I'le do that, and you fee my luck is good, venture a Crown with me, you know both our lackt have been, and I hope will continue good; well, content, faid the Countrey man, and fo they proceeded, ftill our first Cheat had good fortune, and he, and the Countrey-man won ten thillings a piece more of the other, which made them merry , and the other will mad, he therefore told them he would win the Hork, or lofe the Saddle, and venture all now; and drawing out about thirty fhillings , faid, come take it all, winit and wear it; and fo they played; but they had now drawn the Countrey-man in fufficiently, and he wis flush , but it lasted not long thus, e're he was taken

y:

y.

g,

he

1:

Te

19

W

.

-

e

d

n

e

down a button-hole lower for the fortune changed. and all that he had won was loft, and forty shillings more: He was now angey, but to no purpole, for he did not discover their foul play, and he in hopes of his good fortune ventured, and loft the other forty fhillings; and then he faid he would go halfes no longer, for he thought he would be merry and wife, and if he tould not make a winning, he would be fure to make faving Bargain, which he reckoned he frould do . because alreough he had lost four pounds in money, & given the Cheat three pound for his fhare of the Chain, that yet he should make seven pounds of the Chain, and so be no Lofer : they seeing he would not play left off, and he that had won the money was content to give a Collation, which was called for, but our first Cheat pretending much anger at his Lofs, was refolved to venture more; and to playing again he went, and in hort time he recovered much of his loffes; this angred the Countrey-man that he had not joyned with him, and in the end, feeing his good luck continued, and that he won, he again went halfe, but then it was not long that they thrived, but the Countrey-man was forced todraw his Purfe, and in the end lofe all his money, which was near twenty pounds : He did not think his condition to be fo bad as it was, because he believed he had's Chain worth leven pounds in his Pocket, and therefore he reckoned he had nor loft all. By this time feveral of the rest of the Gang (having been abroad, employed on the fame account, Couzening and Chearing of others) now flocked all to our House, being the place apointed for their Rendezvouz, there they equainted one another of their feveral Gains and Prizes; and then they fell a wrinking, they drink about luftily for joy , and the Countrey-man anger; and mine Hoft was called up to make one in the Company, he foon understood what kind of Guefts he had, and how they had cheated the For Country-man; and therefore he was resolved to serve them in the fame kind ; he therefore put forward the Affairs of drinking, and some being hungry call'd for Victuals ; he told them he would ger them what they pleas'd; and they being determined to take up their Quarters there , for that night, a Supper was bespoke for all the Company, such as mine Hoft in his discretion hould think fit, he cold them they should have it, and accordingly went down to provide Supper, he foon returnes and helps them to drink whilft Supper was dreffing ; by this time they were all perfectly drunk, he then commands up supper, and they fall too with: Shoulder of Mutton and two Capons, ear and drink hard, and call for more, he tells them it is coming, but thy now having fate still a while were all fallen a sleep, be makes use of this opportunity, and brings up halfa dozen empry foul Difhes, or at leastwife full of bones of several towis; as Pidgeons Partridges, Phelants, and all the Remains of Victuals that had been left in the house that day; and strews and places fome on their feveral Trenchers, and thus he leaves them. Some of them fleeping, and firting uneafily fell from this Chairs, and fo awaked themselves; and their compani ons being throughly awaked, they again fell to eating and drinking; fome turning over the bones that well bought, faid, How came thele here, I do not remember that I ear any fuch Viduals? Not I, faid another, whereupon mine Hail was call'd, and the question was asked him; why furely, Gentlemen, you torget your felves, faid he, you have flept fair ; I believe you wil forget the Coller of Brawn you had too, that coff me fix fhillings out of my Pocket ; how! Brawn! fall one, I, Brawn faid mine Hoft, you had it, and at hrt3.

; And! Part 3

Eke

of זני ye

he

10 ey

ke

nd

ef-

ne

K

ıţ

1

he to pay for it ; you'l remember nothing anon, this is fine drunken bout indeed ; fo it is, faid one of the Company ; fure we have been in a Dream ; but it matm not, mine Hoft, you must and shall be paid: Cive withe other do zen bottles, and bring a B.ll, that we my pay our Reckoning. This Order was presently day'd, and a Bill brought, which in all came to feven pounds; and I verily believe he mifreckoned them for ment and drink, the one half, and told them he used then very kindly; they were bound to believe him, indiheretore every man was call'd to pay their fhares; my Countrey-man farunk behind, intending to escape, which one of the Company leeing, call'd him forwards, nd said Come, We must rell Noses, and every man my alike ; the Countrey-man defired to be excus'd; and faid he had no money; which they knowing well mough, at length agreed to acquit him. This done, they went to their several Ludgings to bed, and it was time, for it was past midnight. they all slept better than the Country-man, who could hardly fleep a wink for thinking of his Misfortunes, and having such good luck in the morning, it should prove so bad e're night; But morning being come, he and they all arose, and the Countrey-mans money being all spent, he knew it was tono purpose for him to stay there; wherefore he refolved to go to the Goldsmith's in the Town, and sell, or pawn his Chain, that he might have some money to carry him home : Being come to the Goldsmith's he produced the Chain, which although at the first fight he thought to be gold, yet upon trial he found it otherwise, and that it was but brais guilt ; he tells the Countrey-man the fame, who at this heavy News was like to break his heart: The foldsmith feeing the Countrey-man in such a melancholy meiancholly dump, enquires of him how he came by it? he foon acquainted him with the manner, and every circumftance : the Gold-fmith as foon underfton the Cheat, and advices him to go to the Juftice, andger a Warrant ior him that had thus cheated him; and the Countrey-man telling him that he had no money, nor friend, being a ftranger ; he himfelf went with him to the Justice, who foon understanding the matter granted his Warrant ; and the Goldimith procured a Confable to go with him to our house, where the first Cheater was apprehended, and carried before the Juftice ; who upon examination explain'd the Cafe. and finding the fellow guilty, ordered that he should be led to the whipping poft, and there be whip'd, and then be fer on a horfe back, with his face towards the horfe tail, and foled out of the Town : and withit the Justice fent away the Constable to our house, to apprehend and bring the reft of the gan before; buthe Came too late, for the Birds were flown, doubting fome fuch matter ; fo that only the firft Cheater fuffered the punishment aforefaid ; but I remember he was fo impudent that when he came by our house one horseback, with his face to the horse tail, Ah ha! faid one, what is the meaning of this ? nothing, faid the Cheater, but that this horse is given me, and I am resoved to ride this way to make good the Proverb, that I may me look agift borfe in the month.

e by evetood dger

nor or anı.

on.

first

the afe.

and the

hal,

to mt

the m-ck.

hat

180

de

100

CHAP. XIV.

Two Shoemakers are cheated of a pair of Boots, and mine Host gets another pair of them. Mine Host and one of the Shoemakers findout the Cheater, who is apprehended, and sent to Prison, but is released by the Judge for an enterprize of his Companions, who alted wonderful Feats by slight of hand.

Thus was every one a gainer but the poor Coun-I trey-man, who was forc'd to march home by weeping Crofs, only with a brafs chain worth eighteen pence, instead of above twenty pounds which he had brought our with him, Mine Holl gained indifferently well, but the Cheaters more, being fully fraighted ; but is they got it eafily, fo they fpent it merrily ; and then went to work for more, though they devided the spoil equally between them, yet none had the punishment but the Chain-Merchant, and I believe he had as many lathes on the back as there was links on the chain ; he took his punishment very patiently, only when the blow came he would thrink up his thoulders, which a funder by feeing, told him that did him more harm than good; it is no matter for that, friend, faid the cheater, you may fpare your instructions, for I thall not follow them, and now I am to be whip'd I will do as I Lift, and when you come to the fame fport, and it is your turn to be whip'd, you may behave your felf then as you please , thus was he pleasantly roguish when he was in the midft of his punishment, and when he was on horse-back he answered the People as roguishly as I told you; but being come to the Towns end he was dismounted, and sent packing. Thus were we rid of one Crew of Cheats, but truly, if all the Cheats of the Town had been so served as this was, mine Host must also have march'd off, who had he had his due, did as justly deserve it; but it is the little fort of Knaves and Rogues that are punished, the greater scraping Scorfree, as now mine Host did. After this Trick we had another that was altogether as pleasant, and before the finishing of it, there were some pleasant passages, and thus it was.

A Gentleman-Cheater comes to our boufe, and flays there a day; walks about the Town to finde some purchase but loft his labor, he seeing there was no money to be had, was refolved to play at small Gamerather than fland out ; and fomewhat therefore he would do if it were but to bear his charges; he had observed that there were but two Shoemakers in the Town, one at the one end, and the other at the other end; he faw they were well furnished with boots and be wanted a pair, he therefore coming home to his quarters, fent our Boy to one of the Shoemakers to delire him to come to our house, to bring a pair of boots to a Gentleman; the Sho-maker in hopes of a good Customer returns with the Boy, and brings two or three pair, our Gentleman trys them on, and at last is pleas'd with one pair, only one of them was too little in the inftep, for that faid the Shoemaker, it is a small fault, and I can remedy it in an hours time, by putting it on the Last ; our Gendeman intending that fo be should, asked, what price ? eighteen shillings was demanded, but fifteen was the price agreed upon , well, faid the Gentleman, carry back the boot that is to defective, and pur it on the Laft, let it fay on it two 3.

I

if-ne he

R

as nd

1

be

re

5, ys

ne

0+

2-ld

V-

he

he ts

10

TS

of 1

10

At

00

is

y

11

15.

II,

é-

10

I

900 hours at least, and then come and bring it, and take your money ; very good, faid the Shoemaker, and fo taking up the remainder of the Boots he departed, not diffrufting any thing, and not thinking any man who hid two legs could much advantage himfelf with one fing'e Boor. Our Gentleman being now Master of one Boot, was refolved to have another, and therefore he igain calls the Boy, and delires him to go to the ether Shoemaker, and with him to come and bring a pair of Boots; for, said he, the other Shoemaker you brought could not fit me ; the boy believed him, not thinking of the transaction, it being done privately in his Chamber: The boy went, and brings the other Shomaker with him, who likewise brought two or three pairs of Boots; our Gentleman likewise tries them, and chuling that pair that was likeft to the other he had, he likwise agreed with the Shoemaker upon price, but made the lame exceptions with this laft, whe had done with the former, adviling him to put the Boot on the Last, for one hour and a half, and at that ume to come exactly and receive his money ; away went the Shoemaker with the reft of his Boots, leaving the odd one behind, and no fooner was he gone but he draws on his new Boots, and calling for a Reckoning, paid it, and his horse being bridled and sadled he mounted, and away he rode. At the time appointed both the Shoemakers came, so justly together that they met at the Gate with each of them a Boot under his Arm; they both asked for our Gentleman, but hearinghe was fled and gone, they both look'd blank upon the matter; mine Hoft was present, and understanding the flory laughed heartily at it; they knew not whether they should be angry or pleas'd, but being both Brothers of a Trade and both ferved alike, they refolved to laugh too, though it were but with

Part a

1

. 1

one fide of their mouths, and fo they fate them down and drank together ; one Pot drew down an other, and being of the Genele Craft they were both good fellows, and at length a Bottle of wine they call'd for: mine Hoft feeing them in a merry vain, faid, Gentle. men I'le make a proposition to you, faith since the Gent, trath made a pair of two odd boots do you fo too, and lerthele as the other two go together, and therefore fillip up Crofs or Pile who shall have both; I but fail one, I am not willing to hazard my Boot for nothing, therefore thus I propose it; let us have the other Bottle of Wine, and then let us fillip up Crofs or Pik and ate our chance, and he that hath the fortunen have both the Boots shall pay the Reckoning; agreed, faid the other, and so they proceeded, and he whole Chance it was to have both the Boots, did not only agree to pry the Reckoning, but also called for another Bottle of Wine. Mine Hoft still kept them company, and help'd them rollaugh at the Frolick, and now they were gotten into fo merry a Vein, they refolv'd tocho for the other Bortle, which they likewise in thon Time drank off. Mine Hoft having a Delign upon them for the Boots, feeing them merry, faid thus , Gentle men, Frade one proposition to you, even now, and you agreed upon it ; I have another to make, which I quelrichmorburyou will affent to, but in the first place, pray tell me the jul price of the Bosts ; truly, reply ed the Master of them, I was to have fifteen shillings of the Gentleman for them, but they are really worth fourteen shillings, well then, replyed mine Host, my Reckoning comes to fix thillings : now if you plate I'le venture my Reckoning, which is near half of whi your Boots are worth against them, and fillipip - Croff for Pile whether I hall have the Boots w my Reckening or nothing; we't make nothing bargu

Win

mi

el-

r;

le.

nt.

ind

ore

aid

ng,

01-ile

to

ed,

ofe

her

ny,

lub

ort

tle-

101 ief.

e, | ly-

$ O.

ich

MY

tale

hi

ap

α

bargain said the third person, we'l have some Wine to boot, or no Boots shall be ventured; well, faid mine Hoft, then I will add another bottle of Wine to the Reckoning; and thus all Parties being agreed, Gross and Pile being fillip'd up, mine Host had his Chance, and the Boots ; and thus he gained what the other loft, and neither of the Shoemakers could laugh at one another for their lofs was equal; and thus was this pair of liquor'd Boo's converted into liquor, and that drank up, and this was the end of the adventure of the Boots for the present, but it was not quite finished, for mine H it who again had some bulinels at the Affizes, went to the Country Town where it was kept, and there he met with one of the Shoemakers his Neighbour; he had then the same Boots on that he had in a marner gain'd by chance; and therefore remembring the Jeft, they went in to drink at the next Two-por house; there they were jesting and laughing at the paffage of the Boots, when on a sudden mine Holl looking out of the Window call'd to the Shoemaker, look you here quickly, and I think I can shew you your Boot-Merchant , the Shoemaker look'd out and law him, for it was he indeed, with the very Boots on his Legge; he was walking by, in company of others, who by their Garbs and Mien did feem to be perfons of Quality: The Shoemaker would have run out prefently and feized on him, but mine Hoft would not permit it, only advising him to follow him, and see him hous'd; The Shomaker followed mine Hoft's directions, and faw his Quarters, and upon enquiry found that he was to continue there for fome time ; whereforehe returned to mine Hoft, and acquainted him of his intelligence; they thereupon advised together What most convenient to be done, and coucluded that mine Hoft fould go into his company, and acquaint him that the Shoemaker expected farisfaction for his Boots, and it may be he is a Gentleman of Quality. and only did it in a Frollick, and will now pay well enough for it , but, faid mine Hoft, if I finde him to be other wife, we can foon have a Warrant to apprehend him, and have him punished; this was reckoned to be fober, and the best advice, and accordingly it was managed; for that evening mine Hoft feeing him walking alone in the Inn Yard, went and ipake to him, telling him if he were not mistaken he thought he know him; our Gentleman surveying of mine Hoft, reply'd , certainly no, but however it he would go into a Room, he would gladly drink with him ; to this mine Hoft confented, they being come into a Room, drank and Smoak'd togeher ; mine Hoft again asking him if he were not long fince at our Town ? yes, faid the Gentle man, an il pray you, where did you lodge? at fuch an inn reply'd the Gentleman, and naming ours; why then, reply'd mine Hoft, I am not mittaken, and if you pleafe to call to mind you may remember me to be the Mafter of the Houfe; Oh ! I cry you mercy, reply'd the Gentleman, now I know you, I did partly remember you, but could not call to mind where I had feen you but I pray what affir has brought you hither? no great matter, reply'd mine Haft, only alittle curiolity; that's well, faid the Gentleman : but, faid mine Hoit, methinks your Boots and mine look as if they were some what of kin together, I pray where did you buy them ? Why? that may well be, reply'd out Gentleman, for I bought them in your Town ; but Sir, I pray (be not angry) faid mine Hoft, did you ever pay for them ? Why do you ask? faid the Gentle man, because, said mine Hoft, if you did, then you at flandered and abused, and what if I did not pay for them? faid the Gentleman; why then, fail mine Hoft, you are best to do it, for the men of whom you had them are both my Neighbours; well, well, hid the Gentleman, no more of this, for I paid for them as much as I will do : mine Hoft feeing him fo abfolute, hid no more to him of that matter, but drank off their drink, and club'd for their Reckoning, which being paid he again at parting faid thus , Sir, it will be for your Credit to pay for the Boots, I know all the ftory, and if you will not pay now, one time or other you will before'd to it to your Cost, and Trouble; do not you trouble your head with that, replied the Gentleman, let is alone till that day comes; take your own course fild mine Hoft; and you yours, faid the Gentleman, and so they parted. Mine Hoft having had this huffing answer, made further enquiry what this person was, and found that he was no better than a Cheat, and one that came thither for no other purpole, he therefore tells his neighbour the Shoemaker of all paffages, and advices him to get a Warrant to apprehend him, and carry him before the Judge; He who was forward enough before, now went directly and made his Complaint to the Judge that evening, telling him all the Circumftance of the matter; the Judge asked him if he had enquired what quality he was of? he answered, yes, he was suspected to be no better than a Pick-pocket, or Cut-purse; well then replied the Judge, bring him hither to morrow morning before I go to the Court jour Shoemaker did not fail in a tittle, but the next morning feized on him in his Chamber, and carried him immediately before the Judge; when they came there, the Shoemaker wade his Complaint, and mine Hoft was there prefent, not only to justifie it, but to produce the very fellows, which indeed were alily enough to be known to be fe, and fo they manged their evidence that the Gentleman-Cheat Thad M 3

M 2

his

vell be end be ing

m ;

, he on-

he nele-

why

the ly'd

emlcen ler?

uri-

you our

Sir,

art

Pay Caid

fi fi

8

little or nothing to fay for himfelf, and therefore he was commissed to Prison. It happened at this time that the Judge had a Kiniman with him who was somewhat wilde, and only rid about the progress with him to fee fashions, and he had one scurvy humor, which was this; he had a good Effare, and was full of mony, and therefore in a prodigal vapouring way, he would carry a Purfe with near a hundred pieces of Gold in it, in his pocket, and this he would always carry about with him, and upon all occasions, though never so trivial he would be drawing his Purle, and shewing his Gold. this was his Cuftom ; and the Judge his Uakle knowing ir, had of times chid him for it, relling him that one time or other he would have his Pocket pick'd and lofe it ; he would not take any warning, but ftill replied he would warrant none could pick his pocker, to that his Unkle the Judge did with many times that he might lofe it; and so be broken of that foolish rainglorious humor. Our Chear being now in Prison, his Companions, who were all Workmen in the fame Trade, were very much troubled at his loss, because he would have done them much service, and to be fortaken up for so trivial a matter as a pair of Boots much vered them, and they knew there was no recovering him without the Judges favour : they therefore resolved to put themselves in the best Equipage they could, and go to him, accordingly that night they went, and told him they were humble Petitioners to his Honour, for a poor friend of theirs whom his Honour had committed about a pair of Boots, and they haped his Honour would release him ; because they very well knew he was wrongfully accused, being a Gentleman by birth , and of a very good House , or 10 this the Judge gave ear, and told them that he very well understood the quality of their friend

he

iat

ic-

in ch wild it, ut isl

at

d

n

Part 3. and theirs alfo, but, faid he, for once I shall pass by this business upon one Condition; to this they reoly'd, any Condition he pleased; he then being refolved what to do, commanded all his Servants and Attendants out of the Room; and told them he well inderstood their qualities, and had occasion to make ife of them in an Affair, telling them that he had fuch ione his Kiniman, who carried a Purle of money in his Pocket, now, faid he, I would have some of you to follow him, and get it from him, and bring it to me intouch'd, and then I promise not only to pardon you, but also to deliver your friend to you: They hearing the Judges Propolition, har'd one upon antither, not knowing what answer to give; whereforehe again told them that this he expected from them, or elfe their friend thould fuffer, they thought fit to answer him with filence, and so departed; when they were gone, they confulted together what wis to be done, and believing there would be no great difficulty nor harm in the doing it , refoled to effect it accordingly : And therefore the next meining they waited at the Jodges Door, and iceing his Kiniman , they found means to perform their Enterprize , and got the Parle of Gold without any confiderable difficulty, and forthwith pretending bufiness to the Judge, they delivertdit to him the nodded them an answer, adviling them to come to him in the evening they did fo, and he gave them a Difcarge for their friend ; but that he might do equal justice, he commanded them to pay the Shoemaker for the Boots, and gave them a piece of Gold to drink ; they very thinkfully received it and did accordingly. The Judges Kinfman being now come out of the Court had occasion for moneys, but feeking his purse found he had lost it; this MA peripexed 100 alt

he

Un

Di

the

die

lor

216 pie

(W

of

mi

10

W

an th

W

G

D

an fe th

th

P

th

ar ri

M

t

perplexed him to the heart , but although the lofs was considerable, yet the vexation that his unkle must know it, was more; he was exceeding melancholly and discontented; and his Unkle enquired and sent for him, yet he would hardly come into his prefences his Unkle knew well enough what difeafe he was fick of, but however he asked him again and again, what he ailed? and what was the matter? he still answered him with filence, and turning away his head. Supper time being come, they fate down together, but the young man would not eat a bit ; what will you eat? faid his Unkle, nothing, faid he : go fetch me a dish of Partridges, faid the Judge ; it is a difh I know you love : the meat was brought, but the young man could ear nothing : you that eat, faid his Unike before you rife and I will have a dish thall please you ; and therefore, said he to the waiters, go bring up the Dish I commanded should be last brought up; they thereupon went down, and brought up a dish covered; come Coufin, faid the Old man, eat some of this, I cannot said the kins man, you must and shall, said the Unk'e, and I pray uncover the dish and serve me some : the young man seeing his Unkle to importunate, and believing because the dish was covered, that it might be a dish of flew'd apple, refolv'd to uncover the difh, and farishe his Unke by eating a little of ti at ; wherefore at his Uncles importunity he uncover'd the dill ; when he beheld inflead of flew'd apples there was a better fort of fruit, it was his own Purfe of Gold; he no fooner faw it? how, said his U. kle, I sold you I would please you before you did rife from supper, and I think I have done The young man smiling thanked him, and then reaching to the dish of Partridges, he fell too luftily, and did ear as hearty a meal as ever; thus did the recovery of his Purse of Gold recover his stomack, # indeed

3

ı

1

t

.

0

.

t

1

e

1

d

d

3 ic i,

1

13

h

$,

y

1-

1,

.

ıc

n

indeed I think it would do any others, it being to him and all others as good a Sawce as a Cordial. And now although the young man was well enough pleased that he had recovered his purfe, yet he was vexed that his Unkle should thus discover his folly, and studyed how he might be revenged on his Unkle; he knew very well that his purfe was taken from him by fome cunning deat, and that by his Unkles confent; and it was not long e're, upon enquiry, he found out the manner, and illo the People who did it : he gave them therefore a piece to drink, and told them that he would give them twenty pounds more, if they would do him one piece of fervice; they feeing there was money coming, promiled him to do any thing in their powers; he then old them that it was indeed a high attempt, but he would pay them as largely, and fave them harmlefs's and this it was, he would have them pick the Pocket of the Judge as he fate one the Bench : they told him it was both difficult and dangerous; as for the difficulty. hid he, I'le make fuch means that one of you shall come near him, and for the danger, I will take of his anger, and pay you as I have faid : to this they at length conlented, and the next day put in execution; for when the Judge was most busie in examining Witnesses, he that was the Artift that was to perform this, approaches the Bench : the young Man firting next the Judge his Unkle, beckons the Pick - pocker, and he comes up , and under presence of whilpeting the young man in the ear, he pickt the Old Mans Pocker, and carryed off the Purse cleverly; when he had so done he descended, and stood among the other Spectarors. In fhort time after the caufes Were heard, and one man who had laid long in prison, only for his fees, perition'd the Judge to minigate and leffen

R

pi

ho

di

Ki

10

leffen them that he might be able to pay them, where's the Jaylor? faid the Judge; here my Lord, faid the Jaylor; what Fees do you demand of this poor man? faid the Judge; twenty shillings my Lord, if it please you, and it is no more than your what Lordship order's me at the lowest; then said my Lord, you must have fo mach; I cannot help it; I must not make Laws one day and break them another, I had rather pay the money out of my own purie than do fo. His Kiniman who fate next him thought this was a very good op portunity to speak, and therefore thus he faid; Mayir please honour; I had good Fortune yesterday as your Lordinio knows, and therefore am refolv'd to do fome charitable AQ, and I think this of releasing this poor Priloner who lies for his Fees, will be none of the least : wherefore whereas your Honor motions paying all this poor mans Fees, I make this offer, that if you pleate to pay on ten shillings, I will pay the other, that the poor man may be ducharged :a very goo motion, faid the Judge The young man foon form the way to his Purie, and pull'd out an Angel; bu the Judge although he fearched both Pockets, com find neither money nor Purfe, he was therefore much furprized not knowing what to fay, nor think, but quickly recollecting himself, thus he spake, I am fure, my friends, when I came in huher ! had 2 Purk of money in my pocker, but now I cannot finde it, k that hath taken it from me while I was here firting we his Crafes-Miffer, and very bold, but I question no but I shall find him, I have so good skill in Physiogno my, that I know a Knave by his looks, therefore to fire you all there below to look on me, every oned To, expeding what the Judge would do, who by in by whitpering to the Justice that fare next him, length arofe, and faid, look you Maiter Justice, if Is

TC'S

the n ?

eafe

er d ave

one

no-

nan

op-

y it

our

me

the ay-

法語 克

10

of it me nowh: with boling and ballet

o Wang , seneral

e ahudalila es a llada lunion Mala ia gende des al alla est

c panda ban only sails

and by not deceived, yonder fellow with the ftraw in his beard hath my Purie; all the People stared one upon another. and the Chear that had the Purse being conscious of higuilt, doubting he was known to the Judge, and that he had a straw in his beard, he lifting up his hand froaked it to wipe it away, supposing by that means mouls undiscovered, but that discovered him; for the Jadge who had a quick eye, and expected that motion. faw, and observed it, thereupon pointed to him, faying, that is he : it was now too late to fly, for the Jaylor foon feized him, and upon fearch found the Purfe in his Pocket. The Purse was given to the Judge, who old out ten fhillings to the Jaylor for the Poor mans les, and ordered him to discharge him, and in his Room to take away that bold Delinquent that had pick'd his Pocket; he did fo, neither did his kinfman contrad & him in the open Court, but when he came home he cold him all the management, and defired a dicharge for the Prisoner; the Judge knowing that it was done but in jest, granted his discharge, and the Ainfman fent that, and the promifed twenty pounds, and Fees for discharge of the Prisoner.

it

2 fe

1

b

A

h

P

CHAP. X V.

The Hostes's Danghter being courted by an ignorant poetscal Lover; he brings a soldier with him who be coming intimately acquainted with Mistress Derothy relates to her; how he by pretending to be a Cunning man and raising a Spirit, had furnished himself; his Landlord, and Lanlady with a plentiful Supper, which had been provided at the Cost of another.

Hus did these Cheats make the best of a bad murket, for being at the first obstructed in their defigns by their Companions Imprisonment, they were at a loss, and they got little money this bout but whe the Judge and his Kinfman give them, and the people who were present at this bold adventure of picking the Judges pocket on the Bench, were very curious of their own, and for the future had fome-what more than or dinary to talk of , but mine Hoft who knew mored the matter than ordinary, made rare fport with this fory at his return, and the Shomaker who hath received Satisfaction for the loss of his Boot, having had mo ney for the other, by mine Hofts appointment fem for the other Shoemaker his fellow Tradelman, and ordinary Charges being deducted, gave him the on half : but mine Hoft fo ordered the matter, that as the began, so they ended in drink, and spent all they ha received at our house, and thus ended the adventure d the boots. Mistress Dorothy now stopping, and m thereby finding that the had concluded her discourt, we took the liberty of laughing, and wondring at while the had told us, and therefore defired her to give he felf the trouble to relate fome more adventures to w but the told us in plain terms that the had done, rant

ing-

bich

ust.

de-

rere

rhat ople the heir

01-

e of this iv'l mo-fent and one hey had the rie, had her we, no, and preferve

Part 3. and that we were to expect no more from her. I heating her so peremptory in her reply, told her that we had ben very much engaged to her, for the extraordinary mins the had taken in thefe feveral relations; but yet I muft need add this, that as yet fhe had not fully performed her promise, for the had promis'd to give us an account of all the family, when as, if I am not miffaken he had faid little or nothing of two persons, whom! Supposed to be very considerable, and that was the Son and Daughter; and therefore I made it my request to her, that the would recollect her felf, and relate to us somewhat of them, because indeed they were a little aftive while they liv'd at home with their father and mother, but after they went abroad in the world they were very remarkable, (and continued the) fince their laving their father and mother, and my leaving the house were at one and the same time, and one the same occasion. I shall now give you an account of it, and then he thus proceeded.

Our young Man and Maid living in a house where so much requery was acted, must needs be well enough experienc'd to act their Parts, but they were fo warily looked after by their Mother, that it was almost impossible to exercise their Talent at home, and the young man by reason of the danger of the War, and leaft he should be taken Prisoner and lerved as his Father was, was enforced to keep home ind ramble but little, but his Sifter less,not being permitted to go any way our of the Town. although many Guefts who came to our house faw her, and liked her marvelloufly well, (for indeed he was handsom) and would have made love to her, yet her Mother knowning the danger by her own experience, watch'd her too narrowly permit it, and was resolved to use her best endeaver to

A

0

I

1

.

preserve the Jewel of her daughters maiden-head in til the should be lawfully married. She being kept up d fo firictly had few Suiters, only one in the Town, who is wis a Farmers Son had a moneths mind to her, and having read the famous History of Tom Thumb, and from thence proceeding to Fortunatus, and then to the most admirable History of Dorafins and Fawnia, was infected with Poetry and Love both at once, and able lurely believing that all he read was really true, dil wish himself to be as fortunate as Fortunatus himself, and fince he could not meet with that blind Lady For. tune to prefent him with fuch a Purfe, he did howere refolve to be as absolute a lover as Dorastus; and now mothing to that accomplishment being wanting but I Mistrils who should be his Faunia, he found out out Mistrits who should be his Famnia, he found our our Pretty Miffrels Peggy my Holles's Daughter (Him I may boldly call her, but mine Hoft's I dare not, the Case being doubtful, by what I have already related to you) a Mittress being found for our Swain, he make fome adresses to her, and was permitted by the Mothet to more freedom than any, because the youth was not only indifferent handloine, but rich, and mine Hoftel gether; I was full defired to keep Company with the Lovers, but I had much ado to forbear laughing out right when I heard his Courthip, all his language wu Seiff foln our of the books he had read ; and when he was answered by Miffres Peggy, or any question pro rounded by me to him in any ordinary or different Daleet, he was as deaf as a Bell-founder, and was not The to answer us ; I being resolved to make sport with him, told him that I thought he would do mainly well if he would apply his fancy to writing of Poerry, and as an effay I advised him to write a Letter to Milittle Pegg in Verle, he thanked me for my advice, and defir

Part 3.

1 3

whol

and

and

the

Was

blodid felf.

For-

evet

Wor

nt a

011 lets

the

dto

alt

het

not tels

10-eft

W.

MI

h 10

100 ìth

ind

un delir'd my friend thip and faid that he would go immeot up diately home and exercise himselt in Poerry, and so he find, and so he did, for behold the next morning Mifirels Peggy received a Letter from him, which we both read and laugh'd at, for it was to foolishly torced, congired, and nonfenfical that have I much ado to remember the words, but having often repeated them, I shall now relate them to you.

Madam,

TUer till I faw thee my beart was fill at reft, Little did think one Female could have piere t Either Heart or Bowels, that on thee doch waste, So ad all faint and feeble grow within my breft; Alas, it is pity that forrow to me should come, For to tell you the truth as yet I am but very young, And to express my felf I want a better tongue; But I can truly and fadly fay that only you Are the that hath brought me to grief and forrow too Brave Vertues that are in this lovely Damfel found, At the first fight gave my poor heart a desperate wound. Tou have my sences very much decay a With love, that at one time they will be all dismai'd Long of the tender love that to you I do bear, Even now I will make and end my only Dear.

Your true Lover,

L. M.

We all laughed heartily at this non-fenfical fluff, and told miftress Dorotby that fure the was miftaken in the ticital of these verses, and that they were to be faid backwards, for that wayes that the repeated them I difcovered

The English Rogue; And 176 Part 3. covered the humour of our Poetical Lover, and Mis. tress Percy by my directions returned him this as fwer.

Amorous Friend,

Is much you should receive two infections at once, I the one Love, the other Poetry, but it is not very frange fince they commonly accompany one another, but s'le assure you 'tis dangerous, for you know the old Proverb, that sad are the effects of Love and Peak Porridge; and besides Poetry is commonly attended with Poverty, but after a strict perusal of your poetice Fancies, I find there is no great danger in you infection for unless you improve you felf mightily it will be a long time e're you be a compleat Toet, end since your Poerry and Love camen. gether, it will be as long e're you be a compleat Loun; now if you have still a mind to prosecute these im Designs, of Love and Poetry, I advise you to mis use of some other more fit and sublime object the may raise your fancy to a bigher pitch of eloquence, i er at leaft wife fenje, as you have been in verfe. 1 return this answer to you in prose, and as you like this you may prosecuse your Designs of Love and Po etry, with some other Object, but I pray give no men trouble to

Your Frind,

M. S.

ti

fi ly

h

6

t

f

1 1 6 if

CH

ery er,

the alt

ded

ict

0117

-

1711-

10.

t THE

di

he nce,

岫

Po

nart

Thi

This to the best of my remembrance was the answer toour Lovers poetical Letter, and although what we writ might have been enough to have dashed the defigns of any other, yet our Lover came very confidently that evening, and thanked his Miftres for receiving his Letter, and answering it; telling her that he did acknowledg he had not as yet any great Skill in Poetry, but he had written his beft, and intended and hoped in the next to mend it, and so he proceeded in his troublefome Love-Suit. Our Cook-maid coming into the room where we were, and having feen the Love Letter, it being made fo fecret, told us that the had a Love Letter fent her not long fince, which in her opinion was better than that; and we believing that there must be somewhat in it worth the seeing, commanded her to fetch it, and giving it into my hunds, I read these words.

Madam.

Hope the Brains of your Beauty being boyl'd in the Ketle of Kindness with the Beef of Bounty, may at lugth prove a dish for my dyet, so that the Marrow-bone of your Maidehead being crack'd with the Chopping-knife of my Courage, may upon the Trencher of Truth declare how those you, let not the minc'd meat of Madesty baked in the Oven of Hatred in the Crust of Coyness cause my Denial, lest the Dagger of Death being drenched in the Barrel of my Blood may with the Spigget draw forth the Liquor of my Life.

Yours more than his own,

T. 7.

This Letter pleas'd one more than the former, and told her that her Sweet-heart was ingenious and witty for he had courted her in her own language, and made wie of fuch words the understood, and that in my opinion it was far better to do fo than to be altogether fo poetical as to make mocks of their Mittreffes by com paring their fore-heads to Alablafter, their eyes to Diamonds, their lips to Coral, and fuch kind of fantalis cal similies, our Lover was of my opinion, and was for taken with the Cook-maids Letter that he defired to copy is, and to he did; and while he was thus employed, I remembred that I had a paper of verfes that would employ all his fenfes to understand, and it may be puzzle him , and therefore fetch'd it, and he having copyed the other lines, I shewed him thefe.

I faw a Peacock with a fiery Tail I faw a Blazing star that dropt down Hail . I saw a Cloud begirt with luy round I fam a sturdy Oak creep on the ground I fam a Pismire swallow up a Whale I fam a brackish Sea brim full of Ale I faw a Venice glass sixteen yards deep I fam a Well full of mens tears that weep I faw mens Eyes all on a flaming fire I faw a House big as the Moon and higher I fam the Sun all red even at midnight I faw the man that faw this dreadful fight?

And most dreadful it was indeed, said our Lover, his it were true, but however (continued he) the Verse are very good, and I pray let me have a copy of them which I permitted him to take; and he read them our and over read mithors and over read mithors and over read mithors and over read mithors and over read mithors and over read mithors and over read mithors and over read mithors and over read mithors and over read mithors and over read mithors and over read mithors and over read mithors and over read mithors and an area over read mithors and an area over read mithors and an area over read mithors and an area over read mithors and an area over read mithors and area. and over again without understanding the Mystery, ber the more he read, the more he feemed to wonder at the

ingenels of the leveral lights, and said, sure this is mossible, not at all, said I, and if you will lay ten shilling to be spent, I will make it out to you before you what all that is there written is very true, and that I messen it all my self. I cannot believe it, replyed he, lam content to lay the wager , provided Mifrels hery may be the Judge- Content, said I, and so the somey was laid in her hands, and then I took up the parto mandbegan to read thus: I saw a Peacock, and there we tide a stop, and said, do you believe that? if you do lid m, I can shew you one in the yard: Ay, but said he, be averse is, I saw a Peacock with a fiery Tail, and that is a swager: no, said I, you must stop when you have all saw a Peacook, and then go on, with a fiery Tail I mablazing Star; and I am fure that I have feen that on for blazing Stars have all fiery Tails: that is true, show you meant, faid I, but what I read is true, and vertue of that I suppose I hall win the wager, but never I proceeded, read : That dropt down Hail I fam Claud; Begirt with luy round I fam a sturdy Oak; mon the ground I faw a Pismire, Swallow up a Whale wa Brackish Sea; Brim full of Ale I faw a Venice Wis: And fo liread on to the end of the Verles, fill ting a full flop in the middle of the verfe, where thele required it; thus making fenfe of the impostimonfense : by this time our Lover faw he was likely lofe his Wager, but however he cavelled at my thus er, sting it, and faid, I ought to frop only where the erloss ended; but all that he faid figurated nothing, for the Mistress did me the justice to award me the Wager; con Militels did me the justice to award me the Wager, over accordingly gave me my money, and kept the har twenty shillings to be spent, neither was the specical Lover much displeased, for he had ing try high efterm of the Lines he had, protesting N a he would not part with them for forty fhillings, he questioned not but he should win much money Wagers he would lay about them, and being thus tisfied he left us, promifing the next night to rem and then expecting a Colation for the ten shillings had loft; and fo we were rid of our poetical Lover the time appointed; which being come, he like came and brought with him a young man, a Sold that belong'd to the Garrison in our Town 1 km the man by fight; for he was very remarkable, it bei the general report that he was a Cunning-man could tell fortunes, and our Lover brought him to his oppinion, whether he should have miftress Peggs not. We gave him the ordinary welome, he coming company with our Lover we were the more free ! him, who demeaned himfelf fo well that I had and than ordinary respect for him, and told him he ho be welcome at any other time ; and fo our Colan being ended, we for that time parted; but in hort after he came again, and being as he faid, much the with my company, defired to take all opportunities waiting on me : I feeing no harm in him, and fine that he was none of the pitifull fort of fellows, but he was handlom, witty, and above all things that wore money in his Pocker, permitted him treque to visit me, and it was not long e're I grew into familiarity with him, that I obliged him to them fo much of his Skill as to tell me my Forune, he furprized at this proposition and made many Excel but I grew so that height in my importunitie in wearied him sat length he told me that although all Town had been mistaken in him yet I should not that if I pleased he would undeceive me, and in the told me that it was a miffake to think that was skillfull either in Aftrology or Magick, tough he had gained some monyes by pretending to be nowing in that mystery, yet it was no such matter, it is importuned him in such manner, that I brought him to manner, that I brought him to man is: that provided I would promise him secrecy, he get wald discover his whole secrets to me, and thereby the like it absolutely appear that the Town was mistaken: the like desirous of hearing Novelties, engaged to perform all he desired, and thereupon he thus began.

med ro discover not only my own fecrets, but also In hole of another, the most eminent of this Town, and I met it not to you, and onely to you, I should not do afor any confideration whatfoever, for it is the fecrets fawoman of the best quality, and therefore you may lebstly angry with me for so doing, but my respects, and andeed my leve to you is so great, that I shall not stop uany, obfacles to perform any thing you require ; & whall I pray do not think, that fince I am so easie to discover one womans secrets, and that of such eminency ment to whom I am so much obliged, that I should, may at one time or another, serve you in the like manner, No Madam (said he) affare your self of the tomrary, for although the woman I am to speak of be forminent, indifferently handsom, and one to whom I m so much obliged, yet my acquaintance with her bemafter a ftrange manner, and it was a kind of necelli. what first induced her to permit me the freedom I enwith her; whereas on the contrary, the respects I me for you are of another nature, for my inclination and affection induce me to pay you all manner of frice, which I am confident will be very lasting. He tring made this plaufible speech, thus proceeded,

10

It is not many moneths fince I was first acquaint with this place, you know my quality is a Soldier Fortune, and I may reasonably enough term my selfa being of lare some-what favoured by that blind an inconftant Lady ; our Commander in Chief thinking convenient to draw us out of the field where webe been all the laft Summer, and place us in Garrifons the Winter feafon ; it fell to my lot , among others my Comrades ; to be ordered to be quattered in the Town, where when we came, we had our several at lets delivered to us, and mine directed me to the Hope of the wealthieft Mercer in your Town, where I had Quarter, and who you know is a Person as eminenting Eftate, as any in the Town, I need not name him, ye knowing where I Quarter : it lo fortuned , that the might I came thirher first to Quarter, he was out of it Town, as he had been for fome dayes paft and was be continue for two or three more. It was fomewhat is when I knock'd at the door, and therefore the Man Tervant who heared me, ask'd me what I would have Janiwer's, that I was appointed in that House to the up my Quarters. The Maid foon called her Milina and acquainted her with the matter; which the know ing, thus answer'd me, that the was a young new-me onely one fervant, and that therefore the could not will any conveniency entertain any man in her houle could not be fatisfied with this answer, but reply d, ! I was ferry I muft be fo troub com, but withal it was too late to feek any other lodging, and w my Comrades were all in their Quartere, and the fore I must unavoidably lye in the threet if the did entertain me ; wherefore 7 pray'd her to receive into her house, and put me poto any place the plen and I promifed that I would be as little troublesomes Politi afibly I could, and therefore I delired her not to deme that fairly and by entreasy, which fire knew I mid command. The young woman, although the was men troubled, (believing that I might hinder a delign Schad in hand) yet knowing withal that what I faid mitrue, and that I might command where I entreated, ommanded her maid to open the door, and shew me or ledging up in the Garret. When I was entred the lace, I told her that I was to ledge there, fo I delir'd leight fup with her (not that I would command it, he that I would willingly pay for what I had) because was late, and I had not earen any thing all that day. he feemed angry at my proposal, relling me that I m mikaken if I took her house for an Inn, and if I maned a supper, want I must, for I was like to have nomight call it, for it was a most pititul one, however I ms forc'd to make use of it, and go supper-less to bed. Bring thus ready to dye for hunger, I had little mind wheep, and therefore I only tumbled and toffed withou fo much as closing mine eyes together. After I had hin an hour in this manner, casting mine eyes about the Chimber, I perceived fome light which came through a Clink or Crevis in the floor, and my curiofity inviling me to it, I leap'd out of the bed, and laying my eye to the place, I might perceive under me a room very well furnisht, wherein was a great Fire, two Spirs, of fulled Fowls, the Maid turning thein, and the young Woman, the Miftress sitting in the arms of a young fellews Lawyer, who to me appeared to be fo by his Sown. How ! faid I to my felf. is this the Woman that inher Husbands absence will not receive a man inlo her? Oh the unconstancy and subrilty of Women! his I thought, but however I believed it was not as you N 4

h

Š

1

time to speak out; but being very hungry, I beheld t the Spits with fome anger, and devoured the Fomb with my eyes ; I had the patience to fee the Supper dreis'd, though I was not to be a Gueft; and though I could not tafte, yet I could fmell the Victuals : Ifm the Table foread, the Bottles of Wine brought out & the Victuals placed on the Table, but just as they were going to fit down, one knock'd at the door; this forwhat fartled them, but their confusion was grente. when the Maid asked who was at the door, underftool it was her Master. They were all frighted and confounded, not knowing where to put the man, or the victuals, they had but little time to confider: Then was but one little Chamber adjoyning where the mil lay, and under her Bed at length they laid him, and the Mear, Drink, and all the Appurtenances were platel in a Closer in the Chamber : This being done, and the Woman liting down by the fire, the Master who was impatient with calling and knocking, was let in and coming up stairs, his Wife rifes from her feat, and cryes out, Oh dear Husband! Wellcome home, how glad am I to fee you, especially in coming sooner that lexpected. That is true, faid the good man, I made haste and dispatched my Business, which being done, rook Horse and made all possible speed to come home to you, and indeed I have rid full speed all this day; And very welcome you are, faid the : But how com you to have fo great a Fire ? faid the Husband : 01 Love, faid the Wife, I am troubled with the Belly-at as paffes, and I made this fire to warm Trenchers and clothes, to put to my Belly to cafe me & truely I think that this pain harh taken me with yexing at a pauling business that happened this night , for here cames Soldier and faid he must, and would quarter her, and it hath so angred and griev'd me, to this held

dwo

Pet

ngh

iaw L.&

Nett

08-ter,

the

here

Daid

and

and who

H

204

WO

han

ade

ne,

me

1y;

OK CL

akt

百百百百 ic i

feerelie;

that aman must lodge here in your absence that I think traly it hath brought my paine. I hearing this, thought it would be convenient for me ere long to appear, and therefore put on my Clothes, but still I gave attention to the end of their discourse, which was thur continued : Said the Husband, well, let that pals; but I pray let me have some Supper, for I have made. such hafte to day in travelling to come to you, that I am almost dead with hunger, wherefore I pray give me some Victuals. Victuals, replyed the woman, where do you think I should have it? Do you think I make feafting in your absence? Alas, my maid and I supp'd to night with each of us a Roasted Apple, I am forry for that, replyed the Husband, and am very loath if I could help it, to go to Bed with out a Supper, but what cannot be cured, must be endured. I hearing this, and believing it to be very proper for my delign, being already dress'd, went down stairs, and knock'd at the door, which opened I entred, and faluting my Landlord; prayed him to excuse me for disturbing his Wife, who had indeed refused to enterrain me, till I had acquainted her with my Orders, which, left he should distrust any thing to the contrary, I then pull'd our and shew'd him, and told him that I hoped his Wife could not complain of any incivility I had offered her. No truly, reply'd the. I having fatisfi'd him in this, I told him that I understood that he had not supped no more than I, and therefore if he pleased I would give him and his Lady a Supper, for I had it in my power to accommodate them very plentifully. How is that possible ? reply'd my Landlord, fince it is fo late, and nothing is to behad in the Town, & belides that it will be too late to drefs any thing. I bid him take no care for that, but if he pleased he should be provided with victuals ready drefed provided he and his wife would both promife me

186 d. The English Rogue ; And Parte 3. fecteffe Ethey rold me that they would do fo, buthe wondred, and the feemed to do fo too, at what I inrended to do , whereupon I told them I had a corre spondency with Spirits, who would furnish me with what I defired, and thereupon taking a piece of Chalk, and making a Orcle I Placed my felf in it, made certain Figores Bout it, and taking a Staff in my hand waved it about my head, and then I uttered many words which were onely conceired fuftian fruff, which they understood not, nor I my felf neither, and then proceeding I named a Spirit, and rold him that he must quickly provide me a Supper for my felf, my Landlord, and his Lady. I feemed to liften, and then told then that my Spirit was obedient, and nothing was wanting now but to know what they would have ; I asked the question, but they answered, What I pleased: Bring then, faid I, a Boyl'd Hen and Bacon, a Couple of Roaffed Capons, a Dozen of Partridges, two Dozen of Larks, a Pippin Tart, with Oranges and Lemmons, and Fruit fufficient; Alfo bring us two Bottles of Canary and two of Claret; this was the Victuals I had feen provided, and therefore this I call'd for , and with al, faid I. I charge thee not to appear in any horrible Chape, to as to frighten my Landlord or Landlady, but difpatch quickly and fer all down in the Clofer of this Chamber. Having thus finisht my Inclination and pauled alittle now, faid I, open the door and there you thill fee I am obeyed. The maid readily did as I commanded, and all was there in ample manner ready drefs'd, to the great aftonishment of my Landlord, but my Landlady , though the feem'd to be amezed, knew well enough that the was discovered, but as vercould not disaprove of what I had done. The meat being produced, the Table was fpress fe el re la la fa

other Entra te ants.

2

å1

y

h

T

-

đ,

a

5

V

of

n

S, of

ad

at 118 nd

ou m dy pat ed, but ne.

1

things being in readiness, I defired my Landlord and Landlady to take their places ; at my request they did le, but my Landford was mighty anwilling to eat was till he fee me eat and commend the Victuala and Sauce, and I importuning him to take, he did for and my Landlady by his example confessed to accompany is in the fame employment : Having now done with one Difh, and my Landlord finding that to be good by my example fell to another, and though he was Somewhat cautious, yet he made a good Meal . I'am fure I did not spare but fed like a Farmer, and my Lands lady was not at all behind hand, the well enough knowing, that though I told them it was dreis'd uns let ground, yet the could contradict me but the durit not; the maid had her part too, and all were well enough content, except the poor Lawyer, who was both hungry and fearful, left as I had discovered the mest, I would also discover the Caterer, but I minded no fuch matter, I thought as I had begun well, to to end, and I would not be fo discourteous to him to make him fare ill, when by his means had hred so well. We not onely eat luftily, but drank off our Wine chee-ily, which was as good as ever tipp'd over Tongue, and for us three there was enough; and now at last my Landlord did swn that the Meat and Sauce, Bread and Drink were all excellent good, and that if the Spirits could command fo good Fire, they were more harmless and better company than he thought for: I rold him my Spirit was still in his house, and expected my further Commands, therefore I defir'd to know whether he would have ought elfee'red discharged him? He told me, No: Then, replyed I, he shall descend, but fince he hath done us lo good fervice,c will, if you please, let you fee him. Oh by no means Sir, faid my Landlady, faring I would discover her greatest Secrets. Rell Ref contented, replyed I, for I am Mafter of more difcretion than to difoblidge a Lady ; affure your felf it hall be otherwise than you imagine : my Landlord too was very fearful, but I affured him there should be no cause, and thereupon for the more easie management of what I intended, I ordered the Servant-maid to openthe Street door, and all the other Doors of the House, that the Spirit might have the more freedom to depart, otherwise I told them he would raise a Tempest ; and, continued I, he shall not appear in any horsid form, but in the habit of one of your Neighborn; having told them this, I thus began : Oh thou Spirit, who haft been unexpectedly difturb'd, but haft fo plensifully catered for us, come forth for I now give the leave to go whither thou pleafeft. The Lawer who was but in the next room, and who had heard all me fages, was not fo fortish as to neglect this opportunity, but pulling his Hat over his face that he might go undiscovered, came forth of the room where he had been hid, and with a fleddy pace walked by us, going down flairs, and so leaving the house, whilst my Landlady in s trembling manner fare and beheld what had palled.

It

00 no efit

the

to

-10

n, rit,

en-

the

vho

726

ity,

un-

icen

OWO

d.

CHAP. XVI

The Souldier is in danger to be caught by his Landlord in his Landladies Chamber, but by her wit he escapeth. Mistris Dorothy relates that a parcel of Padders having rob'd a Knight of four hundred pounds, two of them are taken, but the Knight will not swear absolutely against them, because he might sue and get his Money of the Hundred where he was rob'd. A Crew of Pick-pockess wanting money, two of them pretend to be drank, and quarrel with the third, wherefore those two are put into the stocks, and getting company, the third had the opportunity of picking many Pockets.

T'He Lawyer having thus pals'd by us to the amaze. ment of my Landlord, he then look'd on me with somewhat a distracted countenance, his wife seeing that. and doubting that he had, or would discover the matter, the to divert him from any questions or considerations, pretended to be fo mightily amaz'd & frighted, that the fell into a twoon, and then her Husband, the maid, and I had enough to do to bring her again to her felf, neither could we do it so well, but that her Husband was forced to help the maid to carry and put her into her bed, where for that night I left them and went to my own, and now my belly being full it was not long ere I Ifell afleep; awaking the next morning I began to confider what had passed, and wondred at my felf how I had the confidence to manage an affair fo difficult and dangerous, but when I considered what I had done I refolved to proceed, and as I knew the fecrets of my Lanlady to make some use of that knowledg, and out of her misfortunes to make my felf a fortune therefore I recommended my felf, remembring the old faying, Audaces Fortuna juvas, Fortune helps the bold, and therefore I would try her favours, reonfidering that the could could do me no injuries, I could not be much lower than I was, and I was in great probability to rife high er by the profecution of this Adventure. I did not question but I should do well enough with my Land. lady, for I had not at all disabliged her in berraving her fecrets, but rather mannaged them as well as the could with or defire, and therefore he could not tike me for a Clown or Fool, but rather think me worthy of her favour, and into her favour I was resolved to get, or venture all; the was young, and as you know indifferent handlom, her husband was old, and I believe wanting in what most pleases a woman, and therefore the had permitted the young Lawyer to fupply that Defect, and confidering that I might as well ashe pretend to her favor, for I was as young, and (if Iam not miftaken) as handlom ; indeed he had this advantage, of having more money than I, but I question'd not but the would well enough dispense with that, the being out of possibility of wanting any, but rather able to supply me; and I had this advantage above him, that I was in the house, and likely for some time to continue there, and by that means I might make use of all opportunities, and indeed it was not long ere I had one for I having spent good part of the morning in these cogitations, I could hear my Landlord rife and go our of the house, wherefore I also arose and made my felf ready, and indeed I spruced my felf up in the best manner I could is being now ready I went down flairs, and he met with the Maid-fervant, who could not look on me without blufhing, I gave her the Good morrow, & asked her how her miftrels didthis morning the replyed fomthing better than pleft her laft night truly replyed I, Lam forry that the was fo ill, but more elpecially to confidde that I had been the occasion ofin but I would ftudithow, to make her amends, & at preict ot d-

ng

he

ke

to

W C-

.

ly

ıc

m

15

10

0 le

a,

to

of

ed.

in 14 te

hè

in 14 b

ď

S.

CC

0

Й

Al.

I defired to make my excuses to her, if the would thew where the was : the is not yet ftirring, faid the Maile; his matters not, faid I, and thereupon we went to her bed fide , where when I was come, the feeing me turndaway her face : but Madam, to make fhort with my flory, I fpake to her, and that in fuch manner, that the not only turned about, but gave me thanks for the favers I had done, in managing her fecrets with fo much diferetion, and that the was, and should be eternally obliged to me, and should study how to make me amends: I replyed, amends was already made in the good opinion the had for me, defiring her to continue mit, and I hould endeavour to ferve her in all things temy power; and fince it was her misfortune to be diforbed by her Husbands unexpected return, and be dispointed in the enj yment of her Friend, that was thing I could help, but however if the pleased to actept of me in his flead, I should give her the best fatishaion I could, the feemed to be angry at this propolal; but | proceeding and telling her that I was a Gentleman born and bred, and it may be in all things equal, if totabove her Friend ; the was content to let me kifs her, and I finding that I might without much difficulty Moceed fulther, fent the Maid out for a Mornings traught, and in her absence perswaded her to accept of that from me which the should have had from her Friend the Lawyer, had not her Husband dikurbed them; and I then pleased her well, that ever fince she mit made ne difficulty to let me enjoy her Person, and be Mafter of that as well as I was other fecrets ; and being thus possessed of her person, I not only commanded that but her Purfe, and have led the pleafantest life in the World. This Adventure, Madam was the occalion of my being accounted a Gunning-man, for my Lindlord, though I had enjoyned him fecrefie, yet he did did not absolutely keep it, but acquainted some of his familiar friends with my knowledg, so that I was it short time pointed at as I passed along the street, and gazed at with the eyes of wonder; nay fome of the Neighborhood courted me very earnestly to answel them feveral questions, and being often importuned, die give them fuch answers as might probably come to pali, which falling out accordingly I gain'd not only there-putatian of a cunning man, but my pockets were alle indifferently well lyned with Half-crown pieces. Thu had I a handsome en'oyment of money and pleasures for I was free with my Landlady, and very little fulpected by her Husband ; but I was one time near being fricken in years, but by an accident fome years paff, had loft one of his eyes, or elfe he would have espyed us for one day he being abroad, and I being defirous to toy with my Landlady, we in order thereto entred her Chamber and lay down on her bed, we had not long been there but we heard a noise, and the maid-lervan looking to fee what was the matter, came haftily in to us, and told us that her Mafter was coming up ftairs! the had hardly delivered this unpleafant meffage, but he was come up stairs and was entring the Chamber, but he was not so quick, but his wife and I were as nim ble, and were got upon our feet, and the running to the door cought hold of her Husband about the Neck and cryed out, Oh Lord Husband, how dearly welcome you are to me ! especially at this time, when I fo longed to for you. For what caule, faid my Landlord ? what is the meaning of this language? Oh dear Husband, reply ed fhe, I have been alleen on the bed, where I had it pleafantest Dream that I have ever had in all my life! nay, (continued the) it is more than a Dream, for it is a Vision, and I hope a true one; well, what is it, is it ind met

did als,

relle

rei ful-

ing rell had toy

her ont

1201

1 (0

others.

Part. 3. k? Why trucky Husband , faid fhe , methoughts you ad I were walking along together in a pleafant Field, and we met with a man that begged an Alms of you, which you very liberally gave him, and he being glad of your liberality told you, that he would recompense it byrestoring you the fight of your other eye : Mehoughts I was very j youll at his proposition, and defired him to do it, but you were doubtfull of his performance, and therefore unwilling to let him meddle hus with you, but he promiting and affuring us that he would certainly cure you, I perswaded you to permit him to wash your eye with a certain Water he had in a Viol about him, which he had no fooner done, but methoughts you faw very well with your blin eye, at the leht of which I was fo over-loyed, that I awaked, and 106 you then came up frairs ; and now Sweet-heart I am fo mandent of the Truth of my Dream, that I defire to experiment the same, and therefore I pray let me put my hand on your feeing. Eye for a tryal. My Landlady hiving done, her Husband replyed, Surely you have not ben alleep as you fay, but talk idly for want of fleep, TE welle you would never make fo foolish a proposition. but Iknow nor, reply'd the, but I must needs delire you to ber, give me fatisfaction in this particular, for I long to try it. Well, faid he, thar you may fee how murh a fool the and you are, I am content. She having liberty, claps wee and on his seeing Eye, and I who waited that opportunity needed no further infiructions what to do, but fa its toming from behind the door where I had Rood, with long firides and eafie, went out of the Chamber, and goply ing down flairs left the Houfe : She feeing me gone, and the thereby her bufiness being done, asked her Husband if ifel befaw any thing? No, faid he, but if you will remove it is your hand I shall fee a fool, the did fo, and told him the the was farisfied , but hoped it had been otherwise: And thus, continued the Soldier, we estable de this brunt, as we did many others. And now Mada and aid he to me, I have been very free in relating to you he greatest Secrets of my life, having so much confidence. dence in your discretion, that I shall run no hazards fo you will be fo generous as to acquaint me with you and equality and condition, and permit me to serve you in a case. To this request I answer'd, That indeed I wasne as was fome time fince come from London, whither Ihm and adelire to return, fo have I, faid the Soldier, and if you please to accept of my service, I shall gladly wait of you thither. for I have so much respect from my Cap that in, that Equation not but he will not onely given a leave to go, but also give me a Pass to secure me thither there in my affairs, that I hoped in one months time my order in my affairs, that I hoped in one months time my to be ready to be gone, and then I should be glad of him accompany. This was the discourse I held with the Solar distributions in the discourse I held with the Solar distributions. dier, who was it deed very civil with me, fpending him being recolved to leave this place, took order to get in to my ha de what moneys I had, which I had lere on the Town, which was in the paine paid men; but very strange Accidents happened in the paint was in th sour house had been a Receptacle for Chears and Pick pockets, who by degrees coming to be Thieren and High-way-nien', they ftill' frequented it, man mine Hoft who feeing he gain'd moneys, eared out much which ways he came by it, made no great me and High-way-nien', they ftill' frequented it, 10 much which ways he came by it, made no great seraple of Chriscience to enterrain them windere were lerry! good Cultomers , and equi of In the best Guests we had, and he might do that you de believe and pay all that he reckoned, although di more, of all the Prizes they made, some whereof you very considerable; for a Knight of Torkshire have at frof our Guefts, he had onely Himself, Wife and this was his was being four and pounds in money, befides Watches, Rings, and To refere their Money and Jewels, yet dealt civily much with them (if I may term Thieves to be for) in the state of the Knight feeing it was in vain with them of the Knight feeing it was in vain with, and being too weak to do fo, permitted them mid the all from him, but when they came to his Lady had taken her little Money, and proceeded to take Rings from her Fingers, he was troubled, and told in, that he hoped as they had found him civil to continue to his Wife and Daughter, in taking their wiolence to his Wife and Daughter, in taking their wiolence to his Wife and Daughter, in taking their may from them whith were inconfiderable, and might pen to be prejudicial to them, in discovering of them the Law. They, who knew he said right, not onely fied from proceeding against the Ladies, but also gave his Watch and Rings and all the odd Money they taken from him, contenting themselves only that he, nor none of his company should rethat he, nor none of his company should re-from that place for half an hours time, they might have bissure to escape, they him. He was as good as his word and Raid

Opt his time, and they with full speed rode to our Tonk and at our house took up their Quarters: They is sooner entred the house, but they first deliver'd the Money to the custody of mine Host, and then called to a Trunk wherein was their Clothes, for they had always Change of Clothes lay there, fo that in aquarter of hours sime these six Blades of Fortune were so men morphosed that they were not to be known; he who when he came in had a black Perriwig and grey clothe now had a white Perriwig and black Clothes, and be that and pulling off Patches and such like Disguisement they were not to be known; for if a Hue and Cry contout wherein is named the number of the Robbers, the cannot distinguish or discribe them otherwise thank their Clothes and Horfes; and as for their Habits the thus alter them, and their Horfes are prefently either fent to Grafs, or lock'd up in a private Stable, and the Sadles and other Acourtrements are convey'd away to lock'd up , and commonly if there be fix or eight intil Robbery, not above the one half, or three quarters a them go to one boule, but d v de themselves into Con meet and divide the Broty: This is their common par tice when a Robbery is done at any diffance from La don, but if it be done within twenty miles of that plan then away they all flie thither, and enter the City atfo eral ends of the Town, and to several Quarters they present disperse themselves; this I say is their custom Leold Mistress Dorothy that I was very well acquaint with the Truth of what she had said, and therefore direct her to proceed and acquaint me how the Guests came off with their Prize, Very well, the, for the Hue and Cry came not to our Tow till the next day, and by that time two the fix were gone, having taken their had

Town them, and the Hue and Cry having paffed about the tiled in their Enquiry, for it nominated fix, whereas d four Company was but four, and the Description of of a what our Guelts had, that there was no reason in the men meld to fusped them, and as for their Horses they whenere not to be found, fo that, I fay, our Guests all efnd hin two days time their Joy was leften'd; for a trufty nem Mellenger came to them and brought fad Newes from , the they were taken, apprehended, and upon examination the Guels were very much furprized at the news, & upon the tamination of the perticulars, thus they found it: The yas time he promised, that being over, he caused his Coachminimum to drive on to the next Town, where when he rs a come he fent for the Town-Officers, and inform'd them Com of his Lofs, and withal cold them that he must, and did the treet fatisfaction from them, and the reft of the In-Le hours before Sun-set: They who heard him knew he plan hid right, and that it must be so, unless they produc'd ey pily at Law, wherefore the Sum being considerable, and the Case so evident and plain to be proved, they aint presently took an account of the Knight of all particuthe fervants could direct, and having fo done fent out a Hue for mdCry, directing and charging the Officers to use all long possible dilligence in the discovery of these Fellons: to the the mits'd of their purpose for that day, but the next it was the misfortune of these two of our

Guefts who had left our house to come thither, and bee ing now again upon the Pad, were accourted in their Padding Habit ; although they were but two, and the number in the Hue and Cry was fix, yet their Habits and Horfes were fo remarkable that they were foon fulpelled, and the officers feized them quickly , hailing them before the Justice, whither when they were come and examined, they could not answer fo well, but that they were fhrewdly fulpected ; but to make the matter more clear, the Knight and his fervants who were full in the Town, were fent for, and then it was not long etel the matter was but too plain for our two Delinquent especially when upon search of their Poremantua's their thate of the Money was tound, however they foutly denied the Fact; but nowithftanding all that could be faid they were fent to Prison! This News alarmed out Guefts, and made them bethink themfeves of what should be most necessary for their own prefervation, and thereupon they thus relolved, that two of the four should go near the place where the Knight was, and oblerge his motions, and according to that all their matters as thould be convenient, and the other two re folyed for the present to flay at our house bur this Cale which now at the beginning appeared to be very bad and fad for their two Companions, in the end by the cunning mannagment of the two Agents came of much better than was expected, and indeed very well for they understanding that the Knight was engaged by the Juffice to profecure, and that the Coun rey would fee that he should do fo, whereby they might be difcharged from payment of the money he was robbit off; This confideration being had , they re-folved by some truly Messenger to fend to the Knight , and therefore they drew up a Letter to this purpole.

fuf.

) me that:

tter!

U in ete

nti,

heir

rigita

be out

har

and

SHO

and cie

16/1

his

ery

by 0 by 16

64

1

to

CC

would be Hat they were Gentlemen of a good Extraction, but heir the misfortunes of times, and their own Necessites; the put them upon a Cours of life far different from their bits helinations; which alihough it was not justifiable by Law, yet they thought it not fo unreasonable as the World ling ld and they had plenty of Examples for their Practice, menhole Nation being now engaged into Parties, who mater fair and specious pretence made it their bufinefs to Rob (which they termed Plunder) one another, effectally beharmless Countrey, and that so often as they sould come in their way : This they faid was the president by thich they walked, and by vertue of this Commission I which they believed as Authentick as some of their's who loyed great Forces;) they had taken up Arms, and their fortune, and this prefent milhap, had caused them to mert, where although he was d poffeft of his Money, yet they were confident be had no very ill oppinion of them, in neard they had weed him and the Ladies in his company with all civility; this they hoped he would not forget, and frehat consideration be would deal as civilly with their the Companions, who had the misfortune to fall under the pwer of the Law. This they thought was reason enough for them to Expect all favour at his hands, but there were also other reasons for him to do it, and that which they thought would be the most prevalent, was, that it was ar sainst his own intrest to prosecute their Companions; for bould be at the approaching Affizes fo absolutely charge them with the Fact, as to bring them within the compass of the Law, and it may be take their Lives from them, then be must expect no other fatisfaction, but lofe his Mo. my; whereas on the contrary, if he and his servants spake doubtfully in their Evidence against them, and they were not proved to be guilty, then he might by Law recover his whole Money of the Country. This they hoped would be a prevalent reason with him to order the matter so as to let thir Companions of cape, which they prayed & hoped be would do : but if (as they thought against all reason) be Should rigorously profecute them, he was to remember that Jour of their Companions were still left at liberty with Swords in their hands, and his misfortune might again bring bim under their power, when be might not expell fo civel proceeding against him as he had the last time , but that they might revenge their Companions but they concluded they hoped be would not give them that occasion.

And fo they concluded.

This Letter was carefully conveyed to the Knight, who having read and confider'd the Contents, and finding their reasons to be good, and withal considering that if he should by his Evidence east these two men for their Lives, he was not fure of his own fo long at they had companions, (who though at the first he found civil enough) who had fwords in their hands, and might be revengful and bloody minded enough on that or cafion : neither, as they had urged, would it be for his interest, for he mast then lose his Money, or the greateft part, Thele realons, I lay, made him to manage the matter fo as that upon Tryal they should be acquitted, and therefore he fent to the Prison a Confident of his to tell them that he would do fo, charging them to deny the Fat & ftand upon their juftification ; And thusthe Affizes coming they were indicted, but the Knight& his Servants (who were directed & inftructed by him) were all in one Tale, & faid, that indeed he was robbid of four hundred pounds at fuch a place & time, by fix men, two whereof were in fuch habits, or like fuch as the prifoners at the Bar had, but that he could not for all the world fwear or fay that they were any of the perfort He faying no more than thus, and by his example his Servants taying no more or lefs, & the Prifoners plead. ing Justification, they were in the end acquitted, had their Money again deliver'd to them, and the 10 hat

rith

ain

16 bus

0Hht,

nd-

ing

acn

and 06.

his

at-

the

d,

Als,

BY

the

his ere

ot

en,

ni-

the

Df.

his

ed-

cd,

he

Knight now proceeding in his Suit against the Country, recover'd his whole Moneys of them; and thus our two Priloners with their two Comrades who had attended the Tryall, come home to our house with great joy. And thus did Thieves escape, and the honest Country was punish'd; and this I have known is a trick that bath been used tamiliarly, so that several Countrys have been almost undone with these kind of Robberies.

Soon after this paffage, there happened one as pleafine, though not to reguish, and thus it was: A Crew of Divers, Bung nippers, or Pick-pockets came to our house, and there being a Fair in the Town they brought home very good Purchase, and spent their moseys very freely, but their trade did not continue fo good as it began, and they in expences were so profuse and prodigal, that they had out-run the Conftable, spent more than they were able to pay, and they were a ways us'd to pay their Hoft well, and fo they were refolv'd to do now, or fet their Wits one the Tenters ; many Projects they had, and many Effays they made, forme of them going abroad by turns, and then returning and fending others, but our Town was but thinly peopled, and they could not raise any considerable Purchase, wherefore browing that if they could get any number of people together, they might then have the more convenient opportunity of getting a Prize, they therefore thus laid their Plot, Three of hem went out, two whereof we e toat the drunken mans part, and to they did very Comically, for they recling along the freets, tumbled down several people who were in their way. The people believing them to be what they appear'd, with drunk, let them pais on withour much interruption; their faber Companion feeing that no body elfe would take them up, he therefore was refolv'd

A

and

Part. 113. to do it, and thereupon meeting them as by chance; they Save him the Juftle, which he nor taking fo patiently as the other had done, not onely worded it with them, but they proceeded to blows, fo that two being against one it was thought unequal, and they having been abulive to others, a great company were affembled, and among them the Gonflable, who feizing upon all three carried them before a Justice, who hearing the matter, and finding by the testimony of the people who went with them, that the two were wholly to blame, and believing them to be as drunk as they feemed to be, he therefore ordered that they thould be fet in the Stocks for two hours, and the third be discharged. This his Order was ob: yed, and they were conducted to the Stocks, where they behav'd themselves to pleasantly in fo slith discourse to the people, that a very great number of people were about them; their Companion who was at freedom feeing his conveniency, and heing his Arts. Mafter in the Mystery of Diving, fished money out of their pockets, fo that in two hours time that they were in the Stocks, he plyed his work fo well that he had gained near feven pounds; being thus fraighted, he came to our hoofe, and it was not long ere nis Comptnions followed him; when they fin ling to confiderable a Purchase, paid my Landlord the Reckoning and call'd for a new one, where they drank roundly, remembring all those by whom they fared the better ; and this has ving done the bufiness they came for, they paid their Shot and march'd off to the next Town to fee if they could fare any better than they had done at ours. And thefe, continued Mistress Dorothy, were the Guefts we now entertained, Padders and Pick pockets, who as they got their money cafily, fo they fpent it as lightly, to the great profit of mine Holt, for he gained at least fifty pounds of the four hundred,

t

t

e

c

5

d

ç

not fill put in for a share: but as the Pitcher goes not soften to the water, but it comes home broken at last, sin short time not onely his Guests, but he himself was caught and brought to condign punthment.

CHAP. XVII.

The Author relates a Story how he and fix other Padders robb'd a Carrier of fix bundred pounds, and that one of the company in consideration of an hundred pounds paid him by the Countrey where the Robbery was committed, owned the Fact, and therby faved the Countrey (who were (ued) from payment of the rest, and at length by their affiftance gained his pardon. Alfo how a young Pick pocket is put on by an old one, to cut an old wemans Purse whilest she is at prayers in a Church yard by a Tomb-stone; the Boy performs the Explose, but is discover'd and shew'd by the old pick-pocket to the people, who coming to stare on the Boy had their Pockets pickt by the old one and his companions . And also how an old Padder being in danger to be hang'd for a Robbery. a young one for fifty pounds took the Fact upon himself; discharged the old one, and in the end came clearly off bimfelf.

Finding by Mistrels Dorothy's pauling that she was fomewhat weary of her large Discourse, and being desirous to know the conclusion of her Adventures, desired her to refresh her self with a Cup of Wine which stood by us, and then we all three, viz. Mistrels Mary, Mistrels Dorothy, and my self, having drank off a quart of the best, I thus bespake her; Truly Mistrels Dorothy, you have taken much pains in reciting reciting these pleasant adventures that besel whil'st you liv'd in the Inn, and you must needs have very great experience by what you have related, for although I was well acquainted with knaveries and rogueries emough whilest I lived in England, yet all our adventures are very new, being such whose like I have seldom heard; and although I did follow the Padding-Trade, especially at that time when I had the good fortune at the first to meet with, and be acquainted with you, yet I seldom knew, nor indeed ever heard of the like escape that your six Padders had; it was a neat and clenly conveyance; but lest you should be tyred with too long speaking, and that I might enable you the better to give us a full and exact account of the rest of your adventures, I will relate to you some of my former Adventures, and especially one, which was somewhat like that of your six Padders, and thus it was.

A flour gang of us who were Knights of the Road, were one time affembled together at an Inn, from whence we understood a good round Sum of money was to be carryed, and we only waited the departure and motions of the Pack-horfes, that we might put out project in execution; the Sum was fix hundred pounds, and we knew it was to be carried in a pack, but which pack and which horse was to carry it, we were ignorant of, and that we doubted would be a hindrance or at leaftwife a trouble to our delign ; for the Carrier having such a charge of money was resolv'd to travel only by day light, and not in the night time, whereby if it should happen he were robb'd, he might nor bear the lofs : and we knowing this, and doubting that he would keep in as much company as he could, we feard it would be troublefome and dangerous to rob him of that money, unless we knew in what pack it was; for it would take up much time to cut up and examine all

Part 3

.

It

.

h

d

h tof

٥.

d,

M ic ir

h

0-

10 ď

el

ır

te

of.

r.

I

the rest of the Packs, which were near twenty in number; wherefore one of our Comrades made it his balinels to discover that matter, but although he was watchful, yet the Carrier and Owners were as fhie, fo that he could not peffibly attain to his delires , wherefore he was refoly'd to under-feel the Hoftler, who upon a little acquaintance and a Reward given him, and more promifed it the project should take, engaged to give him a certain Token how he should know the Horse and Pack, and to that end directed him to wait the next morning early when the Pack-horfes went out : Our Companion did fo, fitting in a Drinking room in the Yard where he could fee all paffages. The Horfes being loaden, went out one after another, and the Moneyedhorse in the middle, when he came the Hoftler lifted up his hand, and gave him a Clap over the Buttock, laying, Goe thy ways Dun, for then wilt never be fold to thy worth: This was Item enough to our Companion to mirk, and know what he had to do ; fo that the Horses being all gone, and he having disparcht his drink, came up to us who attended him; And then he telling us that he knew how to execute our Delign, and that he had knowledge enough, we rested contented, neither did we leave that Inn till noon, although the Carrier went out in the morning early, and this we did that we might not be suspected to have any design upon him. but foon after we had din'd we all mounted and away we rode. It was not many hours before we over-took the Carrier, or at least came near him, and then we fent one of the company to scour the Road, and discover in what condition the Carrier was in, and as occasion lerv'd to come back to us and acquaint us; one hour before night he came to us, who were not far off; and told us, that then was the opportunity, for the Carries

Carrier had engag'd company all the while before, but now the night coming on, and the Company being to travel further than the Carrier, they had newly lett him, and then he was alone, onely with his man'and two or three passengers; we being eight in number, quickly made up to the Carrier, and own with Sword drawn and Piftol cock'd feiz'd on him, another on his man, and the rest of our Companions on the rest of the Pastingers; he of our Companions that knew the Horse and Pack onely went to him, singl'd him out, cut his Gires, ripp'd up the Pack, and took forth the money, without medling with any thing elfe , we the test of his Companions in the mean time had difmounted the Carrier, his man, and the Paffengers, and having tye their hands, we left them to thift for them-Selves, and lix of us raking each of us a hundred pounds, and the other two riding one in the Van, and the other in the Rere, away we march'd, but at that rate that in two hours we were got thirty miles from the place where the robbery was committed, and we had fo crois'd the Country to prevent discovery, that it was almost imp ffible to overtake or finde us. We took up our Quarters at an inn where we were very well acquained, and for joy of our purchase wanted for nothing hat money could produce us, and there we foent tome time in a'l manner of delights, till being weary of the place, and some of the Company having a d fire to depart and seperate, we accordingly did fo, and one of our Companions who had occasion to ride that way where we committed this Robbery performed one of the boldest exploits that I have ever heard of and thus it was .

He had an Uncle who kept an Inn in the Town ness to the place where this Robberry was done, to whole house he came & was welcom's the pretended he was a Sold-

Soldier, and was newly newly come from the Garrifon at Bristol, and with such kind of imaginary Stories he discours'd his Uncle, and telling him the best news he could, and his Uncle likewise acquainted him with the news of the Town, and as the chiefest rold him that there had lately been a great robbery done, for a Carrier was robb'd of fix hundred pound, and therefere it being done in the day time, that Town must pay for it, and truely Coulin, faid he, our Town hath been to mightily pettred with Soldiers that we are veny poor and not able and my fhare comes to thirty pound of the money : but faid our companion, can you not meet with the thieves? no replyed his Uncle; we have offered a hundred pound, to any that can discover them, but hitherto all hath been in vain. This was the Hofts discourse with his Kinsman, who very well knew he was one of the number; and a conceit came into his head, that it was possible that as he had got almost a hundred pounds already by this robbery, fohe might get another whole hundred pounds; and therefore being resolved what to do he thus discovered himfelf to his Uncle : it is now faid he, three years fince ! left my Father, and ever fince that I have led a troublefome life, to that I am almost weary of it; and it is not long fince that for a misdemeanor I had done in our Garrison, I was condemned to be hang'd, but I thank my stars I escaped sit, and being so near death and escaping, I soon after came acquainted with a cunning man, who telling me my Fortune, told me that I had lately escaped a danger, which I very well knew; and he withal added, that I should run into many other dangers, and should escape them; and that he was certain I was not born to be hang'd : and now therefore Uncle faid he, I will once again tempt my fate, and being affored that I make be hanged, I

hi

tr

care not, if I may be enfured the hundred pounds you fpake of, if I rake upon me and own the Robbery; and I think it will be no difficult matter to do, for as I remember one of the Gentlemen Padders who did that fear was habited and mounted just as I am. His Uncle having heard his discourse, stared as him, and asked him if he were mad? no, replyed he, but if you will warrant me the money I'le undertake the matter: his Uncle feeing him thus refolved , began to confider ! little more feriously of the matter, and told his kinfman, that if he would do the one, he would not only enfure him of the other, but also endeavour his parden, and thereupon he fent for some of the Neighbors whom he might truft; and told them that there was a wild young man his kinfman, who would fave then five hundred pounds, and cold them the manner how, they were well enough facisfied with the propolition, and not only promifed him the money which was > greed on, fhould be prefently put into any friends hand, but also that they would undertake his pardon, or a leaft-wife a reprieve that he might fue out his pardon; this being agreed upon, they next proceeded in their discourse how this affair was to be managed, and after feveral propositions made, it was concluded, that as he came into the Town, fo he should go our, and the next day he should re-enter the Town when the Officen who should be then appointed to fearch for suspition persons should seize on him, and he should at the first deny the fact, but upon examination should so viry and waver in his discourse, that he should give just cause of suspition; they having agreed on this, and several other particulars, and the money being depolited in young maidens hand, who was his Uncles Daughter; he rook horse and privately left the Town. The next the Town being charged to keep and watch, and fearch all fulpitious places; they did and as they had been a little way out of the town. me were returning our Adventurer overtook them who rides here fays one, fure that men is cloathed juft M is the Carrier described one of the Padders were? le khearing them fay this, made fome frand, and offered d to tern his back, they therefore imagining that he ill night be fulpected, asked of him what he was ? and is a nine near to encompass him, he fill withdrawing frew his piftol and fired at them, they then flaring on fach other, and feeing that none of their company was till'd or wounded, were encouraged to make up to n, him; and although he drew his fword yet they being med adventured upon him, and feizing on him, pull'd . him from his horle back, he then asked them, what 19 T, was the matter, and what they would have? they told him that he was a high-way man, and that they were try certain of, or elfe why did he shoot at them, and a d, were glad they had caught him, he foould pay for allthe trouble he had put the Town to , fome railed at him inthis manner, whilft others difarmed him and bound eit his hands together, and then they led him away to the Town, where with great noise they carried him before ter he en on ich er i their Justice of the peace; he Arietly examined bim indabiolutely charged him with the former Robbery; dyiling him to contess, and inform against his comunions, and then he told him he would endeavour to en him appardon ; ouradventurer gave him the hearmg of all, bar denyed all knowledge of the robbery, ber lo faintly and with fuch faultering and uncertainites, that the Justice committed him to prison. In few tyes after the Carrier came that wayes, and he was toducted to the Theif, were after a light light and ficourse with him , he and his servant rememked him, and the Owner of the money was fent for who

the Carrier and his Servant were all bound to profecute the Felon, which was much ta the vexation of the

ı

h

- Action

owner of the moneys, who expected the next affize to have a tryal against the Town, and to recover he money of them, whereas now he faw he was like in lofe that, and only have an Endictment againft the Fellon, when as if he should find him guilty, it would be a little fa isfaction for fuch a fum of money as he hal loft. And as he expected, and as the plot was laid, fe it fell out ; for the Affizes being come, an Endichment was brought in against our Delinquent, and although he bufe'ld to defend bimfelf, yet he was found guilty, and thein he made an ingenious confession to the July of the manner of the Robberry, only conecaling much as he thought convenient, alleadging that is deed he was guilty, but it was his first fact, but bewall drawn in by dhance being overtaken on the way by the Robbers ; he being coming to the Town to vile his Unkle, and therefore he pray'd mercy of the com the Indge told him that if he would discover his conpaniens omewhat might be done, but not elle, hertplyed, that truly he was not in their company about cight and forty hours in all, and therefore knew me of their kaunts, but if his honor would force his like he would if ever he met them, caufe them to bem prehended ; to this the Judge made no Answer, fother our Adventurers Uncle prefented a Petition toth

Judge in behalf of his Kinf man, and the other Chil men of the Town presending for his Unkles fake tod So stifted bim in it, and they drew the Petition fopi-tifully, that the Judge at their importuni y grantel him reprive for the prefent, leaving kim to fue out his pardon as faft as he could : and thus all Parties went content except the owner of the moneys, who wer onw

Fel-

d be

1,6 ment

dje

ilry, adge

2 1

13 WII

by yilt

out 00-

te.

WO

De.

lik

ap-

that dk

heil

o de

pi-

ated

vest

VCR

the away with a Fles in his ear; and our Adventures fo. ole plyed his bufinels, wanting for neither money nor the friends, that in frort time he gained his pardon, and he was fet free ; and I will asid this further of our comhas panien, that after this he turned honest man, for by e to vertue of the money he had gained in this robbery, and what was g ven him, he first fer up an Ale-house, and foon after an Inn, and hath born all Offices in the Parif. And this flory, faid I, Miffres Dorotby, fom what refembles yours, for your Thives cheated the Country who paid the Knight what he had loft, and here on the contrary, the Country out witted the Party robd. and faved their purios ; and truly I have known feveni of thefe transactions, and fometimes the guilty efrage, and the innocent are punifhed. And now, conthe nued I, Mistress Dorotby: you fee I am acquainted with thefe kind of ftories and as I have already related one of a Padder, which do somewhat equal yours, I will now also tell you another of a Pick-pocker, which hal be much like yours of that nature, and thus it was:

A Grew of Blades of that Profession came to a Countrey-town on a market day, and finding there was little good to be done without fome occasion to draw the People regether more than ordinary, they therefore went to an Ale-house to consult on what was necessary to be done, and there after several debates held, it was concluded as follows, that whereas they had lately taken up a boy of about ten years of ige, who was very defirous of learning their mykery, and whereas they had instructed him sufficiently in the theory thereof, that it was now time to put him in pradice, and therefore the gravest man in the company was to walk out with him, thew him what he was todo and help him if he frood in need thereof, & the reft o the fociety were to be at hand to do as occasion froul offer

offer this being agreed upon, the old fellow rock the Boy by the hand, and leads him through the Market, but there was no probability of a prize, and the Boy having promised to do much, the old man fought out for some what that might be worthy his underisking , and to going out of the market they entred the Church-yard and there they faw an old woman with a great pouch of mony by her fide, kneeling by a Tomb. frome and doing her devotions : Our old fellow feeing this, faid to the Boy, Sirrah, you fee that old woman with the Ponch ; yes Sir, replyes the Boy, go thither faid he, and bring away her Purfe and money the boy was not at all daunted at the boldness of the undertaking, but went up to the woman, and fo foon as he came near her, he likewise fell on his knees, and fell mumbling as if he were also at his devotions ; the old woman feeing him fo devout, permitted him to continue by her, but he putting down one of his hands by vertue of a Knife and Horn-thimble cut effint Porfe: The old man flood not far off and faw his carrisge which was fo cunningly contriv'd that he could not forbear laughing at it, but bethinking him of a further Defign, he was refolved to discover the Boy, whereupon flopping fome paffengers that were going by, he faid to them, I pray friends behold yonder Boy how devout he is, do you not think he will be a good one in time that is fo religionfly given already? yet furely, faid the people, On the cunningness of the young Rogue ! faid the old fellow, and how much you ere all midaken ! for I have flood and feen that young Regae cut the old wemans Purfe, and thereupon he went to his young practitioner in Roquery, and took him by the hand cau fing him to arife, & bringing him to the people, faewed them the Purfe he had thus putchafed the old womun was not fo intent at herde-VOLIORS, purse in the Boys hand, missing her own soon knew that to be it, wherefore the & all the people came neareithe Boy, who food Aill as a flock and faid nothing to them, and all the people, not oneythey that went by but also at their report most of the people in the mar" ker came thither to fee this young Rogue, admiring at the boldnels of the fact, but they had been better to hive flaid away and minded their own Affairs; for out old Rogue feeing his opportunity, and that now there was a great many people together, he fell a diving into their pockets, and got good Pillage, and his Comminions who, were not far off at the noise came in to the sport, and all laid about them so lustily that there were few who escaped without their pockets being pick'd, onely the old woman had hee purfe again, but in exchange of that our old Rogue and his Compani-ans had twenty others better fraught with moneys;

in fine, they being weary with looking on the boy, & the Pick-pockets thinking they had done sufficiently for that time, the old fellow came to the boy, and told him that as he had first of all discovered, him lo he should go along with him; the boy who had learned obedience to his Superiors, consented, and so they march'd off, and went alittle way out of the Town to in Ale house, where they divided the plunder of the feld, which amounted to above twenty pounds. And thus having told my Tale, I faid to Miftress Dorothy that I thought this was fomewhat like her discourse of the Pick-packets; She told me the must needs confess it, and that both my Tales exceeded hers, and therefore the defired me to remitt ber promife of proceeding any further in her discourse; for, said the, I shall be able to acquaint you with nothing but what you know already; as for that, faid I, i must bear the con-k fhe bt 1-

Part. 3.

he 1 . ge an

13 he n-21

ell he

to ds IN

-11 ald ur-

oy, ing

oy box

yes the HOU

gne he

ook him -100

de-

ORS,

P'3

rulfion of your flory, but fince you feem to prove of what 1

1

what I have told you, I shall proceed alittle further, and relate a Story to you formewhat like my first, and bus it was.

A High-way-man who had used the Trade for along time, was at length catch'd, and the evidence was fo clear against him that he was likely to be cast, and then he was fure to go to pot, for he had been finged on the Fift already, and the Judge who was to try him Was very fevere on that account ; wherefore be was very melancholly, and much perplexed, and all the friends he had could not comfort him, however he was one day drinking with fome friends in the Jayl and telling them the fadnels of his condition, and feveral ways were propounded for his fafety; they told him that it would be best to compound the fact with the Profecutor : I have offered that, faid the Felon, and though I did not take about twenty pounds from the party, yet I have offered him fifty pound for compofition if he will forbear prefecution; but he will not hear of any thing but the Law, and will make noend but what that fhall, and if it comes to that, then I am certain forrow will be my Sops; how, faid one that was present, will he not take fifty pounds for twenty? fure he wants no money, for it he knew the want of it fo much as I do, he would not make fo fight of fifty pounds; but I pray, continued he, what is the reason he is to outragious against you? what is the caule of his violent proceeding? Truly, reply'd the Thief, it was my mir fortune to be one of thole two that met with him one night, and he having twenty pounds and a Watch about him we cas'd him of them, my Companion efcaped, but I was feized the next night on fulpition, and having belides my hare of the twenty pounds the w tch about me which we had likewife the ken from him, it was as he faid, a clear Teftimony & evidence of the Fact, he earneftly enquired for the ring

er

bas

ong

160 len'

on im

he

he

yl

ic.

ch

nd he 0-ot

0

18

of

y

n

of it

1

wch my companion had for his fhare; & because I can. not belp him to the ring helis thus obfinare, well then. lee faid the other, you have confest'd th fact & thereforethere is no hope of faving you: truly replyed the Padder, I never yet confessed it to any one that I think will do me any prejudice, but much less to him; but in head of confelling I have alwayes flourly denyed it, allesdging that I bought the Watch that Evening of one in who company I was; nay then, replyed the other, your case is not so desperate as I thought it, and how fay you now, continued he, are you willing to be sgood as your word, and give the fifty pounds you freak of to be discharged of this matter ? yes with all my heart, faid the Padder; well then faid the other, if you will depolite the money into another mans hands that I may be fure of it when you are discharged I will undertake you shall be acquited; content, faid the other, but I pray acquaint me with the manner how you will manage this affair ; our Undertaker replyed, that he had considered of what was so be done, and was refolved to he might be fure of the money to venture his own neck to fave the others, and that he would take upon him the fact, and thereby discharge him. The Padder was content to part with his money, but withal hedelired to have fome cleer demonfration how he inended to manage ? ! bufinels ; to which our undertaker replyed, it m'et be your care net to be tryed till the luft day of the 'ffizes, and then ftill deny the he very floutly, continuing your allegation that you did buy the Watch of a ftranger, but one whom you new if you again should fee him, and then I must bertow your Clothes, and the Perriwig you were when you committed the Fact, and then I purpose at that time not to be far from you; and when I fee convenient time I wil apear, & the manner shal be thus:

P 4

I wil

bi

C

11

81

di

di

W

ſŧ

J

th

11

Ы

h

R

Ь

C

0 ct

01

1 ti

in

Hi di

.

in

q

ú

th

his

I will attempt to pick amans pocker, but I will do it founworkman like, that ifhe be not a very Dolt he thall dicover me, I being discovered must presently be brought before the Judge for the Fact, and when you fee me there you half cry out as amazed and furpriz. ed, that I am the very man of whom you bought the Watch, and you shall then see that although I denvit a little at fielt, yet I will at last confess my self guilty. and fo you hall be discharged : This, faid our Undertaker is my proposition, and now if you can contrive it better, do, and I will follow your directions. The Padder and all his friends were hugely well fatisfied& pleased with the Undertakers discourse, and could not find any fault in any particular, wherefore their Agreement was quickly perfected, and the fifry pounds were delivered into the cuftody of one whom they both knew and entrufted, to be kept by him until the Padder should be discharged. Several persons then prefent asked of the Undertaker how he intended to come off himself? as for that, replyed he, I have it in my head, and I will venture that, and keep it fafce. nough too I hope : this bufinefs being thus sgreed on they at prefent parted, and the Undertaker had the Clothes and Perriwig of the Padder delivered to him; and the Padder did put himfelf into a habit quite difbegan, which lasted two days, hely the first day was past, and our Padder had by his endeavours kept him. felf from being called; the fecond day was come and forenoon paft, when in the after-noon this Caufe was to be heard; the Judges fervant were fome of them gon out of the Town to make provision for their Miker at another Town, whither he was that night to follow, fo that there was a necessity for his removal; &then about three of the cleck this prifoner was brought tothebu,

Ė

e

u

.

it

7, re le

*

d

it

.

y ie in

.

it

.

n

;

25

ls

.

d

15

n

It:

ĸ

$

his Indictment was read, which was for robing the Countey man, of 20 l. in money, and a filver warch, and a gold Ring, to this the prisoner pleaded not quilty and to put himfelf upon his try al, according to the ordisary form, then was the Country man called, who did alledge that the prisoner at the Bar was the party. who with another his companion did r b him as aforehid; the prisoner denyed the fact, and defired the Judge to ask his accorder what habit he was then in, to this the Countrey man replyed, that indeed his habit and hair were then different from what he now had. but that was an easie thing so alfer, but he was fure he was the man, for he had his very watch in his pockat to this the prisoner replyed as formerly, that he bought it of a person who indeed was habited as the Country-man had described. He was come to this part of his tryal when a noise was heard in the Court of trying out a pick-pocket, a pick-pocket, and foon after our undertaker was haled into the Court; the Judge leing him, faid, Sirrah, how durft you be fo bold? I hall talk with you by and by, fet him by at prefent; the priloner at the Bar feeing it was now a fit time, crydoet, O my Lord! I pray let him Ray here now, for indeed my Lord that is the very person of whom bought the watch, and whose just fare hath brought him bither at this time, that my innocency may be dered, therefore I befeech you my Lord'let him be camined, and I question not but you will soon find my innocency. The Judge hearing the exclamations of the prisoner, and supposing there might be somewhat in the case, and withal being desirous to execute justice tuled the Undertaker to be brought to the bar, and then he thus began : now, you who wester fones at the ber, and upon your tryal, what do you is the ber, and upon your tryal, the padder, it cher padder, it cher this man with; my Lord replyed the padder, it

The English Rogue; And Part. 3. 218 and alledg that this Person who now stands here by me, is the very person of whom I bought the watch, and I gave him fifty shillings for it, let him deny it if he can, and my Lord I further fay, that I suppose he is the person who committed the robbery, for he is habited just as this Gountry man described one of them to be what fay you to this ? faid my Lord to the Country-man, truly my Lord, faid he, I am fomewhat ata fland, for indeed one of those who robb'd me was habited as this fellow is, pointing to the undertaker, but I finding my Watch in the colledy of this other did verily believe and was very confident that it was he that robb'd me, but I must leave all to your Lord-ship and the Jary : Now, you Sir, faid my Lord to the undertaker, what fay you for your fel? did you fell . Watch to this man here? my Lord, replyed he, I have never a Waich, no; I know that now, faid my Lord, but did you not fell s Watch to this man? my Lord faid the undertaker, I am an honest man, that's a figo of your honesty, when you pick a pocker in my prefence, my Lord it is a miflake, replyed the Fellow; I believe, faid my Lord, we shall not be mistaken in you by and by, having thus faid the Watch it felf was produc'd, and fhew'd to the undertaker; and he was asked it he knew it, yes, my Lord, faid he, I had foch a watch as this ; and where had you it ? I know not faid the underraker : at this the Padder cryed out, O my Lord, he hath faid enough to discharge me and accuse himself, for he ownes he had the Watch, and I am fure I bought it of him, therefore good my Lord do me Juftice? to quit me, and punish him; all in due time (sid my Lord, we must not condemn aim before be be lawfully in but I think he hart confest d enough against elf, and therefore he fhall be committed, and fince! annot fray now any longer he that be indicted the DED

n

te

I

L

6

1

t

8

t

b tı

1 ı

k

t

.

2

1

0

1

.

h

by .

ch.

if

15 bi-

10

m-

12

13-

140 lid

he

gip

ın.

YC

rd, ord

gn

FC-

01

0-red ch

nhe

:If,

Į¢. d, Part 3. next Affizes, till then he must lye by it end have time torepent : but I pray my Lord, faid the Padder, let me be discharged; I cannot discharge you replyed my Lord, now your are upon your tryal, except the Jury find you not guilty : I put my felf upon them, faid the Padder, whereupon the Jury only asking the Underuter fome questions which he doubtfully answered. the Jury gave their Verdia, Not guilty, and thus was the Padder discharged, but however he was bound to come in evidence the next Affizes against the undertaker, and fo was the Country-man, but he had been better to have taken fifty pounds than thus to have troubled himself about the Ring, for in the end he loft Il, and no hanging was in the case; for when the next Affizes came, and our Underraker was indicted, the Tale was now of another Hogg, he denyed all knowledg of the Watch, and as he had owned any thing before, he now again denyed it, bringing witnelles to prove where he was that hour, and all the time of the robbery, and faying, he rold them it was smiftake the laft time, that he was then only furprized; and indeed he spake so well, and to the purpose, and that he was acquitted of the robbery, and only whipt a little for picking the pocker, and so he march'd off with fifty pounds ; and the Padder who did not appear at the Affizes as witness against him, let the retognizance go against him, leaving the law to find him where they could catch him.

Part: 3 Part

of t ry,

ly r my ny

like

Ch

lti

ing

her of 50 ha

W CO

PV

no

10

W

te

el

th

le

.

fi

I

1

CHAP. XVIII.

. Miffress Mary relates a notable story of a Country. Gentleman's cheating a Gold fmith; another much more remarkable, of a Gentlemans Boy by affiftances his Mafter, who put a notable trick on a Gold /mills afterwards going for France, is notorioufly robb'd by way of retalistion, the manner how, with his at companying a feeming Gallant to a Feast who steals peice of Plate.

Having now finished my discourse, I defired Mittels Dorothy to proceed in hers, and put a end to her Adventures, to which the replyed, that find I was fo well acquainted with these passages, and could recount things to various and wittily-pleafant, which far exceeded any thing the could fay, the defired to be excused from any further recital ; I told her I mil needs however, hear what the could further fay, for all the had hitherto faid was various from what I his related to her; and Mittress Mary likewise joyne with me in this request, telling her that the must need proceed in her Narative, for the longed to hear whit war the end of the Hoft, and Hoftelt, and how he la them and same to London, and what elfe had hapad toher till the first of their Acquaintance. Truly me plyed Mriftrels Dorothy, I shall give you serisfaction to all thefe particulars; but mothinks you were bu thort in your Narrative and minht have enlared, all fince you did as I belive, omit many passages of you Life that were confiderable, I pray let us heat font aç.

4 nct

ald

ci

ul

1 red

ed; ha

di

iel

100

int nd

of them from you. I must confes, said Mistrels Mary, that in the recital I made you of my actions, I'onv recounted to you those things which did pertain to my own flory, as thinking it impertment to relate any others ; but it I had thought it pleasant, I could likewise have told you of some such Robberies and Cheates, as some of my acquaintance were eng g'd in. ich if his not too lare to do it now, faid I to her , and feeing Mistress Dorothy is not yet pleased to continue th: her flory, I therefore pray you to let us know fome of your experiences in this nature. I fhall not deny your request, replyed Miffrels Mary, and therefore ther fome little paule to recollect her felf of what the

had to fay, the thus began.

I must confess that I had several of my Customers whileft I live publickly at London, who although they come to me full, return'd empty, and then accessity out them upon unlawful courses, and when they could not live of themselves, then they lived by thirking upon others; this was their firft ftep, and when this would not do, and they began to be angry and discoutented that they could not wear money in their peckets, then they fell to gameing, and all the Cheats of that Mystery were put in practice; when that course left them, the next was to pick pockets, Acal Cloaks, and a hundred such kinde of shirking tricks, till from one degree to another they came to the high ped, and from thence to the Goal, and fo to the Gibbet; many Ifay, of my acquaintance did run through all thefe Courles, and beginning as they fay, with a pin, proceeded to a point, and fo to a biggar thing, till the tope held them ; but I alwayes made it my bofinels to leave them off when they began thefe Courfes. Among others that came to me. I had a Country Gentleman who deligning to deal honeftly with a thop-keeper, had occasion good diamond, and I will fel it you for twenty por

6

6

10 th bu

fe

Alic

IM

70

PET of

Jui

and

This the Goldfwith faid, supposing that the Countreyman who came to fell, had no skill, inclination, nor in it in money to buy ; but the Countrey-man believing that the Goldsmith onely said thus, thinking to draw him onite part from his own Ring the more eafily, and by that means chear him, refolv'd if he could, to be too fe. wife for the Goldimith, weerefore taking both the of, Rings into his hands as to compare them together, he be thus faid : I am fore mine is a right Diamond, and 10 fois mine, reply'd the Goldsmith ; and faid the Countrey-man, frall I have it for twenty pounds? Yes, refay bly'd the Goldsmith : but faid he, I suppose you come 14 tofel, and not to buy , and fince you fhall fee I will ITT . be a good Customer, I will give you fifteen pounds for vones. Nay reply'd the Countrey-man, fince I have -사 hed my choice to by or fell, I will never refuse a good Penny-worth, as I think this is therefore Mafter Gold-mith, I will keep my own and give you money for yours: Where is it? faid the Goldfraith haftily, and endeavouring then to feize on his Ring; Hold a blow there, faid the Countrey-man, here's your money, but the Ring I will keep. The Goldsmith seeing himfelf caught, flustered and flounced like a mad man, and the Countrey-man pulling out a little Purfe, told down rk twenty Pieces of Gold, &ciaid, Here Shop-keeper, here's 1,4 your money ; but I hope you will allow me eighteen since a peicee in exchange for my Gold. Tell not me Mexchange, but give me my Ring, faid the Goldsmith: din mine, faidthe Countrey-man, for I have bought is and paid for it, and have witness of my Bargain, All this would not ferve the Goldsmith's turn, but be curs'd d'imore that the Countrey-man came to cheat him, & his ring he would have ; & at the noise several people ame about his Shop, but he was so perplexed that he could not tell his Tale, and the Countrey-Gentleman

Part, heard; at length a Conttable came, and although the Goldsmith knew not to what purpose, yet before a Juftice he would go : the Country-man was content, and therefore tegether they went; when they came there, the Goldfmith who was the plantiff , began his Tale, and faid, that the Country-man had taken a Diamond ring from him worth one hundred pounds; and would give him but twenty pounds for it, have a care what you fay, reply'd the Country-man; for if you charge me with taking a ring from you, I suppose that is ficaling; and if you fay to, I thall vex you farther than I have done, and than he told the lastice the whole ftory as I have related, which was then a very plain cafe & for proof of the ma ter, the Country Ge tle-man's man was witness. The Goldfmith hearing this, alleadged, that he believed the Country Gentle man and his man were both Impostors and Cheati; to this the Country-man reply'd as before, thathe were best bave a care he did not make his case worle and bring on old house on his head by flandering of him, for it was well known that he was a Gentle-min of three hundred pounds per Annum, and liv'd at's place he nam'd but twenty miles from London and that he being defirous to fell a ring, came to his shops that purpose, but he would have cheated him; but it prov'd he only made a rod for his own breech, and what he intended to him, was fallen upon himielf: thus did the Country Gentleman make good his dis course, and the Justice seeing there was no injustice done, difmils'd them ; but order'd that his Neighbon the Goldimith Mould have the twenty prices of Gold for twenty pounds, though they were worth mere it exchange ; and this was all the fatisfaction he had

th

rin

w

G

N foi

to fhi

lat

pli [2

to ¢n

th

Ŵ:

th

th

Br bu

20

TR R

ign

6 d

·fm

to

th

The Country Gentleman went prefently to a Citizen, in acquaintance of his, to whom he deliver'd the ring he had fo purchased, desiring him to sell it for him which he did; for being known to be a Citizen, the Goldlmith that bought it offered him at the first word Ninety five pounds for it, and in the end gave him forty faillings more, with which money he returned to the Countrey man, and he giving him the forty faillings for his pains, return d with the reft to me, relating all the matter as it had poffed. I was as much pleas'd as he, because I question'd not but I should partake with him, and fo I did; for he gave me rea pound toby me a Gown; and thus was our Goldsmith well enough ferv'd. And it was not long after, before another Goldim th had a confiderable lofs, and thus it W25-

Amongst the other Gustomers that came to me, there was a Geatleman, a Blade of fortune, who although he was of a good Family, yet being a younger Brother, had but little belides his wits to live upon; but as he was a Gentlemen, fo kept himfelf in a Garb according to his Quality, and had a foor boy in a Livery to attend him : this boy was a notable young Rogue, and had affirted his Master in many an explore, ind was privy to most of his fecrets : this yourg man (continued Mifrels Mary) coming to vibt me, and wefalling into discourtes of wir, I related to him the Myentare of the Countrey Gentleman with the Goldmith the was much pleafed with the relation, and toldimente Goldimith was well enough ferved, and that above all trades, he had a greater picque or anger mainfithem, than any; for (faid he) it grives me to the Heart to walk through Cheapfide, or Lombardfree with little or no moneyes in my pockand fee to much jingling of money in their Shops and

t

.

.

10

10

d

1 ict

di

and fo great a quantity of Jacobus'es and other Gold's cither lying in their Glass-cases, or telling on the M Compters, and methinks when I see it my fingers it is Gentleman thould flarve they would not part free in any without very good Security; but (faid he) I have now thought upon a way how to get fome of the in without much hazard; and I being desirous to know the told me, thus : my bey and I will walk along to he Sirrah, said he to the boy, when I make a small do fit do you go into the Goldsmiths Shop where you had the fee them telling of money; and laying your hand up har a heap, catch up a handful, but so soon as you has no taken it up, let it fall down again and leave it who wh you had it, and come after me and leave the reft to my ice management; it e boy promis'd to do as he was d recled : but, faid I, what advantage can you make by the your boys handling of money and leaving it belin ing him? as for that, faid he, I question not before I but be, done I thall make a good bufinefe of it, and thereus in he left me, and went immediatly to put this his projet that in execution; he returned that evening and told med hear was well yer, and it would be better in time : Idefin the to know his meaning, whereupon he told me, that " le) cording to his appointment the boy went into the Goldsmiths shop, took up a handful of month ind laid it all down again and ran away to him, that too was no soones come to him, but the Goldson irreduced in the servants were at his heels, that he looking to hook and seeing them, ask'd what the matter was the replye'd, his boy had stollen some money the asked the knew it was false, they said it was true and she should go back with them to their Masteralies him was content, and so was the Master, when coming the the Shop, the Goldsmith himself said that that the the were his , had robb'd him. The Boy and his Mefter both denyed it, and they fell to hot words, ich that the Goldmith call'd me (faid the Gentlefean) Shirking Fellow, and that he would have me the in to Newgate for robbing him : for if the boy did to men) told him that he did abuse me, and that in con-my thesion must, and should pay for it : but first I defired me inknow with what Sum they charged the boy; they in sid they knew nor, but that he had taken money from he heap which they were telling of, which heap was a hundred pounds; hearing them fay thus, I told them I would fray the telling of it, and then they might judge who had the abule: they were content with it, and icordingly went to telling : half an hour had dispatchby their money right to a farthing. The Goldsmith feeing this, asked my pardon for the affront : for, faid his practing; and that I was a Person of that quality that would not put up the affiont, and that he must hear further from me; he seeing me so hor, was as the Berick as I, and so we parted, and thus far (said to be) have proceeded. But all this while (said I) I do to see where is your gain: that is to come, said he, to the where is your gain that is to come, laid he, indio it was, and did come in, and that considerably to; for the next day he cauled the Goldsmith to be irrefted in an action of Defamation, and the Sergeant who arrefted him being well fee'd by the Gentleman told the Goldsmith that he were best to compound the matter, for the Gentleman was a Person of the matter , for the Gentleman was a Perfon of Reality, and would not put it up, but make the Goldsmith being desirous of quiet harkned to his tomsel, and agreed to give 101. but that would not

Part, 3

G

We

en

10

WZ

thr

wh

me,

IRG

my lo

unc

Wa

forc

ing

tole

they put :

thin

Clo

Inc

and ther

whe

fire

be taken , but twenty pounds was given to the Genteman, and fo the bufinels was made up for the prefent. Our Gentleman who had fome of the Gold. miths money, was refolv'd to have more, or venture hard for it , wherefore having again given inftructions tol is Boy what to do, ho made feveral Journey to the Goldimiths, walking by his door to watch a opportunity, at length he found on ; for he feeing the Servants telling of a confiderable quantity of Gold; he gave the lign to his Boy, who prefently went and clapping his hand on the heap, took up and brought away a full handful, and coming to his Mafie gave it him , neither did the Boy make fuch haft out of the Shop, but that he could hear a stranger who Was in the Shop receiving money, say to the Approp tice, why do you not flop the Boy ? no, faid the Ap prentice, I do not mean it, I know him well enough my Mafter paid Sauce lately for ftepping him; fo they continued telling their money, which la fure did not fall out fo right as formerly ; for the evening the Master and Boy both came to my loging, and not only told me how they had fped, but faw the effects of their enterprize ; for this your reque had brought off with him between fortym fifty brave yellow peices ; we all three rejoyced our good fortune, for I was concerned, having fix pelces of it given to me, I then told the Gentlem that he had runs very great hazard, and that I didm Shink he had practis'd thefe tricks ; no truly, reply He, this is the first I ever did in England, but I have be abford in Prance and other Countreys, where I m requainted with rare ingenious fellows at thefe tid and they had notable inventions to get moneys ! Temetimes / would put in as & Party with them, from them it was that I learned this confidence! Apl a 20十二九日

men defired him to relate to me fome of his practices inthole Countryes, he foon granted my request, and began as followeth.

I had not been long in Paris' but I had fome tricks pumpon me ; the first was this, I endeavoured to ap. per brave, made a rich Sare and Cloak, and with this fruited about the ffreets to thew my felf, hoping and meeting that fome French Madam or other would fill in love with me, but instead of that, some of these Gentlemen Divers fell in love with my Clock, and were refolved to have it, wherefore they watched me. one evening and as it growing late I was going home is my Quarters paffing through a blind Lane where was nothing but back doors of Gentlemens fables; three fellows feized on me, ene dives into my pockets, whence he fish'd out all the little money I had about me, which amounted to above thirty fillings English, mother draws his knife and cuts the Neck-button of my Cloak, and the third takes of my hat; I had not lot all my fpirits, fo that I told them they did very uncivily by me to take away my hat and leave me to walk without one; they begun to fwear at me and forc'd me to entreat for my hat, and withal confidering that the loss of my Cloak would spoil my Suit, I told them that I hoped as they were Gentlemen, fo they would hear reason, and offered if they would put any price upon the Cloak I would redeem it; they thinking money would do them more good than the Clock, told me that if I would give them five pound; I hould have it : the Cloak Rood me in ten pounds, and therefore I was refolved to give them five pounds, therefore I defired them to name the place and time when I should meet them with the money; they any frered me the next evening, about that rime, and in Aplace there adiovning in the fireet; but they told me

W

150

de

mo

Lo

fel

of

the wh

nie

WA

that if I thought by that appointment to bring any with me to catch them, that then they would mil chief me , I promis'd them that I would not, and fe we departed, but withal they were fo civil as to girt me my Hat along with me; I went home to my Lodg. ing, and though I was vexed at my misfortune, yet! was forced to reft with patience till the next evening when putting the promis'd money in my pocket, went at the time to the place appointed; I had not flaid then long but I heard the neife of a Coach, and on a fudden two men came out at the boot, and feifing on me muffled me in one of their Cloaks and put me into the Couch; this done, the Coach-man did drive on apace, and I was in but bad taking to think what a cafe I will in, and did verily believe that those fellows who had the last night taken my money and Cloak from me, had now a Defign upon my life, and therefore wert come themselves, or had sent some of their Company ons to rob and kill me, I had not continued long it thefe thoughts but the coach stopt, and I was taken of of it, and being carried into a Court yard, was me muffled, and led into a great Hall, where I was met by those three who had the night before Dif-cloak'd me; they told I was wel-come, and that what had been done to me that evening was onely to prevent that being out-wirted and discovered by me, and with as I was a firanger, to treat and entertain me among them; I hearing that it was no worfe Pluck'd up at Spirits and answer'd them, that I was refolv'd tok in every thing as good as my word, and therefore cas alone to the place appointed, and had brought money with me ; they then lead me through the into an adjoyning Wardrobe which was full Cloaks, Gown, Hatts, Swords, and all fuch of Habiliments, and among the reft I faw my Class wherefe

rt

k

5 2 2

" 四 以上 的 可关 》 可国 多 一 。

differe I told out the money and took my Cloak, tel was welcomed by feveral of the Gang and by had women amongst them, who all looked on with a cheerful countenance, & treated me very This they al defired of me that if I intended their hendship and my own fafety, Imust not take any noit of them before any company, or if I met them broid : I promis'd to perform this Injunction, and owe went to Supper, after that to dancing, and fpent free or four hours in very pleafant manner, and then citial of them departing I thought it was time for me do fo two, bur I believed it would be convenient to it leave before I went ; wherefore I told those whom best knew, that I had amind if they pleas'd, to go home; they told me that I might do fo, but it must be it the fame manner as I came ; I confented to it, and two of them going into the Coach with me, hid my fice for a fort fpace, and then let me fee ; bit / quickperceived that I had gone through feveral By-lanes and paffager, and at length came to the place where I had been taken up, and there they fet me down, and the Coachman whirling about left me in a moment , I therefore went the ready way home to my Lorging, where I went to bed and confulted with my felfabout this Adventure, not having known or heard of the like; but it was not many days before I was orgaged in another which was as strange as the former. Although I was in a ftrange Countrey, yet I had fome acquaintance whom I vifited fome thets: One day being folitary a walking, I met with one of these of my acquaintance, he saluted we very courteoufly, and told me he supposed I was minded to break off the friendfhip we had latecontracted because I had been fo great aftranger at

0.4

Paet 3

ı

i

1

d

ti

his house ; I replyed, that I inten led fuddenly to gin him a vifit : I pray then, Sir, faid he, let it be to morrow, the fooner the better, for I have a great defire to converse with you; and Sir, faid he, il you have any friend bring him with you, and for vour fake he shall be as welcome as your felf: I replyed, it was very likely that I should will upon him, and thus we parted : I remember fine that about the time I met this friend, I was overraken by a gentile fellow, who had followed me like my shaddow, and during the time of this converse he waited as I did, and now I being pur red from my friend, and having walked a little fafter than before, I had dropt my Gentleman who fauntred behind. The next day about the time the mortals wher their Knives on Thresholds, and Shootfoles, I prepared to go to dinner to my friends, and again by the way I was accosted by this gentile fellow, who had the day before followed me, and now he did fo again; and when I came to my friends house and entred, there he did so too, and with as much confidence as if he had been of great acquaintance with the Inviter ; he fate down among other Guefts that were there, Dinner was foonafter brought in and there being serveal Guels much victuals, and much variety was fevred at the Table, my ffrange Gentleman did eat as heartily and talk as boldly as any there, and I thought him to be one of the Inviters acquaintance, and he supposed he was my friend which I had brought with me; but he proved to be very no good friend to the man of the house, for waiting his opporte nity he went to the Cupboards head which flood in a convenient place, and clapping a peice of plate worth ten pounds under his Cloak, he walked of incognill

to

CL

for

f j nce

erme kin

u.

tle

he

igi

-30

ind

tile

ad

oy ind eat ing af-

nd

of the city

incognito, I foon after miffed him, and my friend miffed my friend as he told me, but it was not much longer e're the Plate was m ffing, and although private fearch was made, yet it was not found, and our friend being gone, the Inviter miffing none of the Guels but him a ked me for him, but when I told him he was no friend nor acquaintance of mine, he foon knew which way his Place went. Thus (laid he) he thinking him to be my friend, and I thinking him to be his, this fellow had the conveniency of doing this injury ; but, continued he. I from under food that it was a ufual matter to play fuch pranks and that more confiderable, and that withal a very bold confidence unufual with other Nations, and upon lecond thoughts I remember I had feen this febow among these who had my Cloak, but it was too late now to temember it, and it had been unfafe then to have taken any notice of him, remembring the Charge had been giren me.

CHAP.

Laid

CHAP. XIX.

Two notorious Roques robb'd a Church by the help of the Ergers habits they had marther'd; afterwards they robb'd a Mirobant of Silks; Plate, &c. By a notable first agent they laid for the purpose in an Inn next adjacent, they ransack'd a Linnen drapers Shop in the might by conveying a boy into it being enclos'd within a supposed Bayl of Goods, who proved the Key is let shert in to perfect their design; by counterfeiting a Gentlemans key; they stole from bins six bundred Crowns, and mardering him. Stad his face that his might not be known; but were not withstanding by a miraculous providence discovered and extented, who being penistent at their death, confess many notorious villanies. A notable trick a Gentleman puts upone Pick pocket.

Thus (continued Mikress Mary) did this Gentleman finish his two stories of the Cloak, and the peice of Plate I I told him I wondered at the boldness of those French men, and that they exceeded our Countrey men in confidence; yes, (faid he) if you knew so much as I, you would have reason to say so for it is a usual thing for them to seize Gentlemen is they can light upon them in any convenient place: a carry them some miles out of the Town, and make them pay droney for a ransom, neither dare they contradict it lest worse befal them, and they are bloodly minded, for if they cannot get money, they will do any murder. not far from Paris, continued he, twist these Rogues had been hunting for Prey, and the

Part could were der have der h

mile they could not meet with any purchase, they were refolved rather than fail to commit fome murder; the next that met them were two Fryers, thefe hiving no money to redeem their lives they difpatchdinto the other world, and having fo done, they ftript hem; and put on their Fryers weeds , being thus hahited they march'd further into the Country, and sming late to a Countrey-town, went to the Parfor house, who entertained them; as they came in lite, to they went out early, pretending necessary occations, and the Parlon not being up nor willing to tile to foon, they defired the Key of the Church (which was adjoyning to the house) that they might to in to do their devotions before they went? the Key was accordingly delivered, and they went in but inflead of faying their prayers, they made a prey of what they met with, the filver Chalices, and all the Ornaments of the Church they took with them, and lo went on their wayes to do more milcheif, but not having the conveniency to execute their defigns in the habit they were in, they therefore went to the place where they had hid their own, and there putting them, they march'd on to Paris, where they walked about the City to cipy what mischeif might be done; being now both weary, hungry, and thirfty, they went into adrinking boule, which being full of Guels below, they were conducted up one pair of flairs, and there they had both victualsand drink fuch as they defired, when their bellies were full, their eyes did wander about the Room, to fee if they might elpy any thing to make a purchase of , but although they could fee nothing in that room, yet they could difcern that in the house opposite to them, there was much rich Goods , fine Silks; and Sarrins ; their fingers itch'd to be handling of them, but at present they knew

Part. 3 IBT but at present they knew not how, however resolving DI the

dy

61 ho

in

to

W

the 200

the

(iF 10 chi

Po

ho

La

tha

fide

del

Me

but

Wi

the pla

a p

the

Wh

end

Par

the

the

. that they would attempt it, but not finding any means how at prefent to do it, they therefore were refolved to try if they could take up their Quarters at the house they were drinking in, and then they did not question but they should in thort time find out fone means to execute their Delign, having taken this refolution, they therefore call'd, for more drink, and their Landlords company, and being frolick, ander penfire, that they might be accounted good Guells. they asked of the Landlord whether they might not have a Lodging there? he believing it would be to his profit, told them they might, but they must lodge one pair of Stairs higher; they were well enough comen with that, and therefore drank on till it was night and then to bed they went; and laid their plot how to rob this Merchants house, which they did in few days after : In order to which Defign of theirs, they went out and purchased Ropes, and a Pully, and fe ing a large Cheft to be folder the fecond hand, the likewife bought that, and puting in their Ropes in Pully, and a great quantity of Riggs and stones, in fech like Trash, that it might feem heavy, they called ic to be carried to their Lodging: Their Hoft feeing I large a Cheft, and so heavy, did believe that his Guens were rich, and that a confiderab'e quantity Treafure was therein enclosed, and therefore gave then a greater respect than formerly. They every day when they went out carried out part of the Rubb which they had bestowed in the Cheft, so that in hot time it was empey, o'at leaft, nothing but the Roje and Pully was in it : They onely now waited for aco venient opportunity to execute their defign, which the confidered muft be done when both the houses, 25 W that where they lodged, as the Merchants houle the

intende

$,

İ

intended to rob, were empry; and no day was fo likely to leave them fo; as a Sunday; wherefore that they might have the better pretence for flaying at home, they both pretended fome indisposition in their bodyes, for which they faid they thought it convenient to take Phylick, they had been lo good Guells to the house, that the Hoft was willing to accommoda ethem in any thing ; however, when he and his Family went to Church, they lock'd the Street door : No tooner was that house clear, but they were resolved to attempt the other, and knowing that the Master and Mistrels, and most, if not all the Family, was likewise gone out, they were resolved to kill the rest, if they found any lingle person that should oppose them : They intended to make their way into the house by going down the chimny, and therefore they had provided Ropes and a Pully, and there was no great difficulty to get to the house top, for they ascended to the Garret of their Landlords house, got out of the window to the top of that, and the other house joyning to that, to the fireet Me, they foon got to the Chimny they intended to delcend. The house where they ledged, and this Merchants house Were joyned to gether ir the Front, but backwards there was an Ally of about fix foot wide that seperated them, and a cross this Ally it was that they fuft faw the Room wherein the Silks were placed , they being gotten to the Chimry's top, laid spiece of Timber aerois, and faftening th ir Pully to that, and putting their Rope in the Pully, the one who was to de cend the Chimey, took hold of one end of the Rope ; and his companion holding another pur of the Rope, by degrees he was let down into the Room he defired : It was two pair of flairs below the Garret, and in regard the Silk might be foild and foil'dif they were drawn up the chimny, they did not LEKE

Part & Pr on the house rop, went into their lodging the fame the way he same up, and going down into the Chamber at that was even with, and oppoint to that where his wi Companion was, he opened a Casement, and his Com panion doing the like, they could without much diff. in culty reach to one another, and fo in fhort timethe pit richest, and best of the Merchants Silk was convered the into their 2 mers. Our Thieves feeing they hal per gained this prize with fo little danger and difficulty, all were refolved to get more if they could , and there dis fore he that was in the house ransac'k it all over, and for finding a confiderable quantity of Plate, and money it he likewite conveyed it to his Companion; and now bet having done all this, he went into the Shop, intended has to leave the fireet door open, that the Merchant who to he came home might suppose that the thieves who his robb'd him did come in that ways, but the Areet dot to was double lock'd, and therefore it could not be open a ed, wherefore he undid the bolts of one of the Shap not windows, and leaving it lookely open, he went up see fel and telling his Companion what he had done, and the hol to the house top, and as he had assisted in letting his wa down the Chimny, fo to help to draw him up, white the other did accordingly. There was one length came into their minds, that although the Shop wit dew was opened, and the Merchant might reasonabl had come in that way, yet they were very fenfilt, tab that with descending and ascending the Ching in they had thrown down much foot, which migh bar capie a jealoufie, that they who robb'd the hou till might come in that way, and fo they might bed aid covered; wherefore to prevent all fuch fufpin I

17

ed :

hid par we smuch as they could, they tumbled down two or the which might be supposed to be blown down by the his wind; and having thus done they retired to, their Om Courters, disposing all their Silks, Money, and Place if mio their Cheft, and that there might be the lefs fufthe pition of them, the Landlord foon returning, one of vel them pretending to be very ill, and the other very dillihal gent in attending his Companion; their Landlerd furny, sifeed them with firong waters, and fuch other cordials as were at hand; and the Merchant coming home found his Shop window open, and his house robb'd, being fo apparant as he thought that that the Robhe toold do, was, to have all suspicious places search'd, his neighbours house escaped, being too near home to to be suspected the host onely thinking he had escaped a danger being fo near, and telling them that it was sor good to leave a house empty, and although all his solks went with him to Church, yet he had lest two lonest Guests in his house, and belides they were lockmonest Suests in his house, and belides they were lockthin fast enough. Thus, continued the Gentleman, was this Robbery committed, and they who were guility went away unsuspected. The next day they conveythe part of their purchase away to a place where they hid all their prizes, and by degrees getting the most part away, they continued not long in those Quarters, but made another Remove. These fellows were notable cunning Rascals, and had so many ways to bring in Purchases, that they gathered much goods rogether, but covetous of more still attempted further Projects, till in the end they were caught and deservedly punished. till in the end they were caught and defervedly pay nifeed.

The next Project they had (faid the Gentleman)

212 The English Rogue; And Pan and Was this, they had a boy who oftentimes served and affired them in their underraking, and he was non very uleful ; for one day intending to fteal, they pre the tended to buy some Linnen cloath; and a conceit co hay ming into their heads, they did buy some considerable by quantity; they left it at the Deapers where the bought it, paying a small matter of money in part at the period of away, and pay the rest of my money: the next day that they came and brought a Porter with them loader list with a Bayl made up, as they said, of Woollen-close feet which they faid they had bought, and intending to fend di that, and what they had bought of him into the Count to trey, the Carrier was gone before they came, to therefore they could not fend away either till the net and day; when, they faid, another Carrier was to gon the place they intended to fend to; and therefore the delired the Shop Seeper to let them leave that Baylar and Cloth in his Shop till the next day, when they in tended to fetch them both. They having been Gulls all mers to the Shop, he did not refuse them so small there courtefie, but permitted them to fer it in a convenie foci place in the Shop; but his entertaining of that Bar Ha of Cloth, was almost as fataite him as the Trojane se tertainment of the wooden-horfe fer at midnight wie pla the Draper was afleep, these Rogues were wakely for and having conveyed this Reguish Boy I told you with into this Bayl, which they pretended was Cloth, for taking out his Knif cut his way through, so that a the came out of the Bayl, and not finding the Key of the Shap door, he opened the Shop-windows and did to in his two Mafters, who waited there for that putpet wh feen by day-light where the finest Cloth was plan they now removed it , and breaking open a Del wherein Grein they had observed the Draper did put his mos they there found four hundred French Crowns fo using that money, and as much of the finest Cloth as bey sould carry, they march'dest; neither did the boy say behinde, but leaving an empry Bayl covered with Canvas, and fluff'd round about with Cotton, he I do loading himfelf, went with his mafters, the fame Mile to the reft. The next morning the Draper, and king the hole cut in the Bayl, they quickly discovermonteneed with his loss, for net withstanding all his measures, he could not for the present hear of his Costomers, who indeed were safe enough in their Lariers. These Rogues who now had money e-singh, as themselves in a gentle habit, and lept com-any with the best, but still they waited to do all the dishief they could, and to that end they ingratiated them? I es into the company of Countrey-Gen lemen, isch as were best acquainted with the Customs and Himors of the Town; many they met with, and few fraped them, but that they either got them in to fome other prize of them : Among others they met with a young Country-Gentleman, who had been unformate enough already, for he having had a quarrel the shout a mistress, and fighting with his Rival, had the Fortune, or Misfortune rather, took Il him Divine tengesnee seldom misses to pursue, and overtake those tengesnee seldom misses to pursue, and overtake those the ere guilty of murther , & although thele kind of methers, which are the most excusable, being as they mmthem,fairly done pals rather for pieces of gallantry than otherwife ; yet fome great misfortune always attends them, as I have observ,d by several Precedent but more especially by this Gentlemans misfortune, for no sooner had he made his Enemy to fall in the place where they had fought, but he was forc'd toff away for his own fafety, doubting elfe he might fall to the hands of Justice; he therefore with all free setired to a place, fix miles from thence, where he wil fought, to a friends house, and not thinking himle fafe, being there provided with money enoughter long journey, he travelled on towards Paris, being place whole large Circuit, and number of inhabitant in raight hide him from all pursuers; in his way thinks he was mer by Thieves, who attempted to rob him but they being but two and he valliant enough, as a thought to oppose them, drew, and defended himself he here likewise had the fortune to cause one of the to drop down by him, which the other feeing, ha but not so far but that he soon returned with the this, and doubting that now ne incult believe the robb'd of what he had, but also believe to revenge their fellow it this, and doubting that now he should not one that they would kill him to revenge their fellow it therefore takes one Purse of money and threwing to a Hedge near him, hopeing that if he did elcapt, might have that for a referve. By this time the thirm were come up to him, and all drew upon him, t if knowing that odds did overcome Hercules and mi do him) therefore told them, that if it were his me sthey wanted, he would deliver it to them; althou they were very angry for the loss of their Company on, yet it being money that they came for, they respect of that ; he giving them another Purfe of ney which he had about him; but in regard to had fuffered fo great a lele as the death of one

医育士 69 5年3

mitte and the state of the stat

the Gentlemen, and taking away their Companion with them, they departed. He lay not long there but was the miyd, and reliev'd by fome Paffengers, who furniffiof dhim with an old Coar, and he taking up his Purfe ofmoney, where he had laid it, went along with them to the next Town; there he furnished himself with Clouths, and fo travell'd en towards Paris ; but before he came thither, he was again met with by Thieves. who then robb'd him of all his money , fo that when keme into the City he was in a fad condition, being a Stranger, moneylefs, and friendlefs; however thele laft Thieves having been fo civil as to leave him his Clouths, he rook a lodging in a convenient place of the Town, and prefently lent away to his frinds, acquainting them with his misfortunes, and defiring them to fend him more money : Although it was a great way he had to fend, yet in a little time he receivdan antwer according to his expectations, and although till then he was forc'd to run on the Score, and keep houle, yet now he honeftly paid his Hoft, and puing himself in a very good Garb, he now went a broad, &light into the company of our two thieville Rogues who dealt Reguishly with him for perceiving him to be a firanger, they took him up, and became his . companions; and that they might be able to do him the more mifchief, they fo far ingratiated themfelves into hiscompany, as to take a lodging where he lay, and then finding that he was prety well turnished with moneys, they tryed feveral ways to ger it from him, they attempted him to gameing, but he was not guilit of that hazardous vanity, and would not play : ecarried but little money in his pocker, but he the seft in bh Trunk which was alfo lock'd up in

R 2

to

ca

te

pt -

ed

in

th

21

th th

O

-

-4

his Chamber; and the Lanclord of the house being were refolved to be Makers of ir by one means or ther, but they delayed it a while longer by an occasion a that fell out; he had written for more moneys, is in and thereupon a Letter came one day to his hand which acquainted him, that within fourteen days & Bight receive fix hundred Crowns of a Merchanta in Paris, to whom a Bill of Exchange was directed for this Letter he dropt by accident, and one of the Rogues met with and read it, but knowing their ly would advantage him nothing to keep it, he foon and it to the owner. He acquainted his Companion will be the News, and how he did believe that the Genile & man would, when he received that money, brings of home to his Lodging, wherefore they would flay in til that time & then they would rob him of it all the resolution they both continued in, and that he might mot distrust them in any particular, they kepthis the company very much, seldem permitting him to keep in any other company ; they allo carried him abroal with them to feveral of their friends, who treated lin very well for their fakes : In the mean time, the being ofren with him in his Chamber, one of the sook the Key out of his Chamber-door, and making an impression of it upon Wax, put it in there again this Companion keeping our Gentleman companys the mean time: The fourteen days being come,k went, and received his money, and bringing it her lock'd it up in his Trunk , And now being ferithe with money, he was refolv'd to fit himfelf wi Clothes, and proceed on his intended Journey he was prevented ; as I shall prefently rell you, there two Rognes having now got the key offe Chanks chamber-door made, and having tryed it, were refolv'd the adelsy no longer, but catch the Birds before they to mere flown, as they would be in few days, if they did fin me prevent it; for this cause they invited him one is maing to go out with them to Supper, he diftrufting with them, where was better cheer than Company, for all the Entertainers were as very Rogues as thefe two, however they treated him very will willy, and after supper fell to drinking he being defrom to return to his lodging, requested his companihet on to be going, but they knowing it was yet too earand so long as he had their companies, they told him to would be safe enough . he formation flay, was content, and fo they drank on till about eleven of the clock at night; and then, he nor being willing gi. to flay longer, they sgreed to go with him ; and to the end then might not be ftop'd by any Watch, they agreed to go a back-way, which was fomewher about this they precended was the reason of their going that way, but it was indeed, that those who were his entertainers, and who were to affift them in their Enterprize might by going the nearest way, meet them; which accordingly they did, for at the place appointed by all, but our Gentleman, they met, and pretending themselves drunk, jostell'd one another fo, that their fwords were foon drawn, and they Maulted one another, our Gentleman feeing that thole who met them were but four, and he and his Company were three, did not question but he might have the better on it, oe at least defend himself, and therefore being perfectly valiant, he so prosecuted one of the two who affaulted him that he laid him ar his feet ; therest thinking that those two who assaulted him would have performed their Enterprize well enough

PERM 91

i

h

it

to

h

b

kı

S

T

P

el

h ŧ

0 6

0

-

1

2

had hitherto onely plaid with one another, in clashing of their fwords, but now feeing one of their Companions fall, and doubting more mischief, they all four, a well those whom he thought were his friends, as their in whom he knew to be his Affaylants, left their jet and fell all upon him in earnest, and he being thus over match'd, was foon kill'd. The Rogues who were let alive, feeing him, and one of the Companions ded knew not what refolution to take, but after a fon confultation, they resolved to carry off their ded Companion, and leave the other there ; but thetm who were his Companions, fearing he might ke known before he had finished their Project, and they might be prevented; they therefore drew their Knive. and like bloody Butchers fley'd all the skin from the poor Gentlemans face; and fo taking the Key of his Trunk out of his pocket, and all his Letters, that they might leave nothing about him to cause him to known they and their Companions parted : the twe Rogues went home to their Lodging , where when they were let in, they were asked where the Gentle man their Companion was? they reply'd, they let him prefently after they went out , and this answer fere'd for the present : they then went into their om Chamber, but foon after with their falle Key they ge into his, ane opening his Trunk they took out all his money, and lock'd it up in a Trunk in their om Chamber , and this being done, they went to Bel: The next morning they went out, and carried the mo ney with them to the place where all their other Trefure lay; returningagain, intended to get away d their other things that were of any value, in the Trunk ; purpofing to be gone, and leave that behind bem, for they knew it would cause suspicion if the emoy'd Tounk and all, fo fuddenly ; in their remon

R

eft

tt

0

d

aftheir money, they had carelefsly left their counterfet-key of the Gentlemans Chamber-door in their Chamber-window, wherefore the Landlord coming 五年序录 是界書 in there, and feeing a Key, which although it was new ver he believedhe had feen it, or one like it ; he therefore comparing fome other Keys with that, found that it was like the Key of the Gentlemans Chamber-door. he therefore try'd it, and found that it would open it as well as the other : he was in fome kind of amaze d to think of this, and the Gentleman not coming home, he began to suspect that all was not well : About noon k he went in again into the Genilemans Chamber, and knowing that he had lately received a confiderable 47 8, Sum of money, which he believ'd he had put in hit Trunk, he therefore lifted up the Trunk in his hand to poize it, and feel if it were heavy , but it was light enough ; they having already taken out all the money, he having fet it down again; faw lying by it a pocter-handkercheif, which, he being now grown curje ous, dilligently looked for the Marks of it, which he . found not to be marked with the two Letters of the Gentlemans name, but two others, which were the name of one of the others : Thefe thingsraifed further 10 scruples in his minde, wherfore he was resolv'd to obferve his two Guefts with amore curious eye; and one of of them foon after returning, he watch'd him, and faw that he went to his Trank, and made up a ŀ Bundle which he carried out , no fooner was he gone out, but he heard the report which had gone about the Town all that day ; that a Gentleman in fuch a place was barbaroufly murthered , and was fo much a Stranger that no body knew him; the Landlord hearing this, his heart leap'd and he was in a wery great perplexity, fo that he could hardly fland on is legge; fo foon as he was come to himfelf he took a Neighbour R 4

The English Rogue : And Cart 4 Neighbone with him, and went to the place where the Gentleman lay murthered : It was to no purpofeta thing to know him by his face, for that was quite dis figured , his skin being fley'd off , but alchough his Cloathes were bloody, yet he could by them know that it was his Gueft, who lay there marthered; he then told his Neighbour what were his thoughts, and withal, that he believ'd he knew the Murderers, and thereupon having acquainted him with all his Doubts and Jealousies of his two other Guests ; he and his Neighbour both were of the oppinion that they had hand in this Murther, and therefore they hale ed home to fee what might be further discovered . Toft as they came in, one of the two went out with a bundle under his arm, which the Landlord feeing, he caused one to follow him, and dilligently to observe all he He that was fen was fo careful, that he food after returned, and told him, that certainly there was fome matter of great confequence between his two Guefts, and three others, who were dividing, and teling of moneys, and he heard one of the two fay; that now all was well, for he had brought off every thing, and intended to go no more; where are they? faid the Landlord: they are at fuch a house, naming it , said the Messenger ; but I followed your Guest to another place ; firft, where he left the partel he carried out, and waiting tome time, he came out of that houle, which was a private house; and went to the other, which was a Victualing-house; I, said he, following him thither, was permitted to go in there, as he did, to drink, he went to his Companions, and I tooks Room pext adjoyning; where I heard, faid he, what I have told you, and feveral other discourses, which makes me think, that thefe perfons have lately been upon fome Delign; but what, I cannot at prefent ime fai

the

to be

WI

L

COS

-

(1

Wi

rai

trv

m

hit

the

hi

m

1

de

the pe

th thi

fer

for

th

E

gu

he

pl:

W

gine,

ts

d

ft.

. 4

15

0

1

11 0

1

, 8

1

H ì

gine. But lean, reply'd the Landlord, I doubt, what There imagined is true , wherefore Neighbours_ 1 hid he, what is beft to be done ? I pray advile me; they teld him the best advice they could give him was to go to the Magiffrate, and acquaint him with what 10 hed happened; he did fo, and they at his request went 4 withhim; being come before the Migifrate, the Lendlord told him, that not, long fince a Gentleman 4 time to his house to lorge, and foun after him, two . more, who being well acquainted tregerher, went out (hid he) to supper; the two returned home; but it was fome what late, and the third not coming home, d miled in me fome furpition, which hath fallen out too true, for, faidhe, the poor Gentlemen is harbaroully 0 d murd red, and lies in fuch a place, I have been to fee him but, alchough I cannot know him by his face ; for they have fley'd off the skin, yet I believe it is he by his Cloathes; and, continued he, I very much fulpet my other two Goeffe are guilty of the mercher, for I have found a falle Key of the Genelemin. Chamberdoor in their Chamber; and to he proceeded in thing the Judice all the particular observations he, and the perfon he had fenr. had made : the Juffice was of c their oppinion, that thefe two men had murthered the third; and therefore fending for Officers, and a Guard, fent immediarly to the place where they were all together, and lectring them, they were brong at beforehim, he examined them feverally, and fo finding them in feveral Tales, he gathered fo much from their Examinations and Confessions, that he found them guilty; and then being inform'd that one of them had left a parcel at a privare house , he caused that place to be fearch'd and there was found a great deal of wealth and goods; there was the Merchants Silks, the Diapers

1

3

1

-

•

f

6

t

-

•

0 ¥

u

.

0 b

İ

t

i

n

1

T

.

d

Part: 37 Drapers Cloth; the Challices, and other Church west fils, and the two Fryers weeds, and much other goods Commodities, and Difquiles; all which was feizel on, and the report of this murder, and the other paris culars, running about the City, it came to the ears of the Merchant and Draper, and many others who had been lately robb'd, and they coming, knew and owned their Goods. Our Rouges who were now faft enough for committing any more Reguries, and feeing the feeing that they were discovered, for they were told of all things that had hapned; now faw it was to no parpofe to deny those several facts that would be to plainly proved sgainft them ; wherefore they comfels'd all this that I have told you off. and feveral muders they have committed, among others that of the two poor Fryars; and robbing the Church, where tore the Parlon, and Church-wardens of that Paris hearing of this confession, came to Paris, and the felons executed; they and the Merchant, and Drage, and all others whom they had robbid of any thing, had their goods returned them ; and thus faid the Gentle man, was the end of thefe wretches ; and I came to k thus particularly acquainted with this fory, beent when I was at Paris I lodg'd at the same house when they had done, and my Landlord acquainted me will all thefe particulars.

The Gent eman having finish'd his discourse, will Miftrels Mary, Lold him that thefe two were or el, and bloody minded Thives, and that I did not car for hearing any fuch flories, for that I was med troubled, and methought fenfibly concerned; in relation he replyed, that indeed this was bloody in herrible, but that it was ninal to have fuch murid committed in Paris; and that very frequently, and com continued he, both the Thieves and Pick-pocken,

e)

4

ed

i.

of

ad ad ad gh

of

n.

00

n-

1

k

ne-

eer,

10

k

níe

est

id

81

-

11

. . .

1 · 1

for more eruel and bold than in England, and although I have given you examples of both, yet I could tell you many more, and calarge very much upon this Subject, for it is ufual for Pick pockets there, to perform their work inan extraordinary manner, for they are farnished with Arms, and Hands made with Wax or Wood ; and by vertue of thefe, they will frequently and without fuspition, pick pockets in the Church a for they will hold two hands with a true Arm, and a falle one, that is an Arm of Wax or Wood up, and in their hands they will hold a book and feem to be bufily employ'd in turning over leaves, at their Devotions, when as the third Arm and hand is picking of pockets and People Randing by, nay, the Parfon himself whose pocket is pick'd, will have very little saule to suspect him that does it : also if they get a man out of the way, and are minded to rob him, they will put a peice of Iron, or Brass into his mouth, like unto a Pear, which they call a Choak-pear ; and that properly enough ; for the party who hath it in his mouth, endeavouring to get it out cannot, for there being a Spring within it which forceth it open, it is impelfible to get it out without a key toir, which they have therefore they who put this Choak-pear into the mouths of any, after they are Arft robb'd of what they have about them, they are told, if they antend to be rid of that Pear, they must go and fetch more mony, which they must bring to a place they appoint, or elfe they are like to chew upon the Pear, without any other Victoris, which is like to be hard Dyet to them. But continued he, I thall tell you one of thefe wax or wooden-handed-fellows, and fo conclude.

A Gentleman having had his pocket feveral times pick'd of moneys and Watches, was much troubled and

1

4

1

4

.

and refole'd if possible to find out, and catch one Piek-pocker that should pay for all, wherefore he adviles with a Smith, an ingenious fellow of that que lity, to make him a band of Iron or Steel, with fome prickles about the fide of his pocket, and a fpring to wards the bottom, which when it should be touch'd would cause the band of Iron or Steel, at the topto close together, fo that if a Pick-pocker should come there, it would catch and hold him fast by the hand: this he had made to his delire, and then he went to the next Affembly, which was at a tryal of causes, and it was not long e're his project took; he hard his Engine discharge, and the fowl was caught; he knew which Pocket it was, and therefore lookt on that fide flood with hat eff, and both his hands were upon his Hat, which were held up as high as his face; he therefor wondring whole hand he had caught, and feeing the man in that pofture, doubted that his Engine hadde ceived him, and had given falle fire, but putting his hand towards his packet he found a hand there, which was in vain firugling to get out; wherefore thath might know who this hand belonged to, he got out of the prefs of people, and the man who held his Hatin that posture went with him; when they were gent! little to the one lide, the poor fellow cryedout; pray Sir, let me have my hand; how ! replyed,th Gentieman, I fee you have two already, and there on if you have a third, you may well spare me that it guard my pocker for the future : the fellow faw the be was caught, and therefore replyed to the Gentle man; truly Sir, it is but a tryal of skil, a new invertion, and i hope you will not be angry with a peice ingenuity ; but if you are, rather than fail, ify pleafe to let me go, and not discover me, ile gireyo any fatisfaction ; what fecurity fhall I have for its 900

he

41

me

10.

h'd,

ole tat i

od:

the dit inchich bod lat,

ore

de.

his ich he

of 13 ik

Off.

de

2

ø

faid the Gentlman? All that I can give, said the Diver, and thereupon he drew out a purse of money from his own pocket, which it is like had an another owner but lately, but now it helped to make his compession, for the Gentle-man and Pick-pocket going to the Tavern they clapt up an agreement; he not only receiving satisfasaction for what he had formerly lost, but also discovered to him the Nature, Use, and quality of a Wooden-hand.

CHAP. XX.

Mistress Mary continues the story of the young Geneleman, relates how a Cheat (with two more) presending to be a Countrey man, performed a very profitable but most comical exploit on a Shop keeper, she so interrupted by the Arrival of her comrades; Meriton Lattroon enters into a Pleasant Dialogue with her; his Indian wife falls in love with Mistress Mary and Mristress Dorothy, disguised in mans apparel: and a pleasant Adventure there upon.

This (faid Mristress Mary) did the Gentleman discourse of the French manner of Theiring and Cheating, which was after a more consident and bold manner than that of our Countrey-men; and their manner of picking pockets was, I told him a great Novelty; he replyed that he could relate many such tricks, that were done at his being there; two more whereof, continued he, I will tell you, and so conclude.

Pari,

1

4

-

-

-

t

1

Three Cheats intending a peice of roguery, had aparelled themselves like Country-men ; and two faustring in the Street, one of the other went into Shop-keeper, whom they faw was alone in his Shop, and tells him that he was a Countrey-man, and ha born all offices in the Parish where be liv'd; and was now Church-warden, and that he was come to Towi to lay out a little money for the use of the Paril, but more especially to bny a Cope for the Parlen, and, faid he, I would bay a good one though it con me the more money; and thereupon fetch'd feveral and thew'd him : he turn'd many of them over, but hil de)red to fee better, at length one was brought, which he feemed to like; but, faid he to the Shop-keeper, ! doubt it is too Mort; no, faid the Shop keeper, it is long enough of all confcience, and thereupan meafer red it upon the Country-man; who faid, I cannot tell by this measuring, whether it be long enough & no ; but our Parlon is a man much about your phet, and therefore I pray de you put it on, and I hall k better fatsified ; the Shop keeper to fatisfie his Culo mer, did fo; aud our cheating Church warden di affift, and help him to put it on , but in doing it: ht clapt his hand into the Shop-keepers pocket, and dren from thence a purse of money, the Shop keeper perceiv'd it, and caughth hold of his Cuftomer, but he fliping out of his hand, shew'd him a fair pair of heels, and the Shop-keeper without patting off it Cope followed him ; in the mean time the other me of our cheats Companions acted their pars, forth one went into the shop, and taking the next bundled goods that came to hand went away, and the thin doubting that if the Shop-keeper kepr his pace & might overrake his Companion whom he purfued i k therefore having plac'd himfelf himfelf in the wayed barbok

P,

8

*

b.

1

nd il

ch

,1 ot ŧ

à,

k

0 H ht

H.

k

RE DE

N H W

K

purpole, catches hold on the Shop-keeper, and faves O Lord Mafter Dector ! what makes you than di-Aracted ? as to run in the ffreets in this unfeemly manner : the Shop-keeper told him that he was miftaked, he was no Parfon, and that he was in purfuit of s fellow that robb'd him , by this time our Cheat who was purfued, had turned a corner of a Street, and was out of fight; and the Neighbors coming out to fee what was the matter, perfwaded the Shop-keeper to to home again and put off that Garment, and then go look for the Cheater , he did fo, but there he found that he had a fecond lofs, which made him more angry than before, especially when he confidered that he was without all remedy, nor being able to discover who they were that had fhown him this clenly con-

İ . VÉVANCE.

Another time faid the Gentleman, a couple of thefe bold rogues underftanding that a Gentle-man was newly come from travel; and having enquired into and been acquainted with many particulars in his Journey, were refolved to get money our of him ; and therefore waiting a time and place convenient, and freing him walking with another Gentilman, one of thefe bold rogues thus accosts him: Sir, your very humble fervant, I am very joyful to fee you after your return, although you have travelled feveral Countries fince I faw you laft, yet you are not one jot alter'd: but you are, replyed briskly the Gentleman, if ever I' faw you before, for to the best of my remembrance this is the first time : I shall bring you, reply'd the Confident, to be of another mind when I tell you that my name is Mounfieur Brifack, and that you and trevel'd many a mile rogether, and were very merty at fach and fuch places, maining them; I hope Sir, continued he, that you do remember that we Raid three

oct

the 40 no

ple

ne

We

707 fho

no

w

27 hin

60

C

for

le

QW

m cee

thi

200 red

16 bei

for

to

fre

-

The English Rogue; And Part B dayes at fuch a place, and then departed, having very bad way, and a redious Journey to fuch a place, fill nameing the places, and that there we met with fach and fuch Gentlemen, who continued in our companies a tortuight, all the while we staid there; and we came to fuch and fuch a place. All this reply'd the Gentle man, and all those Perfons I very well remember ; but indeed Mounfuur Brifack, if your name be fo. Ide not at all remember you, but fince you give melo good an account of my Journey, I must needs believe you to be acquainted with me in those parts ; and fine you are to, I pray h w doth Mounfieur Langon! very well, reply'd our Chear; he incends to be here in there time, and then I will bring him to you that We may renew our acquintance : I fhall be glad of the opportunity, reply's the Gentleman, and fo good Monnfieur Brifack, faid he, till then I hall be your humbie Servant ; yours Sir, reply'd the Chest; but pray, Sir, do you now remember me ? yes, yes, the ply'd the Gentleman; then I hope reply'd the Chest, you will also remember that I did you a small contin in the time of our acquaintance , what was t? file the Gentleman, that I may acknowledg it; and think you ; no great matter, Sir, faid the Cheat, it was but friendly office, we ought to do fo for one another # fuch a diffance; I do not understand you, said the Gentleman ; you are very forgetful, faid the Ches, but I hope that as now you remember me, fo you will remember to pay me that little money you borrous of me at fuch a place; I know nothing of it, reply the Gentleman , I lent it you replyed the Cheat, the fame token, that your Horfe was taken lames one legg, and you were forc'd to leave him behin yos, and take another: truly, replyed the Gente man, the, teken is good, but I do not remember it

ı

0

0

.

u

d

.

id

48

.

ike

4

y d

wher matter; but I hop you will, reply'd the Chears and pay me for your Credit-fake before it comes to the hearing of our Fellow-travellers; how much do you fay it was, reply'd the Gentleman; but iwenty Crowns, a fmal fum, and foon paid; I know you are not without fo much money about you, and if you pleale to pay it me now, it will do me as great a kindness in receiving it now, as it did you when I lent it; well replyed the Gent. it it be fo, when Mounfieur Lantone returns I will pay you, which you faywill be in hort time; I hope Sir, replyed the Chear, you will not injure me fo much as to put me to flay fo long, when you promifed me to pay it at our next meeting and befides, Sir, it will not be for your Credit to let 1 him, or any of our Fellow Travellers know that you boggle at the payment of fuch a driblet as twenty u Crowns : and thus did he importune the Gentle-man for payment; by telling him that he had now acknowledged it before withels, and that if he would not il, quietly pay, he would compel him toit: fothat the Gendeman to purchase his quiet gave him what he deminded, left, as he faid, he fould fhame him. nk

Whilft Miftres Mary was bufied in the recital of what was afore delivered, and intending to have preceeded in the fame difcourfe ; fhe was interrupted by the reiten of the Captain, Drugfter , and Scrie vener, and Gregory : and her looks and colour discoveredfo the Capt. that the had play'd the extravagant in the afe of that liberty & fredom which he freely gave her, and could not confain himfelffrom expressing fome referements thereof and addreffing his discourse tome in a fleering manner , come Mafter Meriton Lafrom (faid he) I faill know you better by degrees, and do fear I firall find you too much guilty of the buttour of the Turks and Italians , who unaturally

Smock-fac'd Lads, how do the like them, Sir, if polytonld procure a change of them Sex, would not cite?

th

la be

E

to

th SD.

m

¢D

y

in

Ы

01 q

W

fa

03

th

W

81

21 0 fu

m g

0

2

d

of hen ferve for fine play-fellows

I think (faid 1) they are best as they are, without any change : nay, with your pardon, good Captain know it an undeniable truth, with your own for quent experience doth, or mun schnowledge ; the unfuitable habits, I confels at firft muffled up, or que darkned all former knowledg of them : but you mil f excuse them, if they did unmask themselves to k known to one, they once proferred before their on faferies, and reputations. Your fweet William was en my little wanton Mally, whom with many more, first beguiled by hiring my felf in womans apparel, a Servant maid in abourding School. This other what von call George, was a Country-girl, whole being and good fearure difarm'd me in the road, as I went the Pad, and although I had never feen her till then was fo paffionatly in love with her, that I never refit till I had obtained my defires on her, which effected ungreatfully left her.

This faid the Captain, is a thing I was wholly ight rant of till now, although from our friend Green have been informed of the must remarkable passage of your life : fuch wonderful and unheard of me retions in one mans life, that in his relation I though him reading to me fome Legend of incredibilities,

I replyed that I had referved this fecret with for others, to be discovered as occasion should ferre, that in time, nothing should be hid from him. M now Sir, faid I, you nor the rest of your friends me not entertain a jealousie that I participate and he with them in your Miftrels's affections, to be plant はのの woar belief of that : a le in you any anger or revenge. you will discover thereby your folly moft egregioully; for can you expect a confrancy from fuch, who know they cannot live, but by being inconftant; they are like fach who are upon a trading Voyage, it is not one Port, but a great many that makes up their market; neither are they like some Merchants who particularly trade to one place, as to Guiney, Hambrough, &cc. They are generally trucking, or vending their commodities through the Universe: Mal, said I, you must not be angry that I thus plainly and boldly disclose the naked truth; pray on, Sir, said the, I shall exercise my patience in hearing your rallery, but I pray tell me whom you are out of breath, that I may inform you of the fuch who are upon a trading Voyage, it is not one Port. you are out of breath, that I may inform you of the infirmities and frailties that belong to your more neble Sex, and spare not ours ; you will not be so unjuk to deny me that liberty you take your felf ; a match, quoth I, and therefore I shall proceed. When you were but fourteen, you began like a Nut to grow brown at bottom, which you know will then drop of fall of it felf, or I might more properly compare you to forward Summer fruit, which proves mellow in the non-age of the (pring, but rotts by too foon falling, when more folkid fruit fhall deny the nipping frofts of an approaching Winter. There is a Queen-apple, and a Bitter sweet, fo call'd you recemble the one in the levely colour, the other in the diffatefull Gufto: but fince I speak of truit, the most common refemblance is a Medlar, which is never good till rotten; fuch are you, never finer dret than in your winding theer. Several of your Sex when married, are but a parcel of Crab trees, wall'd in at a great charge. As for thy part, thou are like a honeycomb with a Bee in it, which infallibly flings him that takes thereof: to be fhort, ye have fair songues

The English Regue; And 277 Parts 1 and falle hearts ; fince faces, but foul Confciences pride prompts ye to all manner of prodigality, and la leads ye to that fouffiels, wch ruingtes thoulands in the deftruction of your felves. To conclude, I could ler thee, but that thou are female and would never have married, but that I thought it best expedient to bring me to repentance. Now Sir faid fhe, I belive it is my time to speak, for I find by your ftraining, you are very acedy; you have but little water left by the fucking of your Pump; I fee where your plot lies clearly, by undervaluing me and our Sex, you would put our friends sat of conceit with us and others, that you might make & Monopoly of our Sex; be adviced Sir, your Patent will not be woth the procuring, if we are forrimble and wavering, as you would falfly make the world believe you have Marshall'd up a fair company of Meraphors, that your wit might flatter in our de orragement. Our failing from port to port to advance bur profit, is nor fo difcomendable as you would her It. Ance it is rather our misfortune to meet with fuch Bank rupts, Broken merchants, who have neither foch nee credit to batter with us for our wares. Surely you Wir is mightily improv'd (fince your poor Poerry writ to my friend Doll, which the related to me was almost all the reward the had for her lot Vit Pinity") it skips to nimbly from Pole to Pole, from Sea to Land, to ferch a Lean-ffarvelin of a con ceit, and that was the comparing of us to ripe Nutt, or Nutts brown at bottom as you well know; for il we are fip fhel'd'd were it not for truanting wigh Who rufhing into our Thickers Gake us down ; w might hang long enough, not like your Crack roper and for your likening us to fruit foon ripe, and as food rorten, Idare confidently aver that we might remi Vlong time on the tree, did not fuch unhappy Boys Sondie ill remande

$ 6

LITA

2 ot

de

Se

m

P

W

ſ

A

C

2

0

N

-

6

V

Ī

f

t

1 er:

ave

my

of tan-

the ny

nce

IK

d ck,

W!

ry

ir.

Gall

you are through floses at us. Lafly, you fay one fweets are accompanyed with flings, I know not what you mean, but I am fure you Rung this Gentlewoman and my felf in that manner that the fwelling lasted nine moneths, and by a Mid-wife was at last delivered of our pain. To conclude, with what force can you condemn us for inconstancy ? when every new face you fee, fhall change your affection, variety thall be as fo. many winds to blow your amorous pretences to more points than are contained within a Compals, and when you have had after a long Seige, the Town (you firedown before) furrendred, you fall a plundring infantly, and it may be, after this, ingratefully fet the Garrison on fire; if not, at leaftwife curfe the time and money you spent in your Conquest, throwing it; off as a thing not worth the managing and keeping No more (dear Mall, laid I,) no more, what hitherto I have express'd, was but a tryal of thy wit, which fince I find fo pregnant, thy better parts, thy mind, I. will endeavour to enjoy hereafter.

All the Company was greatly pleas'd with our Drollery, and now said I, Gentlemen, without tribling the time away too much, since we know one the others past lives, and present intentions; let us enter into a serious consultation, how we may advantage each others interest here, in order elsewhere. Although you, Sir (speaking to the Captain) have been inthese parts twice or thrice before, yet I question not but the knowledge I have of this Country will prove as serviceable to our design, as any others that have been here a longer time besides the advantage of my projections; the Captain with all the rest readily confented to be advised with me in every thing, serving me the priority in all manner of Roguery.

fce

MY

Fea

CTC

oth

ed o lec

for 10

to en

far

in bl

81 tu

th

li

C

279

Gentlemen, said I, the love I bear my own Countrey (although all Countries indeed, should not be such thrangers to us, as not to make them absolutely one own, when necessity compels us thereunto) I say, having a longing desire to see Europe, and return for England, having now gotten something considerable for a future maintenance, I shall make it my whole but since to take up what commodities I can on trust, and with what I have, and my felf, I reso to accompany you homewards; and that I may be the better well-come among you, I will be affirm to you in the buying your commodities, and procuring you a credit withal.

There proposals commanded both their thanks and embraces, and to work we went immediately. before I preceed totell you how, and in what manner we enrich'd our felves by cheating and deceiving the Countrey : I must give you an account, that my theblack divil, my wife, had a moneths mind to ne les than a brace of white Tolephs, I mean my two Girlsin mans apparrel : I contais the temptaion was greatemonth so have deluded any other woman of more Christian principles; when I heard of it, I thought I frould have dyed by the excels of laughter, and that ! might have the more ifport, I ordered my two Females not to discountenance her amorous delires. I have heretofore inform'd you that the was for feature and flature as handfome, and as proper as most Esrepeaus, and had a matural genius, her Sex is not ordiparily endued withat : in the time of my living with her, I had raken confiderable pains to teach her English of which the bath a competent underfanding and atterance. Seeing me go very gentile and gallant, the differted her own Country fashion, aud thought herwelf obliged to be cloathed in mine, which I condefrended

4.

×

.

d

t

t

scended to, not so much to please my eye, as to sport my tancy, for they became her as wel as a Hat and Feather. Sword and Belt, with a Red-coat would become a Tack an-apes riding before the Bears.

We had not many English-women among us, howmer the imitated every one of them in fome thing or other lo that the freemed when dreft to have borrowed of at least twenty women, and those Habiliments look'd as if they had been thrown on her with a pitch. fork. She being extreemly fmitten in love with thefe 2 hadfome young men, as the thought them, began now to be lefs careleis in her erefs, but what diforders the endeavoured to rectifie and amend, the made a thoufind times worle; the confulted her glass, and imagining her face was not naturally fair enough, that is, not black (for blackness is efteem'd by them as beauty, and tawniness the contrary) I say to correct that natural defed by Art, the got fome Lamb black, or fome thing like it, by which paint the resolved to be devillish fair.

I wondred to see my pretty sweetings face, all of a sudden so firangely chang'd, but I concerning my self but little with her, never demanded how it came, but according to my usual Custome went to bed, and not long after my wite followed me: I had drank very excessively that day, by which means I stept profoundly and was not sensible what her petulancy prompt'd her to when I was asseep; but certain I am, she did so all to bekis me, and so rubb'd the black paint off her face upon mine, that none could tell which was the blacker of the two in the morning when I arose.

Igot not out of bed till an hour after all the rest of the People in the house were up, and staying somewhat longer above than I usually did, the came up into the Chamber, and perceiving my face to be black.

de

bi

th

w

SI

10

76

CO

fa

th

in

di

w

D

in

h

pr

be

W

m

th

m fi

bi

h

in

h

the was at a ftand, not knowing what to fay, or do; but at length concluded (as the confess'd afterwards) that her God was angry With her for loving anyother white befides her Husband, and therefore had taken away his white face, and had given him a black one in the room : the retird down with much more reverance than usual, and was to amazed, that he fpake not a word to any below. The Captain and his friends, with feveral of my own acquaintance were attending my coming down, who feeing my face thus discoloured, knew me not, yet knew my voice and clothes, and though I bid them good morrow, they returned me not the like civilty, but instead thereof, ask'd me whether I was not an impudent fellow to counterfeit another voice and wear his clothes . Gentlemen faid I, are ye all mad, or have ye eyes that we dire own? I am the man I was the laft night I am very certain; you may have the same body, said the Captain, but the foul Fiend fole away thy head lift night for being drunk, and left his own in its room; hereupon a Looking glals was feicht, and pur it into my hands, but I no fooner faw my face in it, burit dropt out of my hand's breaking all in peices, and with the amazement of this fudden alreration, I wasjul ready to expire; now did all my former reguries reme freshinto my memory, believing that they, with what I was now about to act, had rade pofte to the Devil to inform him what I was ; that he was come to feich me away alive, and that he had lent methis bellift face, that I might be the fitter for his company in his Journy homeward.

The Company feeing me feand to like a changeling, could not forbear laughing till they held their fides, at length one of them came, and with a wet cloth fub. bing my tace, reftered it me again, I could not imagine)

4

k

*

9

1

d

0

e

e

-

u

h

A

•

ie

who fhould ferve me this trick, or hew it should be done, but at laft recollecting my thoughts, I remembred that my wife of late feemed to me to be more than ufually black; whereupon I call'd her to me, and with the same cloth | made her blackness vanish too. She perceing I was inflam'd with rage and fury, fell apon her knees, and begging my parden, the told me tvery circumitance of what the had done and delign'd. concealing her real contrivance; the the painted her face in that manner to increase my love the faid, and that in killing me and laying herf ce to mine (not immagining the black would come off) the had thus difcoloured my face, and would never do to again : 1 was fo far from being Angry with her, that I could not forbear laughing heartily, which renewed the like in my friends; however I charged her never to make herfelf fairer than the was again, and if I found her pride extend that way, I would deveft her and reduce her to the Clout, it being all the clothes the indians wear, an infignificant fore covering; this troubled her more than if I should have gashed her flesh and fill'd the wound with falt, a punishment frequently wied among them. Notwithflanding the ill faccels of her first project, yet the was refolv'd to profecute her love but which the loved beft, the could not tell, if there had been an half dozen more, the had room enough inher brefts to entertain them , and had affection to have scattered pleasifully among them all.

fi

Gu

13

u br

fa lei

to

th

th

te

th

W

10

TO

he ftr

ftr

ge

Ī

te

co

M

u

CHAP. XXI.

Lattoon's Wife prosecutes her love, the manner of her inversoragant Horse-courtship inviting them to a boul of Punch, she forc'd them to the Squeak, is discovered in her amours by her Husband and would have possoned her self to escape his anger. Latroon brings his new-comrades into the acquaintance of the Bannian, whom by feasing him aboard and a shore, they make their friend in their knavish Design.

My Wife was none of those puling, whining, lowers, who not obtaining their defires, presently exclaim against the injustice of Heaven in not granting their wishes, and growing sullen to make amends for their Blasphemy, hang themselves, or cut their own throats. She had a certain way of Court-ship peculiar to hieself, and a kind of Horse-play in her kissing, which was so strong & eager: that you must have a special care she did not beat som of your teeth down your throat; her embraces were as soft as a Bears, I think fully as strong she hath made me sometimes in a merry humour, cry Oh: and therefore I cannot see how these striplings well escape with life should they be encirkled in her arms.

What kind of Rhetorick she used to persawde them with, I am not yet acquainted, but I understand she boarded them both at once and out them so the squeak, withour attering a word, and had not they shed for it, she had ransacked their carcasses ito have tryed their Manhood, this made them them ever after foun being alone with her, which made her fo mad, that when the hath feen them in company, if by any means the could come at them, the would have pinch'd them by the arms, or elfe where, her fagers being as bad as a pair of pincure. She was Ignomnt of the way of wining them by Prefents, or the fubile infinuation of fine words, varnified with love and Service ; the was down-right with them, if they would not love her, the would fee whether the could make them, ; but that not doing, the was refolv's to my whether drunkenels would operate any thing upon them. Whilft I and my new Aff ciares were gone abroad to haften our purpoles of marching of together, he had prepar'd a Bowl of Punch, with other excellent L quors, not omitting feveral D.fhes of Sweetmeate ; fhe ffrain'd her felr at that time to the utmoft to express her civility and kindness, drinking often to them till at laft the perceiv'd that the Brength of thole feveral Liquors they drank had elevated them : then did the in as good English as the was Mittres of. tel them that the lov'd them, and they must love her that the had never feen fuch pretty white men before, with that the caught one of them about the neck, the other fearing they should be now discovered, indeavored to affift her Comrade, and truggled to difengage her hands from about her neck, but the being too ftrong, would not dif engage her hold, bar by main firength brought them both down to the ground together with her ; just as my bufiness calling me home, lentred the Room wherein I found my Spoule at Tamum Scantum with the two supposed young-men, tambling all together promisesoully : I knew they could not if they would, and would not if they could make me a Cuckold, therefore I had no cause to be ligry with any, but my Christian Infidel, and yet

۲

C

t

d

I Office Ch

I had but little reason to be so with her, confidering the bruitifhnels of her nature, and barbarouinels of her edection : however fo fentible fhe was of the injury the delign'd to do me, that taking a Dagger out of her pocker, which he mightily delighted to carry always about her, the would have flabb'd her felf had I not prevented her, by forcing it out of her hands. I faw nothing but diffraction and diffraction in her eyes, and therefore, watcht her narrowly the thould not mischief her felf, or any elfe; the feeing that feem'd better compos'd, and flepping slide drawing a small Box out of her pocker, which the always made her Vade mecum, and was fill'd with the rankest poyfon, the convey'd some of it into a Cup, and offer'd to drink to me, which the would have done, had I not dafte it out of her hand : the feeing me fo careful of her preservation, imagined I had no evil will against her, the fell upon her knees again, and begged of me that I would kill her, for the deferved it, or take for my fatsfaction, as many wives as I pleas'd into the houfe, and the would not be offended at ft in the leak; I rold her I would have no more wives than the, and that I would forgive her this time, fo the would neve do the like again.

exercised my wir abroad, among the Bannians I invited one of the principal of them home to a treat, a mile of vast sway, and great credit in the Country; and having acquainted my new Correspondents, or fellow Conspirators of the time of our meeting, I order them to appear as splendidly as they could, according to the Custome of the Country, and to be nobled their expences, all which they performed so well, the they gain'd a great esseem with the Bannian; Moreover limstorm'd him privatly; that the Captain (thosp ng ol

INC

TY

ad ds.

her

blu

hat

ing

ide

r'd

not

of

BA

Ot.

for

the

R:

and

YC

AI

W

140 hi-

01 re

百二五五十

Part 3. an'Interloper.) was refolv'd not to be behind band in the lading his Ship homeward, with the bek Factor in the company, having Gold enough for that purpole, and that those young men that accompanied him to the indies were the fons of English Lords, that had brought with them great flore of Gold to fee this Country, and lay it out in the Commodities thereof : he hearkened to me with much attention, and having always had a very good oppinion for me, believ'd what I faid to be no lefs than truth, and therefore defired me that I would perswade them that he might negotiate their Affairs for them ; this was the thing ! defired, which I should have offer'd kim, had he not to happily prevented me by his own voluntary motion, and to encourage his willingness therein, I whilpered the Captain in the ear alide, informing him that the Bannian was fully wrought upon, and that now he had not need to fear fraught at half credit, as I hall mannage the matter, I defired him to invite him abroad to morrow, and what friends he should think to bring along with him, which accordingly he did; after that we had been fufficiently merry together in my house, and though he was fomewhat elderly, yet he was a very comely old man, and had wir and heat. chough in him to play the Good-fellow : We had fo liberally entertained him (and had fo fitted every thing to his humour, I knowing his humour to a hair) that on his going away, he acknowledged infinite fatisfaction, in that he had receiv'd, promifing for thefe tivilities his utmoft Service and Afficance ; the Captain ftop'd him in his further acknowledgments, by affering him they were nothing to what he and the Company intended for him, defering him that he would favour them with his Company abroad the next day , the Bannion gratefully accepted the proffer proffer, for he was a person that lov'd dearly his belly, and therefore the more willing and ready to accept our English treatment, which he knew was no niggardly one, but had he known what a ftale purgation he should have had after all his feasting, he would have sooner swellowed a Paged, than one single morsel.

About noon I found the Bannian at his ewo house, and telling him that he was expected abroad, he made himself ready to go with me, in our way thither we mer with fome of his intimate friends, and fome of mine, those which I thought would further our delica I fingled out, and took them along with us. Captain had made ample provision for us, and underflanding form me that the Bannian was obliged to ab-Rain from fome fort of meat, he had to befure provided none thereof, having feafted with all the jollity imaginable, firing feveral pieces of Ordinance according to Command; now Sir, faid the Captain, the you-might know we come not into your company empty-handed, or that we will take up any of your Goods and Commodities without paying you for them according to contract, I will fhew you feat thing which shall be a Secret to every body elfe, fo unlecking a Cheft, be thew'd them a great quantity of his own Gold, and his Undertakers ; if this be not & nough, fee there of this fried of mine fifteen hundred pieces, and of that mans there, five hundred, with thousand more if occasion should ferve.

This made the Bannsan and his friends admired fee to great a quantity of Gold, however he feem'd to take but little notice, only faying, you have a great deal of money, Sie, and we have a great deal of valuable Commodities, which you shall not want, but truff them to my procurement for you, and you shall not fail in your expectation; he spake English goods

y,

pt

d.

he ve

c,

de

ec.

of

in he

1.

6

0-ty

N.

IR

ny

10 ĸ

fo

4

11

10

10

di

1 H

nough to let us underftand, that he would be our Servant to do our bufinels, and the Merchant too, to credit us if we fo pleas'd. What Goods we took of him at first we paid him ready money before deliver'd, and by degrees caus'd him to fend fome abroad, and paid him three or four days after : And to the intent we might not be in the least suspected for any knavery. I advised the Scrivener, Drugfter, and Gregory (their Hanger-on)to give out they intended to flay in the country fome confiderable while, that what goods they bought, they would fend for England, when the Captain should return thither, and to confirm the truth; of this report, they built them an house, befitting the entertainment of them, and the fecuring what Goods they thould procure by way of Merchandize, fervants I procur'd them, fuch as I thought would be for their turn, both Male and Female, but if they intended to have their Victuals well dreft, they must not expect the Cookery from them; however they refolv'd to try the ability of their new fervants, who handled the matter fo fenrylly, that when it was brought to Table, there Was not one, but what was of a different oppinion in giving a name for what was brought before them, not knowing whether it was boil'd, bik'd, broyl'd, or rozked; for the looks thereof feem'd to have a touch of them all ; fo that it was concluded by all that the Proverb was never better verifi'd than now; God fends meat, and the Devil fends Cooks; and to any Stranger would have taken them, they being of his own fmoaky complexion. Wherefore to avoid thefe toul inconveniences of flurtish feeding, it was agreed on, that Mall (alies William) Doll (alies George) notwithstanding their Breeches, fould officiate as Cooks, their friends hould be caterers, and their mentals Skullions.

be

di

iW

1

in pl

m

m

Ť

h

th

Ħ

ti

p

21

b

ı

G

N

A

1 b

6 ñ

ò

d

-

CHAP. XXII.

Latroon in order to his returning to Europe gets a great deal of Goods, most on credit; he suspects his wife of some villanous Design, discovers her wicked inclination, and hints at the common cause of Gueskoldry. She under presence of loving visit payson'd one of the supposed youngmen, and had like to have dispatche the other, and afterwards kills her self; her Assistant in this Murther was found not far distant from Bantau torn to pieces by wild Beasts, three days after the Fatt.

The this Equipage our friends were in, whilst the Captain, and my self were daily bringing in Grit to the Mill; the Bannion according to his promise, with speedy sedulity procur'd as what ever we defined, and to encourage his Industry had daily (almost) encouragements for his quick dispatch. Our business now ran on wheels, neither did the pleasures of our new Houskeepers stacken in their carreer, they had every thing which the Country afforded, and more, for they had two such matchless European girls, which is linding could not parallel, whose luster was the brighter by reason of those dark and dusky, foils which were always near them.

But damn'd be that cutsed instrument that totall ecclipst the light of those two Wandring stars; which must ne're shine more in our Hemisphere. Who would have thought a wife, after so much penitenes and submission (being obsequious beyond imitation)

Mould

Part tv

ľ

1

12 A

C, d,

1

15 uf.

26

hould renew her revenge, and profecute it to death. his true, the found me remils in the cooling of her morous Heats, bur that from the firft I aled her to. that the might not expect it when it came, as a duty, but a courtelie, or a very fignal favour, by reason hereof he was void of frequent ex ectation , had the been as wife, and as lovely fair as any of my own Countrywomen, I would have ferv'd her in the like manner ; if limended to make my wife abfolutely my own. For in my time I have observ'd at least an hundred Examoles of this nature : Women, whom I am confident might have ran the Bace of their lives in the way of modelly and honefty, had they not been chased or ofer heated at first by the often atious humour of their hat brained B idegrooms, friving to our do himfelf, that he might purchase the fleem of being a lufty man excelling others in flrength and v gor; but when the wite thall finde the fatisfict on of her delires dil-con tiqued, the will be aprice think her husband was too prodigal at firth ald fo became Natures Spend-ihrift, and now thinks of no other thing than how the thall be supplied by others. Others again are like some childish apperites, who feeding on some excellent Dille they never taked of before, and being exceeding pleaant, ear b. youd meafure, thinking themselves never ot to be fati ked, fo ge tig a furfeit, ever after loath il what they lov'd, the very light thereof will even hauseate their Romacks. I say by ftinting my wife de cst sherthis manner, the could not suspect that by rambling abroad, I disappointed her expectations at home, 1 からい fince cuftom made her believe me indifferently henet, But her revenge was grounded on the Balis of equity, for fince fhe was fo far from being jealous, in the he allowed me to make ule of others, the judged I could not in reason dis allow her the enjoyment

Part 3

ly

C

0 田市 50

of one or fo, especially of my own complexies.

The removal of these two young men (as she supposed, and in that belief courted them to her embraces) she verily believ'd was occasion'd by me and design'd that she might have no converse with them. Whilst they were in sight of her, she pleas'd her self in viewing them, but being depriv'd of that howly happiness; she had not so much prudence as to conceal the resentment of her loss, and the injury was done her by me, but express (in her manner) to my very face things that carried with them suspitions of dangerous confequence.

For the prevention thereof, I feemingly show's much kindnels unto her, giving her a many good words, & granting her with all leave to vifit thole two young-men, with this provile, she would not wrong me, and all this was to pacifie for the prefent, till was ready to go from the implacableness of her tevengful spirit, which is an Inmate properly not only in her, but in all the Indians her Countrey people She feem'd hereat to be very well fatisfied, but fo im patient the was to have a review of them, that he went from me immeadiately to them, at the light of them the represented her joy in fo many antick thape, and femes, that all which were prefent burft ou into a great fit of laughter, which the conftrued infe vour of her felf, suppoling from hence, they were ver-joy'd to fee her ; and what made her believe ith more, was their welcoming her to their new hould in the best manner they could, drinking to her fo old (in the best liquors they had) till the was half See ver , the hear of the Perfian-wine the drank, gaveli to the old train, which should kindle the Magazine Love, which lay covert in the Cole-pit of her her luft and now breeking like a Hand-granado, pica nl

m. elf

rly

-110

Vat

my of a

n'd

od

Wo

ang illi

reely pla inthe of pa,

pieces of the fhell could not fly fafter than her arms did about their necks, there was no warding them, fo that they were forc'd to fabmit to the cruelty of her overpowerful affection. But when the infifted upon the complement thereof, they bade her then defift, for they were refoly'd never to wrong her Husband in that naure, and threatned her, that if the would not be civil. they would acquaint him therewith. Hearing them menace her after that fashion, the retreated and fate down at a diftance, and feem'd fomewhat penfive, but hiving spoke some few words to a Black that past by her in the Indian tongue (which I would have underfood had I been by) to which there was a fudden reply; the feem'd to throw off her melancholly and reissume her jolly attempt, telling them that the next day the would come again, if they would make as much of her as they had done then ; they told her they would.

lvili ing them that evening, the y acquainted me how Welcome they had made my wife for my fake, how he had renew'd her I ve, and how prepofteroully the hid mannag'd it ; in recital thereof we had good sport over a Bowl of Punch : to avoid the dangers of going home late I bade them goodnight. In the morning early coming down I found one of their female Slaves thole in discourse with my wife, who seeing me vanished; Isuspecting nothing, went to the Bannion about my bufiness, and that day we had so much bufiness to do, that it was near night, before I could vifit our friends, to acquaint them what progress I had made therein, and now near it was brought to confummation, But I had no fooner entred the doors, but my tres were entertain'd with the doleful groans of my modificited Amazons, who lay upon a Matt on the fround, foaming at mouth with the Scrivener &Drugfler, & Gregery attending them, offering their utmon affiftanc e affistance, which was to little purpose, since they were ignorant of what they ail'd; as soon as I saw them, I knew they were poyson'd, having seen several in the like condition (a common practice among them upon the least suspicion of an injury design'd, or an offence already receiv'd) but knew not what remedy to apply, and whilst I was in consultation with my self what was best to do, I saw Malls teeth drop out of her head, and Gregory going to raise her head, the skin and hair with it came off in his hands like a Perriwig, so did the hair of the other; so strong was the poyson administred, that Mall died in less than half an how after the reception thereof; but Dorothy escaped even to a miracle.

This fad accident had like to have converted the house into a Bedlam, for the three young men which had attended them in this difafter, were fo ftrongly diffraced at the fight of what had happened, that! thought the Devil had just then by a reentry took possession of them, or that they had taken the fame potion of Poylon, which was very near as bad; believing it would work as febilely and as nimbly on them as it had a fready done, (Principiis obsta) I ran with might and main for fome Sallad oyl a Jarr where of I brought in the twinkling of an eye, Drink, drink, faid I, to them all, quickly, quickly, one after theother, as faft as you can, which they did, not knowing any reason therefore, but that I commanded them, haring even gorg'd themselves with it, and beingmi able to drink any more, I poured it down their thron till I'had almost choak'd them, or rather drowned them therein, they cried out to me, for the loved God to forbear, or ! hould kill them, judging me w be mad indeed; as they were evacuating what they had too plentifully received, the Captain, whom

ere

1,1

the

noc

nce

ip-

at her

ig,

on ur

YCT

he

11 ok

me

)e-

RO Tan

ere

0-

ing

m;

ner

neil neil

of

ey

OM

I had left with the Bannian to follow after me, came in, who asking me what was the marter? I rold him particularly. He could not but hew Ismething of trouble, but having been acquainted with all forts of loffes and mileries from his Cradle in a manner by traverling to and fro the Universe, he bore this with a patience agrecable to his courage and Man-hood, and now our friends having disembogu'd the Oyl that was within them, shew'd all the appearances of perfect, bealth; now feeing them in a condition to return an inswer to what questions I should propound to them, lask'd what ftrangerrs they had enterrained at home today? they replyed, None; but, faid Gregory, let us, first fee whether a certain she-devil of ours be within, and then I shall tell you what I have observed ; upon this we fearch'd for her, but could not find her, it feems the fame Black I found in the morning difcourfing with my wife, when having done this execrable murder, by the instigation of my other devil at home, was fled, as more plainly by and by will appear. Said Gregory, not full an hour fince; whilft we were at the farther end of the house busied about our wares, Mistress Mary, and Mistress Dorothy, commanded some wine to be. brought them, which was accordingly done by this, female we now miss, and brought in a midling Cocor-Nut-bowl; they were just drinking the third time round, as we came in , nay, now faid Mall, my little merry Grigg, here's to the Miffrels of thy affections, speaking to me, and drinking heartily, I looking into the Bowl to fee how much was left this Black dasht the Bowl out of my hand, and because there was but little in it, I judged it onely to be an effect of her rude petulancy, and to did the rell, taking no further notice. Presently our two friends grew extraordinary ill, and though we were three to twe

T 3

YES

yet they would have found work for as many more had not death thus bound one of them hand and foot, and the other feemingly dead for the present: I will lay my life, said I, I know where there is another of the Conspirators, so taking the Captain with me only, we made all the hast we could to my own house, and found by the extraordinary number of people therein, that something more than ordinary was in the matter, and so there was, for my wife with her beloved Dagger, had with one home stabb made a hole through her heart, wide enough for half a score lives to go out a breft without joftling one the other.

I was not troubled to fee her thus weltring in her own blood, but that the had not liv'd to be punish'd fuirable to the crime the committed, if any fuch punishment could be invented. The President of Bantam hearing of this horrid Murder, fent for me, to whom I gave an ample relation as I could by information, or otherwife, who feemed very much concerned, and immeadiately dispatch: several in the fearch of the Coadjutrix to the Marderels, about three days afterwards they found (fome ten miles diftant from Bantam) 1 female Carkais, corn all to pieces, the limbs thereof were gnawed in that manner, that there was little fich upon the bones, onely the head was untouch'd, and fome of the company that had feen her before, would have fworn it was the fame, and therefore it wast greed upon to carry it to the President, which they did, and prefently ordered to be faitned on a long Pole, for a future terror to fuch like Malefactors, especially the Natives.

1,3

lay the we

oin, tér,

ogh

tuo

her

h'd

h-

6771 or n-ds

1 af

6 d

y

t,

CHAP. XXI/I

Latroon and his Comrades about to leave Bantam and go to Surrat, having done lading their Vessel, shew some tricks to prevent suspition of marching off, He sets sail from thence and meets with an Enemy, an account of a most desperate and borrible sight with him. He gives you an exact account or journal of that Voyage from Bantam to Surrat, Having buried our dead, we resolv'd upon a General Counsel, to see what we had done, and what we had lest undone. We found that half our ready money was disburst, and that we had above half as much goods upon Credit, as our whole sum amounted to, and new resolving to make a sinal and speedy dispatch of all, I got all my Estate aboard not leaving any thing valuable behind me, excepting only what was in the house for the accommodation of my Guests, having an happy opportunity of conveying my own Goods with the Captains, and others that were concern'd with us the Scrivener, and the rest did the like.

That very day that we intended to fet fayl, we were all merry at my house with the Bannian, and promising that the next day we would pay him what was in arrears, and also lay out five hundred peices more ready money; he feem'd 'higly pleas'd, leaving him, we shew'd our selves through the whole Factory with much Gallantry. The reason that we did not take in our whole loading in this Port, was the great number of Dutch Viffels which lately came into the road, and more daily expected, which we knew would not only obstruct our Credit, but raife the Commodities of that place. We were fain to for iffe hard among our Country-men for what we had already, there being at that time at Anchor in the harbour feveral thips. And having ready money pretty flore we refolved to take in the reft at Surrat, which place would fecure us well enough, and what we had deceitfully got. Havins spent most part of the day in shewing our selves in the Town, about three of the Clock in the afternoon, it being the fourteenth day of July, we gat aboard, as if we intended to feaft it, for there was none of the whole Factory, or our Bannian especially would think us to indifcreet to let fayl with half our fraught. that was my policy, and being unfulpe &ed upon that account we might with the greater facility and fecurity march eff. Getting all our Anchors aboard in a trice, we looft our Siyls and away we fleet'd between the Main and Paulo pan jan, all the next day till fix in the Evening, being then athwart the South-falt hill, we firer'd South well and by west, and west and by foutb, but from that hill we fleer'd weft foutb weft having the wind for the most part a East fouth east with much rain, which aff Aed me grievoully, for my fears of fome pursuing us would not let me quit the Decks till I thought we were out of all danger in being fol; lowed. The fixteenth of this moneth at noon we efpy'd Hippins Ifland Elfward ten leagues off, having fteer'd all night Weft fourb weft. La itude about 6 Degrees

T 4

Part 3.

3.

CS

ng

y

10

15

he ld-

lie i

9.

o

re

1-

65

r-

1-

ne Id

11

1-n n

y

1-

h

1

5

-

6

298

Degrees 38 and Longitude from South-salt-bil 6 Degrees 44 West, the wind at south-east with the help of a Currant for twenty four hours, from the sixteenth to the twenty ninth of this month, we had the winds between the south-east, and east north-east, with most intolerable rains at Noon, being in latitude 11 degrees 39 south, and longitude 20 Degrees 35 West, the variation about 12 Degrees 35 Westerly; we sailed this month on several Courses, four hundred ninty six miles.

Mistress Dorothy being indifferently well recovered though a sad spectacle to look on by reason of the skin of her body all coming off with her nails, such was the malignity of the Venome; I say, speaking as well as she could, desired me to write some lines on her dearly beloved dead Comrade, knowing that my sincy did ever incline to measure lines, and so to please my self, more than to give her satisfaction, I composed these Verses.

On the death of his Indian wife, and his old Wench.

Start not my Muse, what Paradox is this,
That the same cause works both my Woe and Blis?
Here lies my bliss a more than brutish Wife,
By her own Butch'ring hands bereft of life.
My Woe lies here, my murder'd foy Alas!
What Wicked hand durst bring this Ill to pass?
Hells consistory sate within that brest.
Which sent my Love to hor Eternal rest.
How happy had I been, had the Best Powers, Englarg'd her Minutes, and have made them Hours.

Turn'd

Turn d these short hours into long days, that I Might dread Deaths approach, when she should dye.
But she is gone past all recal; and we
And we can only weep, and sigh her Elegie.
Though we don't mourn she can no Mourners lack,
Each Nature is at her sad death in Black,
Methinks they're hoarse with crying, and their votes (Being sad, and doleful do) besit their Coats.
The Clouds dropt tears; the Ayry-Quire (which slies Over our heads) do sing her Obsequies.
Shall we be dumb, whilf Birds do use their Art?
No let's in Sorrow hear with them a part,
When that y've done for Mall, berest of life,
Rejoyce with me, dead, dead's my wicked Wife.

August the ninth, fleering Northerly forty two Leagues, we found per observationem the Ship to run but thirty feven Leagues, which is five Leagues les by reason of the Current which fers us the Southwrads Lamade at 6 Degrees 24 Longitude 36 Degrees 58 West from the Salthil. This afternoon we were in the Latitude of the Changus, to the West wards of them, nor feeing any fign of danger, the variation is good help it heedfully observ'd, finding about 22 Degreet when you are in 7 or 8 Degrees of Southerly Latirude, a Northerly course will go clear of all danger. The tweltch of this moneth we croft Aguator, feeting North, North eaft, Latitude 10 D. grees, Second 85 Digits Somberly Longitude 36 Degrees 51 digit Weft, the wind at South and by West, the variation 19 Degrees, Seconds 35 Digits West,

The twenty fifth of August we lay a try with main course, and mizen our Drift North 9 Leagues, the wind at South west, a fresh Gale. One of our men taking our main Top-sail, cryed out a Sail, a Sail. In quarter

l

3:

WO

MI els ads

58

the

em, boe

ect

ati-

ger.

eer-

ndi

giu

119 rith

ucs,

mes

In s

quarter of an hour by the help of my Profpetive. I could difcern her to be an Enemy of confiderable force, about Some forty four peices of Ordinance: She made towards us with all the fpeed fhe could. and we to faorted her way, bore up tober with all the Sail we could make, fo that we fetch't up one the other quickly although we had but thirty fix Guns, eight less than the carry'd, and having fewer men withal we feared her not, but ran up board and board with her before we fir'd a Gun, and then we popred in a whole broad fide into her, while we pepper'd them above with whole Vollies of small that : they returned us the like kindness, which kill'd us four outright besides what were wounded. Our Captain behav'd himself very mantally, and so bestirr'd himself in the fight, thewing fo clear a courage as would have animated a very Coward to fight, as for my own part the meer observation of his magnanimous behaviour, infus'd into me more valour than I thought my felf capable to contain, or able to make use of ; my Landwater Soldiers, the Serivener and his two Companions, by the Captains example, and my encouraging, look'd Death as boldly, and as daringly in the face, as if they had intended to look him out of countenance, though at first no thor, either great or small went whikling by them but what made them dap their heads, as if that would secure them; that Buller which injures man never tattles in his ear the enfuing dangers that Bullet that whiteles in the Air, proclames your trown as fafe from cracking, as is the Goofe after the hath past through the Barn door stooping lest her lofty head should knock the top thereof.

There was not any in the Ship exempted from Service, every man as he was Quartered not budging, but doing the atmost he could to offend his Enemy; a brave

brave young flout fellow (whom I shall never forget) Standing by me and my Bantam Comrades) a Short came and took away his legg with that fory, that it rebounded from the fide; falling, he feemed not a wit daunted, but called our aloud, Courage Captain I warrant you Victory, if you will but fend down this Foot and Legg of wine to the Gunner, and let him fend it to them inflead of fhor, and I shall laugh to fee here, how it will kick the Aries of these insolent Rogues: Gregory flanding by and feeing what had past, though something scar'd, yet would not discover any fright, and to hide it the better, commended the brave refolution of the man, and as he was laughing at the odness of his conceit (poor Fellow) a shot came and took away one fide of his face, fo dyed immediarely, now it may be faid, he could laugh at him but, with half a mouth. This last unhappy Bout so scar'd the little valor which was in the Scrivener, that he inflantly quitted his flation, and diforder'd more men in his way to his supposed fafety, the Hold, than twenty Troopers could have done in the midft of a Foorcompany, a little afterwards the Drugfter attempted to do the like, some of the men in the waste, seeing him upon his fight (jaft as I was moving on the fame delign) cried out, knock him down, knock down that cowardly fellow with a hand fpike, thinking they had meant me, being on the motion, I endeavour'd to prove the con rary by giving him a fore pelt over the noddle with my Mulquet which laid him a fleep on the Deck was highly commended by our Captain for fo doing, telling me that two fuch fellows among! thouland men, nay an Army of ren times the number, might by their fear occasion their total overthrow.

The Drugfter recovering got to his Quarter,

ŀ

3:

(1 ot

rit

I

is

m ec

nt

137

he

ng

me

di-

but.

r'd

inien

en-

ot.

ted

ing

the

WI

acy

03

the

the

for ag 1

IM-

ver-

ers,

and

and thought it better to dye fighting than to be kill'd for being afraid to dye, to work he went with a Blunderbufs, and fired it fo often that he durft not charge ir again till it was cooler, my Ma quet was in the like eindition. By this time the Enemy began to Rand away from us, but we were refolv'd to keep her company, and make her pay for the trouble and coft the had put us to. We perceiv'd the had much a doe to keep herfelf above water, fo that we were not long before we came to bear again apon her, which we did so efficaciously, that by a lucky shot penetrating her powder room the blew up, we being fo near her, I verily thought the would have blow us into the air too, as the did her own men, part of which fell down into our Ship, as if you would have fcatter'd faggot flicks off a house top : we had not above fix men in all kill'd, and about nine wounded, none mortally, which were immediately committed into the hands of an excellent Chirurgion we had aboard, who took fuch a special care of them that before we came to Surrat, they were all perfectly cured.

Our ship receiv'd some dammage which was rectifyed by our Carpenters as well as they could for the present; and sail'd forward in our voyage. The next day we were forc'd to lye a Try again, which we did the thirtieth day, the wind at South-west allowing each days drift. The one and thirtieth we shortned sail all but our Sprit-sail, top-sail because of falling too soon with the Coast of India This month we ran eight hundred fifry two Leagues on feveral Courfes.

From the first to the fourth of September, we stood away only with a sprit-sail top-sail the course and distances, o cobserved having a fair wind Westerly, but the next we steer'd East and by North, with Sprit-sail and fore-topsail. The fifth from twelve to six (per Compass) East sive Leagues, having at sour of the Clock had ground fixty four fathome Oazy fand, then fet more fail and stood in North, Northwest till fix in the morning, our depth in cunning the Courle of feven Leagues was fifty five fixty and fixty four Fathome in Latitude, about 20 Degrees, Seconds 42 and Longitude 30 Degrees. Seconds, 3 Digits Weff. On the fix h day we fteer'd Eaft and by North, till four in the afternoon, at which time we faw Land, it was low and Sandy banks, with fome Trees, and a white Tower or Church which may be feen four or five Leagues off. This place was judged by these men of ours that had fail'd often this way, to be fourteen Leagues to the westward of Din. This evening we trook a small boat not far off Poramena, bound to Chichambo near Caule, they had only three horses in her, having nothing in her worth making prize, we difmin them the next day without taking ought from them. The feventh and eight dayes we flood off and on, expecting to meet with fome Jonks. On the ninth we met with a Jonk of Gogo, coming from Mare Rubrum, or the Red-Sea, richly laden, which we took, imagining we now we were made for ever, but the Commander foon dasht all our joyes, by producing a pals from the Prelident of Surrat, upon light hercel our Captain durft not detain her. I was on board her and having feen fome part of her Cargo, I judg'dby shat the richnels of the rest, and therefore perswaded the Captain to make her prize though the had a hundred president passes, but he would not yeild, knowing better the danger than I did and fo difmift her to my great torrow.

10

On the tenth we took a Jank belonging to the King of Successore, bound as they faid, to Surres, (the Devil was in our Captain to believe a word they faid it cought might be gotten by them) and had aboard of

Her

y

10

y

İs

9.

36

13

c

18

of

a vc

13-

r, â

m.

I-

NC

M-

k,

he

of

rd

by 111 ng

ny

ng Vil

if

er

her litele that was confiderable, faving fix horfes, and baft to make Ropes withal, wherefore he difmift her.

On the eleventh we anchored in twenty fathom three Leagues off the shore, to give notice if any jonks should pale by in the night, they stood to the Westwards; and met a Jonk coming from the Redfea, but this cowardly Hulk feeing our Boat, fuppofed her to be a Scout from fome Man of War not far off. ran and fheltered her felf under a Fort fome fourteen Leagues to the West-ward of Din head. This Jonk had some Europeans aboard her, which plyed their fmall fhot fo that our Boat was forced to leave her. and coming aboard us was fent out again better provided with men and arms to lye as they had done before, to meet with the faid Jonk. but in the night came fix Sayl of Friggats in flead of her and anchored by them. Our defperate daring lefs than little Fan Fan, would not leave them (knowing who they were) till he had fpit that little Venom that was in her and then retir'd, this fo allarm'd us that we got all fay le loole; and weighing up our Anchor the Cable broke, to our Ancher was loft ; we flood in and having fpent fome hot on the Friggats notwithanding there was luch inequality in the number, they stood away for the shore and left us, however we would not let them pais for but being some seven Leagues from Din head, in the night we stood in again amonst the Friggats, but there being little wind and a light night, they crept under the shore, from the twelfth to the seventeenth we plyed to and and again, standing off in the day, and in again at night, feeing thefe Friggats every day, bur could not come at them; they lay there to give the Jonks notice of us as we supposed.

The eighteenth we made up to the Land of Saint John's fourteen or fifteen Leagues off, near which of the Clock had ground fixty four fathome Oazy fand, then fet more fail and flood in North, Northwest till fix in the morning, our depth in cunning the Courle of feven Leagues was fifty five fixty and fixty four Fathome in Latitude, about 20 Degrees, Seconds 42 and Longitude 30 Degrees. Seconds, 3 Digits Weff. On the fix h day we fleer'd East and by North, till four in the afternoon, at which time we faw Land, it was low and Sandy banks, with fome Trees, and a white Tower or Church which may be feen four or five Leagues off. This place was judged by these men of ours that had fail'd often this way, to be fourteen Leagues to the westward of Din. This evening we trook a small boat not far off Poramena, bound to Chichambo near Caule, they had only three horses in her, having nothing in her worth making prize, we difmit them the next day without taking ought from them. The feventh and eight dayes we flood off and on, expecting to meet with fome Jonks. On the ninth we met with a Jonk of Gogo, coming from Mare Rubrum, or the Red-Sea, richly laden, which we took, imagining we now we were made for ever, but the Commander foon dasht all our joyes, by producing 1 pals from the Prelident of Surrat, upon light hereof our Captain durft not detain her. I was on board her and having feen some part of her Cargo, I judg'dby shar the richnels of the rest, and therefore perswaded the Captain to make her prize though fhe had a hundred president passes, but he would not yeild, knowing better the danger than I did, and fo difmift her to my great torrow.

On the tenth we took a Jank belonging to the King of Successore, bound as they faid, to Surres, (the Devil was in our Captain to believe a word they faid it ought might be gotten by them) and had aboard of

c

15

1

3

c

.

of

n

ve

13-4

ſ,

â

n.

1-

VC

M-

k,

he

of

rd

by

ed

111-

ng

Dy

ng vil

l if

her

her little that was confiderable, faving fix horfes, and baft to make Ropes withal, wherefore he difmift her.

On the eleventh we anchored in twenty fathon three Leagues off the fhore, so give notice if any jonks should pals by in the night, they stood to the Westwards; and met a Jonk coming from the Redfea, but this cowardly Hulk feeing our Boat, fuppofed her to be a Scout from fome Man of War not far off ran and fheltered her felf under a Fort fome fourteen Leagues to the West ward of Din head. This Jonk had some Europeans aboard her, which plyed their fmall fhot fo that our Boat was forced to leave her, and coming aboard us was fent out again better provided with men and arms to lye as they had done before, to meet with the faid Jonk. but in the night came fix bayl of Friggats in flead of her and anchored by them. Our defperate daring lefe than little Fan Fan, would not leave them (knowing who they were) till he had (pit that little Venom that was in her and shen retir'd, this fo allarm'd us that we got all fay is loofe; and weighing up our Anchor the Cable broke, to our Anchor was loft , we flood in and having fpent fome hot on the Friggats notwithanding there was fuch inequality in the number, they food away for the shore and left us, however we would not let them pals fo. but being some seven Leagues from Din head, in the night we flood in again amonst the Friggats, but there being little wind and a light night, they crept under the shore, from the twelfth to the seventeenth we plyed to and and again, standing off in the day, and in again at night, feeing thefe Friggats every day, but could not come at them; they lay there to give the Jonks notice of us as we supposed.

The eighteenth we made up to the Land of Saint John's fourteen or fifteen Leagues off, near which we took a boat that came from Danda ja-Oazy bound for a place near Din, out of this boat we orth-took two Mestico's and a boy, and so dismiss her whe choring at eighteen Fathome Oazy (being high winter and little wind) in Latitude 19 Degrees, 48 Digits, about nine Leagues of shore, Valentines pike, East and by South, per Compass.

The two and twentieth we faw a Jonk and gave chife to her, fetching her up we found her to bes great a Jonk of Surrat, bound for Acheen with Merchandile, having a pals from the Prefident and Councel, therefore he medled not with them ; bit in the afternoon came to an anchor in two and twenty Fat thom, about thirty Leagues of thore. The weather was gufty with much rain, but never did I hear fuch peals of Thunder, nor fee fuch great and continued flashes of Lightning : at four in the Evening the next day we anchor'd at eighteen fathom within tiu leagues of Damon, the wind at North North east, and variat ble, with tuch terrible claps of Thonder and Lights ning, that my frings, the Scrivener and Drugiter would have freely paried with all they had to have been ar the bottom of a Cornish Tirn mine. They envied now poor Geogories condicion, accounting his milery a great happinels, for fince the Element of We ier had received him into the Womb of her protter on, the Element of fire might as foon give him a new foul as to detriment his body, theirs being now minute ly expos d to the mercy of its uncontroulable fury.

Ou the twenty fifths evening we anchored in the fathom reddish clay, the Pagod East, North east, po Compass, and the trees of old Swalley, North, Northeast, about three Leagues off; the next day the wind being at North, North-west, we turn'd up and anchors in ten fathors, the Toddy-trees East and by North, No

CE

0

0

th

Compais.

nt 3.

e

5, ie

1-a4 er

ch

ed

It.

es.

24

11.

er

ve

8 ni-

1 ai-

te.

. de

100 fair

or'd

ni,

VOW

ler litty, having laid one buoy on the tonge of the last tond another on the point of the Main, we came Ohe Barr, the least water is four fathom and the at half flood, so we ran in till the Souther-sody-tree bore South and by East per Compass, and there anchor'd in eight fathom water. This month we sailed not above one Hundred and seven leagues.

CHAP. XXIV-

they go ashore at Surrat, are entertained with other Captains of Ships lately come to an Anchor, by the President; he discovers an old Mistress of his and his old sellow servant; waiting on a Captain in a disguising habit, he renews his acquaintance with her, she tells him what befell her after his unwarthy shipping her to Virginia, and the cause of her coming for India. Sine enters into a League with Latroon to cheat her pretended Master, which she did, the manner how. They sail together from Surrat homeward.

The next day after our coming to an Anchor in Swalley Road, there came in to us fix fail of Dutch-ships from Nova-Batavia; and two days after time in four English ships more into the same Port. One of the Captains meeting with a Fleet of Eriggats mitting in at the Rivers month, was boarded by them and unhapily blown up, himself and others of his Company escaped, but were miserably burns with powder. The ship drave into Swalley over the Bat

V

The English Rogue; And

we took a boat that came from Danda ja-vapore, bound for a place near Din, out of this boat were unly took two Mestico's and a boy, and so dismiss her enchoring at eighteen Fathome Oazy (being high was ter and little wind) in Latitude 19 Degrees, 48 Digits, about nine Leagues of shore, Valentines pike, East and by South, per Compass.

The two and twentieth we faw a Jonk and give chife to her, fetching her up we found her to bes great a Jonk of Surrat, bound for Acheen with Mer. chandile, having a pals from the Prelident and Councel, therefore he medled not with them; bit in the afternoon came to an anchor in two and twenty Fat thom, about thirty Leagues of shore. The weather was gufty with much rain, but never did I hear fuch peals of Thunder, nor fee fuch great and continued flashes of Lightning : at four in the Evening the next, day we anchor'd at eighteen fathom within tiu leagues of Damon, the wind at North North east, and variat ble, with tuch terrible claps of Thunder and Lightning, that my frines, the Scrivener and Drugter would have freely parted with all they had to have been at the bottom of a Cornish Tirn-mine. They envied now poor Geogories condition, accounting his miteny a great happinels, for fince the Element of Was ier had received him into the Womb of her protter on, the Element of fire might as foon give him a new foul as to detriment his body, theirs being now minute ly expos d to the mercy of its uncontroulable fury.

Ou the twenty fifths evening we anchored in the fathom reddish clay, the Pagod East, North east, po Compais, and the trees of old Swalley, North, North east, about three Leagues off; the next day the wind being at North, North-west, we turn'd up and anchor in ten fathom, the Toddy-trees East and by North

80

Compais.

3. Int 3.

, Laftly, having laid one buoy on the tonge of the and another on the point of the Main, we came in over the Barr, the least water is four fathom and hilf at half flood, fo we ran in till the Souther-Toddy-tree bore South and by East per Compais, and there anchor'd in eight fathom water. month we failed not above one Hundred and feven Leagues.

CHAP. XXIV-

Latroon and his friends arrive in Swalley Road they go ashore at Surrat, are entertained with other Captains of Ships lately come to an Anchor, by the President; he discovers an old Mistress of his and his old fellow fervant; waiting on a Captain in a disquising habit, he renews bis acquaintance with her , the tells him what befell her after his unwarthy shipping her to Virginia, and the cause of ber coming for India. Sie enters into a League with Latroon to cheat her presended Master, which for did, the manner how. They fail together from Surrat bomeward.

The next day after our coming to an Anchor in I Swalley Road, there came in to us fix fail of Dutch-thips from Nova-Batavia; and two days after time in four English thips more into the fame Port. One of the Captains meeting with a Fleet of Friggate entring in at the Rivers month, was boarded by them and unhapily blown up, himself and others of his Company escaped, but were miferably burnt with powder. The thip drave into Smalley over the Ber

. 1nhe

A ve

24 13 ch

ed TR. 350

124 ht-

ter ave

cnmi-

V 1. ar new

LEC adi

10

PP MIN

nor'l

Non

but all in a manner consumed by the fire; there was a Dutch ship fought with the Friggan this while, which Sunk three of them, and in the fight there was three more surprized, the first by the Charles Barge, the next by our Long-boat, which we doubly manned, and the last by the Dutch: they were but of little value, being laden with Paddee, Beechleaves and other trifles.

Now did our Captain command the Skiffs to be mann'd, and taking me, the Scrivener, Drugster, with some of the Ship, we went ashore, and presented out selves to the President, who wellcom'd us in the bed manner he could, and to speak the truth, his entertainment was magnificient; whilst we were frankly dinking Healths to our friends in England, there came into as (who came ashore that morning) the Captains of the other three Ships, with their Chief Officen, as also a great many Dutch Commanders and their Attendants, we used to say The more the merrier, and so sound it, for the President when was a very generous man, so he was prudent, and therefore by his noble deportment towards what resolved to oblige us both.

in gaffantry of Spirit, and in this manner we continued feathing three days, fwimming in an Occaof Liquor.

In this time of our Jollity I minded especially a young man that wanted on one of the Captains; he had a very Sweet countenance, he his Complexion was very much Sun-burnt by travelling; I did verily believe I had seen the face before, and therefore very much eyed in rges, which he perceiving fixt his eyes an often on me, for ire ; inver caft my eye that way where he good waiting, ggan bet I found him Hill looking towards me.

the My heart renewed private intelligence what he was, by the fur my reason could not so much as guess from th we whence it came ; for by the extraordinary motion were hereof bearing Arokes on my breft as nimbly as a Beech Drummer a Travale on his Drum-head; I look'd on to be that distance I could perceive that the fight of me did with jut him into astrange confusion.

der As I was contriving how to have some private conbet frence with him, his Maker commanded him to take fine of the Boats Crew and go abroad and fetch him dink fomething which he wanted, he had no fooner receiv'd inti the Command, but cafting his eyes on me he endezwi'd to tell me by them, he had an eiger delire re icen, fpeak with me.

ns of

He going out, I withdrew from the Company, deend e the firing their excuse for a while and follow'd him, but coming near him he trembled to he could bardly nt B dent, move a foot forward, feeing him in that agony, dis , laked him what ailed bim ? Bade him not be afraid, that I came nor after him to mischief him . or inother jure him in the leaft. I believe, faid he, you intend me no harm now, but it would have been well Dece if you had never done me any. How! replyed I, it is impossible I should be so cruel as to injure a face so innocently harmless as thine appears: yes, Sir, you have, said he, and were it not for something within me I have no name for, I would be revened on thy very soul for the abuse thou hast done me; I have sow no longer time left to discourse you, but to mortow meet me under the Southern Loudy the miferies this there I shall not fail to let you understand the miferies of

th

t

d

CI

t

fe

53

4

tr

of ---- and there he dropt his tears fo faft that he could hardly fee his way before him. I was fo amized at what I had feen and heard, that there I Roof as a thing immovable, speechles, and almost sensless staying somewhat too long, the Captain came out to look me, and found me in this posture staring up into the Skie; What's the matter man? faid he, what wonders dost thou fee there, shou dost fo gaze?! tell thee man, said he, this is no proper time nor place to take an observation, we are now at Land; buthe knew not what observation I had taken , if he had he would have spoiled the Inftrament if he conid.

Recollecting my felf, Your parden good Sir, faid I protest you drink too fmartly within, fo that ! was forc'd to come out to fuck in fome little airy tefremment. This shall not excuse you, quoth ke, therefore come along with me. Coming in he told the whole company in what a rediculous posture he found m: and did fo Romance upon it, that he made them all laugh. One while, faid be, he was telling the Clouds he faw, pleafing himfelf with the feveral monftrom Shapes they bore, though I could not fee one in all our Hemisphere. Then he turned his ear up to they firms ment, as if he were bearkening to the Sweet harms my of the Sphears, and in my confcience, if I had not prevented him, I had feen him madly dance by himfelf without one fir oke of Mulick. After this he turn'd hi eyes upwards again, and fixing them there awhile, the nine heavens or firmaments were fo transparent to is fight, that looking through them, he recounted their particular names to himfelf in order as they were pofited. He would have proceeded but that the company would not let him, for my own part he might have the ked til dooms-day without any interruption from me,

intó

?1

lace

the

he faid

at 1

te.

ke,

the ban

all

udi

tuo

nuc

na-

no-not felf his

is

cit

-00

百岁 6百

t he thoughts being wholly impleyed in fearthing out hereaning of what the youngman lately fpake to meod lobferved after his return, he could not or would cle look ence towards me as long as I flaid. That it to we parted fome flaying afhore, others going akord ; but I, knowing what bufines I had to do the har int morning, lay all night with one of the Pactors, time Toper, and one that I had been formerly merry with in London. I got up early and went to the place pointed, where I flaid not long e're I faw him whom expected advancing towards me, I arose to meet him, lowalking together we chose a place where we fate down, which was both convenient, and feerer for our perpole. As I was about to speak he prevented it, by alling me bale, faithlele, perjur'd man (I ftarting up, hid my hand on my Sword) Nay hold, Sir, faid he, hink not to expiate your offence by murdering the person against whom they were committed, so pulling of his Perriwig discovered some short red bair; do you how this colour, faid he, which once you told me you lov'd be wond any other? Here is the fame Dimple in the Chin, and Mole on the Lip, and the fame skin (Aripping open his doublet) which you have unresloubly prailed for its excelling whiteness , these were the flatteries you wied to delude a poor credulous maiden, whom you not onely fham'd but ruin'd. You cannot forget your matchless treachery in feducing neaboard a Virginia-fhip, in whom I was carry'd thither and fold, you hoping by that villany to have been for ever rid of me and mine.

how faw who the was (my fellow fervant when I has an Apprentice) and knowing what the faid to be a truth, lask'd her forgivens, acknowledging all my un-Worthyacis so her, and protested if the durft trut me once more I would make her amends for any

1

.

....

.

.

at which the smil'd (for she ever loved me too well to be angry with me) I taking hold of this advantage did so press her to a forgiveness, that she could not deny me, having seald it with a thousand kisses: and now dear Jane, said I, I have a longing defire to know how you spent your time in Virginia, and how you came hit her with this Captain; that I shall do briefly, she replyed.

THen I saw that you had so cruelly trappan'd I me, and that all your love was nothing but a deluding presence to enjoy what you could, and be fout of me afterwards as I fam you had done, I attempted to fline my Self into the Sea, but being prevented in that. I betook my felf to my Cabbin where for grief I lay the whole Voyage fo desperately ill that none had any hopes of my life, for my Child dying as I suppose for want of these that hould carefully looke after it. Arriving at Viteinia, and anchoring at Potomack River ; feweral Planters came aboard of us, and made a quick riddance of al the Passengers but my self, none offering a pipe of Tobaco for me, for I was grown fo weak I could not Band, and To lean that I was a meer skinful of bones. The Mafter feeing me in this condition, and judging I could not live two dayes to an end, commanded me to be carried after ta dye. A Planters wife that was very autient, fening me lie in that miferable and deplerable manner, took pity on me, and took me home to her house, where she proved fo. good a. Warfe to me shat every day I did femply a mend, being well, here was a great contest between the Husband of this good old woman, and the Mafter what Servant | Should be, a Suit was commenced, and upon try al the Master was cast be putting me a shore as usalis to bim, acquitted bimfelf of all future trouble with me being clear from him, my good Patron and Patrons ic.

W

W m¢

he

n'd

. of

M

be-role

my of 8

4

K.

ud

ler int

ore

M uty

ped

14

de

n)

el lifebarged me in open Court for having any thing to fay ume, for what necessaries they had provided for me du-22 my fickness, being now a free-woman I had a bunbed good matches offered me, all which ! refus'd; there nere some of the great ones too courted me for their lust (for I had now recovered my complexion, and my eyes had shaken off that dulness which had clog a the swiftness of their motion) but all these temptations prevailed not, the memory of you had soo large a power over my. heart than to yeild so any one elfe. But length of time be can by degres to extenuate that efteem I had of your fo that I did not behave my felf forefervedly as formerly ! bad, but affum'd a great deal of freedome. One day my. Mafter (as I now call him) coming to the house where I was (for his Ship then rode in the River not far off us) took fo great a likeing to me at the first fight, that as he he bath confels'd fince, be was never at quiet but when in my fociety : So that in a little time be had fo won upon my affections, that my carriage towards him Sufficiently, demonstrated bow dearly I loved bim. To conclude, be made a perfect conquest of me, and as the earnest of a perpetual tye, be fully enjoyed me, and promised marriage if I would go with him as foon as he came to Weymouth in the west of England, were stood his Habitation. I greedily [wallowed all bis per [wations (although one would have thought me more wary, having ben fo notorioufly cheated by you before,) ot be time coming when be would fee fail, I march'd down to his Ship with as many as would have compleated a Regiment which followed me, looking upon me as the most absolute mirror of Chastisy, which ever arrived in those parts, joyful I was to return to my native Country, and as glad was my overcomer in that be had obtained fo pretty a play fellow to pass away his time in his passage bomewards. In seven weeks wa came upon the coaft of England, and was by the firefs of whatha

1

t

1

. .

C

*

trons

weather put ime Plymonth found, were we rode with much difficulty between the Island and the Land. The third day after our anchoring there, the wind ceasing though the weather was somewhat thaty, he went aftere. and taking none with him but my felf, Coxfwain and his Crew. I wondred what he meant by it, my fond hopes prompted me to believe that here he would perform the promise be made me at Vinginia but I found my felf deceiv'd; for be difmift the boat after he bad fill'a their skins full of wine, and commanded them to wait upon bim in the morning. There being now none left but he and I together, Deareft, said he, be not troubled at what I hall tell you, and it fhall be never the worfe for you. I have a Wife and Children at Waymouth , although to gain my ends of you I pretended to have none : the is the most jealous woman in the world, and well she may, for the knows there is no woman in the Creation much more deform'd than her felf, wherefore this! would have you to do that I may continue your company ; you hall change your feminine habit for white is masculine, under which digwise you shall pals are voung man I have met with abroad, which for fancy's fake I have chofen to be my Companion in my Travels. I thought I should have funk into the Earth to hear bim make this new confident proposition to me after A many vowes and promifes to make me his wife, but ga: · ther ng courage, I flarted out of his hand and would have gone down flairs, but pulling me back, what faid I, areal my ex peltations come to this? must I be only your wasdring whore at last? have I left so many wealthy matches at Potemsck for this ? no, ! am in mine own Country, fin a place where I am not known & I will wash and som or a lively- hood rather than submit fo basely after so me my worthy proffers. Notwithstanding achousand resolu.

•

3

S

18

.

r

n

i

n

e

0 1

13

IC.

.

... r

14

10 10

d

Se.

25

7,

H

.

ıs

tions I had to leave birn; yet (uch was the subtlety of mans li infinuation that he made me unfay all that I bad faid. in less than half an hour ; and I agreed to every thing be would have me do. Leaving me at the Tavern be went immediately and bought a juste (which be quest would fitme) with Hatt, Shooes, Stockings, and whatever was requisite to cleath a young man sashionably, and brought them to me upon tryal, they exactly fitted me. Now betaufe we would not give any caufe of sufpition to the people of the house where we were in changing my habit, it was concluded on between us to walk out of the town fome where, he being well acquainted with all the places about the town, made choice of Cat-down, where in the cleft of an hollow rock I unchas'd, chrowing:my proper habit into the Sea, and alsbough it was formewhat immodest I was fore'd to beg his belp-in my new metamorphofis; be had procur'd me a very All-a-mode Perriwig but before that would fit me be must play the Barbar himfelf, which he did by cutting my hair off close to my bead. Being now slad with every thing requisite from top to toe, we made towards the town again, where entring the former boufe We were in, we drank and were very merry , having a noise of mufick, having supp'd one bed ferv'd us without suspition; in the morning came the boat for us with the doctor in her, who asked my Master very seriously for the Genthe woman, be replyed the bad kindred and friends in this place and that she resolv'd to stay with them a white; then he enquired what that young man was ; O. faid he, heis of my former acquaintance, who baving little to depend on here, is refulu'd to fee the world abread with me. Coming about dear Master need not make a repetition of what he had already faid, the Doctor did st for him : now did we fet fail fleering for Waymouth which we did reach in a listle time.

was entertain'd in his house wish much civility from from bis wife, and the servants observing what respect their Master show'd me paid me the like. There was seldom a day wherein he had me not to a Tavern, sometimes with company, but most commonly alone, and this life I led for fourteen moneths; at the expiration of which my Master being employed by some Merchants in a Voyage to East-India, took me along with him by which means we have the wonderful hap to see one another again.

My Jinny having ended her discourse, I endeavored to endear my self unto her withal the ontward demonstrations I could devise or imagine, protesting for the suture I would never violate my faith to her, that she and I would run our fortune, live together, and she dying I would voluntarily do so too to accompany her to the other world.

Fearing left I should detain her too long, and give her Mafter any cause of suspition, I disparch'd her sway, and foon after went aboard our own fhip, but before I went I appointed her to meet me there two days after. The Captain, my felf, and all that were concern'd, went roundly about our bufinels, for fince he had gone beyond the bounds of his commission, he will refelv'd not to return home with her, but convert Ship and goods to his own viert is fecret he acquainted me with, as knowing my ingenious rogue hip would be very helpful and affiftant to him in al his enterprizes; and that I might oblidge him to me in an absolute bond of friendship, I feem'd to make him my Cabinetcounsel in all my effairs, and did really inform him of the truth of the last Adventure, knowing I could not carry on my defign without his privity and help-

He did much wonder to hear me tell him that I had here also discovered another of my wenches in man's appareel, but his wonder turned into rejoyeing when I told him how this wench should enrich our stock by rebbing

end

robbing her or his pretended Mafter of his Gold and what elfe he had valuable, and could hardly reft to think how I would effect my defign. Fear nor, faid I. his Gold is all our own, therefore let us lay out or own as fast as we can, in the commodites of this place The Dutch thought we had the Devil and all of mony. to fee our woods come umbling in upon us fo faft, fo that with what goods we took in at Bantam, and what we receiv'd here, our thip wanted but little of her fal fraught.

È

7

re

ę.

he

11

119 de be es;

ate

et-

of pel

hed

14 n I

by ing

The time was come wherein I was to have another Mels of difceurie with my Jinny, who was punctual to her time, and there before me at the place appointed. And after feme few amorous ceremonies I feriously told her that it was my intent never to part with her during life, the answered that it was her delire, and that the would run any hazard to bear me company ; well, feid I, make your felt ready to go along with us, for we are refolv'd to fer fayl within thefe two dayes ! that I fhall (the faid) and know that I will not come with empty hands ; my love thall neither be burthenfeme to you, nor expensive; how prithee, how faid ! why thus, my pretended Mafter, as I have told you loves me dearly, expressing it in what ever way I de fire, and to let me fee how great a truft he dares impole upon me, and what confidence he hath of my fidelicy, I have the key of his Cheft wherein is contain'e I headred Jacobule's, belides a box of rough diamond With other stones of price, all which, or as much s lean carry off handsomely will I bring to the, so mue efficacy bath my first Lover over me that I could for tontent to undo all the rest to raise thee. I told her the motion was very fuitable to our prefent af fair, and that it was the best and easiest course h sould propound for our happy living hereaften and that when he faw any white thing hanging in our Abrowd the should then fall to her work, which should be the token of our being all ready; which the could e stily do at any time, for the Captain being almost continually a faore and fhe with him, it was but waiting for the boat (upon the fign given) which at her command would carry her aboard and bring her with the leaft word ashore. Moreover that having got the prize, the should presently make down to the Today. trees, over against which we lay at Anchor, and upon the lignal of a Handherchief, we would fend our boat inftantly ashore to receive her. All which according to instruction was exactly perform'd, the Captain whom the requited in this manner for all his love being at that time dead drunk by an invitation of the Factors of Surrat.

Having got my double Treasure aboard, and what lading we desir'd, our Hold shut up, our Anchors weigh'd, and our Canvas spread, away we sail'd ove the Bar, with an hundred shot after us, for our Country-men as well as Hollanders, concluded there must be some damn'd inexpressible Treachery in this our suddain sailing, neither giving notice some days before, or fairly taking our leaves by fireing of Guns according to Custom; besides they knew we had not taken in our full Lading. Let them sire their hearts out we valued them not, in derision we fired a Gun at stern, and so stood to the Southwards.

I knew very well this female confident of mine would effectually do the business we had plotted to gether, and so to divert my self and make sport with the Captain of the discovery of my Rival, I wrot some few Lines and nail'd them on a Toddy-tree on the shore directed to the said Captain, which I knew would be discovered by some or other, and carried to him the merses were as follow.

C

rŝ

K

1 ft

10

e, den

WE

m,

Sai

to.

at ore be che

H

Noble Captain.

'Twas a close plot y' faith, but 'twould not hide From me your wench, which should have bin my Bride? You chang'd her Garb but could not change her face : Nor shange her heart, where once I had a place Nere thence to be romov'd although the how'd Some love to you, the Debt to me fhe ow'd. Love was a stranger to ber till i came, Whom feeing lov'd, and loving lost her fame. Sated with her delights, I basely prov'd Th' ingrate that leath'd, what I should still have lov'd. I turn'd ber off, well might the then perpl x Herfelf, and curfe th' inconftance of our Sex. Tobe reveng'd, with me fhe did confer, To do her right on those that wronged ber. I was the fir &, but me fhe did for give, Because as one, we must together live. You were the next, whose crimes are manyfold, Tet bave fued out your parden with your Gold : Tour subtle Wheedlings cheated her belief. And would have filch'd ber beart to play the Thief. Tou stole into her Secrets, so that she May at Loves bar charge you with Felony. For thus purloyning, stealing bearts away, And being eaught you now shall soundly pay. She vows to me, she'l spare you not a bis, But keep intire the Purchale of her Wit. What Protestations, and what Oaths you made, Were broke by you as soon as they were said. Tour great pretences and your bouncing Stories; The idle flashings of your fancy'd glorses; All which the munds not, fince the bath requir'd ATreasure which fo long we both desir'd.

Now we are now almost quits (against your will)
This is the Sum that must discharge our Bill:
Imprimite so much; lying by her side,
And breaking promise, made her not your Bride.
Item for changing Petty-coars for Hose,
And doing something, which I wont disclose.
Item for making such a presty toy,
Iour wanton Mittris, and your Cabbin-boy;
Whom Morning, Noon, and sometimes very late,
Fail'd not to make your constant Trickry mate.
Thus stands th' Account, and now we're even just,
Discharing you of what we did intrust,
If not quite broke, for some new Gredit look,
You no re shall enter more into our Book.

I shall not trouble you with the particulars of an exact Journal of our voyage from Surrat till we came to Venice, to which part we were bound, but only give you fome light touches by the way.

The last day of April we cross'd the Aquator, and the first of May made a new way by judgement, and by observation our way was four Leagues to the South-wards, having arowling Sea out of the Souther board. The fourth of June in the motning we faw the Ifland Mauritius and a little after three or four fmil Illands appeared a fo ; we food in betwixt Mauritian and these Islands, and when we were thwart the point of Rocks which lye on Mauritius fide, we edg'd off towards the Island, giving that point and breaths good birth; our depth was twenty, and two and twenty fathom hard ground, and being within one mile of the westermost rock, we had twenty four fathom, the wind being at louth eaft, we left into the fiort about a mile diftant from it we anchored that night. Here we rode near ten days, refreshing our felves with what the Island afforded, as Goats, Hogs, and freh

18

2 d

d

he et he

1

83 nt

f

1

nd

ne fa-

330

k.

ith

eh

ih

found

fifh good ftore. It is reported here are many fifh rank poylon, we did eat all forts, as Mullets, Lantarasks Whiskers, Rock ish and Garfish, and many others, bur found no harm by feeding on them. We fet fail hence and about 28 Leagues diffance from Mauritius, we pass'd by an Island call'd the Moschachenas, near which we forung a leak, that each hour we pumpt above two hundred and fifty ftrokes, it being gusty whether and a great Sez out of the South eaft, but by our Carpenters it was happily Ropt, although it was under the next timber abaft the well near the Keel which by rummidging the Hold they found it fo to be. The next place we anchored at was the Island of Fohanna, here we had much lightning and thunder, the wind having been out of the Sea in the day, and off here in the night. This place affordeth very good fleth great quantity of fifth and fowl, we had a Bullock for ten long red Cornelion heads; we had alle excellent Oranges and Lemmons, the people are very loving and friendly, having two Governours or Captains among them, the one call'd Androm Pela, and the other Maffe Core, they defired of us no other money for ought we bought than those read heads. Sailing from hence we fpinng our main top-maft, which our Carpenters taking down fisht it and got it up again the have day. On the third of September in latitude 16.d. 33 the wind at South east, we saw the Island of St. Helena to the west ward of the Chappel thereof, we anchored a mile distant, the Captain caused the skiff to be hoisted out and so my Jinny, the Scrivener, Drugfter, and Doctor &c. we landed at Lemmonvalley. Here with some Guns we carried with us we kill'd Hogs and Goats, otherwise it is hard to take them, running at the light of us up in accessible crag-By Rocks. In ranging through the Ille, our men found divers Oranges and Lemmon-trees but no fruit thereon, the Dutch having been there as we suppose, had gathered them, as appeared by their names on certain Stones and Trees, we caught here Mack-rel, Breams and Borettoes good flore.

122

Paet 3.

FINIS.

To the Reader instead of the Errata.

The Author hath his faults the Pringer too
All men whilf here do err, and so do you.

A Nd therefore Reader pardon the Printer, who promises amendment; and I hope thy acceptance of this and the fourth part already published, will induce me to finish this. Story with a fifth & last part. In the mean time the Author of this hath lately writen Printed and Published another Book emitled.

The Unlucky Citizen, experimentially described in the various misfortunes of an Uniucky Londoner. Calculated for the Aleridian of this City: but may serve by way of advice to all the Comonality of England. More particularly to Parents and Children, Masters and Servants, Husbands and Wives. Intermexed with several Choice Novels. Stored with variety of Examples and advice president and precept. Illustrated with Picture fitted to the several Stories.

And let me assure thee Reader that no more is promise in the Title than is personmed in the Book for it not only equals this in relating variety of pleasant extravages cies and other Novels but it is prositable in the many respectively and good advice given to the Reader, and is intended to be prosecuted in a second part wherein you had have not only real and true examples and experience, but also as good and sound advice as can be collected from any Book either Niorall or Divine which this age but produced. Therefore despise it not because of the United Title for it is or will be worthy of thy perusall.

E

ME

With

Printe